Tornado Rips Charleston; Score Killed, Militia Called

$2,000,000 Damage Landmarks Ruined Hundreds Injured Federal Aid Asked

Ben Bane Dulaney, day city editor of The Washington Post, was in Charleston, S. C., on his honeymoon when yesterday's tornado struck that historic city. He filed the following story to his paper as soon as the wires were open.

By Ben Bane Dulaney.

Charleston, S. C., Sept. 29.—Fire sirens gave me first notice that something was wrong. Then came a roar like the sound of coal rumbling down a monstrous chute.

I looked from my open window and saw the stately spire of old St. Michael's Church engulfed in a black dervish which swirled huge timbers, pieces of roofing and debris from the harbor against the black sky.

Before I could close the window, the wind had howled across three blocks, leveled whole buildings as a child defeats armies of tin soldiers, and hurled automobiles into store fronts. A man, helpless in that great blast of nature's wrath, was blown across a street under my eyes.

No Time to Run

There was no time to run, no time to think of running. In front of my window a tin garage building went down on a dozen cars. Then, inexplicably, the tornado hopscotched the hotel, leaving not a single broken window.

It lasted 10 seconds and did $2,000,000 damage. It killed at least 24 persons and injured hundreds more. Sweeping in from the harbor across Charleston's historic battery, it laid waste to the "old" section of town whose winding streets and picturesque houses are the center of tourist interest. That the loss of life was not greater was truly miraculous.

The worst blow—there were three of them—came at 7:52 a. m. Market buildings and shipping offices, later to be crowded with workers, were yet largely empty, and huge beams crashed into empty stores. A heavy all-night rain had kept the streets clear. Power was off in the city all day. Most telephone wires were down. A lone operator strove frantically to handle emergency calls through a single open trunk. Telegraph companies were snowed under. The Charleston Evening Post did not publish.

Hospital Is Jammed

Roper Hospital was jammed. The seriously injured were crowding in with those who merely had had causes of fright. All available doctors were asked to report to the hospital, where more than 300 were treated for injuries, mostly received from flying debris. Students from the Medical College of South Caro-

Arnold Named U. S. Air Chief By Roosevelt

Col. Sultan Brigadier 9 Generals Appointed Colonels Advanced

Reaching far down the list of eligibles for comparatively young officers, President Roosevelt yesterday selected a new Army Air Corps chief and nine other new major or brigadier generals.

Brig. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, pioneer military aviator, who is 52, was named to head the Air Corps for four years.

Upon recommendation of Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring, Col. Dan I. Sultan, until recently District Commissioner, and Col. Jonathan M. Wainwright, commander of the Third Cavalry, Fort Myer, Va., were promoted to brigadier generals of the line, while Col. Walter G. Kilner, chief of staff, General Headquarters Air Force, Langley Field, Va., also was advanced to brigadier general and assigned to duty here as assistant to Gen. Arnold.

Promoted to major general of the line were Brig. Gen. William H. Wilson, commander of the First Coast Artillery District, Boston, Mass., and Brig. Gen. Robert McC. Beck, jr., assistant chief of staff for operations and training.

Colonels Advanced

Other officers advanced to brigadier general of the line were Col. Edmund L. Daley, division engineer, North Atlantic Division, New York City; Col. Adna R. Chaffee, who recently completed a tour of duty here with the budget and legislative branch of the War Depart-

Suspect Held In 4-Year-Old D. C. Murder

Sheads Case Reopened Man Seized in N. J. May Have Seen Crime

Reopening of one of the District's most baffling murder cases, unsolved for four years, followed the arrest yesterday in Hackensack, N. J., of Ferdinand Hopp, 50, who gave Bergen County police information leading them to believe he could shed light on the killing of Miss Mary E. Sheads, 65, retired Washington school teacher.

Detective Sergts. Jeremiah Flaherty and Aubrey M. Tolson left here immediately or the New Jersey city to question Hopp. He is held there on charges of criminal assault.

Miss Sheads was found strangled May 25, 1934, in her apartment at 2000 Sixteenth street northwest, her body bearing evidence of a sharp struggle with her assailant. Analysis of skin particles found under her fingernails was believed to establish the murderer as a colored man.

Police believed she had surprised the man looting her apartment.

Hackensack officials indicated to District police that Hopp, now a resident of Riverdale, N. J., may have been a witness to the crime, but not directly implicated.

Arnold Opens Trust Suit Parleys With Film Men

Thurman W. Arnold, Assistant Attorney General, has opened a series of conferences with motion picture company executives to discuss the Justice Department's anti-trust suit against the picture industry.

The Government's petition, filed in the New York Federal District Court last July, asks that production and distribution of motion pictures be divorced from ownership and operation of theaters, to prevent monopolistic practices.

Among those at the first meeting were William Mallark, of Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corporation; Austin Keogh, of Paramount Pictures, Inc.; J. Robert Rubin, of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; Robert Perkins, of Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.; Ralph Harris and John Caskey, of Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation, and Paul Williams, a special assistant to Attorney General Cummings.

Storm Heading North to Miss D. C.

Northeast storm warnings were ordered flown last night from the Virginia Capes to Eastport, Me., in the track of a storm moving northeastward from North Carolina.

This disturbance, in conjunction with a high pressure area over New England, the Weather Bureau said, would probably cause heavy northeast winds, or east winds which might reach gale force along the coast today.

Weather officials saw no possibility the storm would hit Washington, except to bring slightly cooler temperatures, and some rain today. The forecast for tomorrow was generally fair and warmer.

James Roosevelt Leaves Hospital

Rochester, Minn., Sept. 29 (AP).—Slightly pale, but cheerful and smiling, James Roosevelt, son and personal secretary of the President, left St. Mary's Hospital here today for the home of a Rochester friend. Convalescing after an operation at the Mayo Clinic September 11 for a gastric ulcer, he planned to remain in Rochester for a week before leaving for California.

Schmeling Knocks Out Income Tax Charge

Max Schmeling won a bout with the income tax collector yesterday. The Board of Tax Appeals refused to sustain a finding of the internal revenue commissioner that the former world heavyweight champion owed taxes, penalty and interest totaling $3,458 for 1930.

G.O.P. Picks Dewey for Governor

Nomination Accepted Choice Is Unanimous Won't Quit Crime War Rest of Slate Debated

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Sept. 29.—Thomas E. Dewey, youthful district attorney of New oYrk County, accepted the nomination for Governor tonight before a Republican State convention that had named him with uproarious enthusiasm seven hours before.

In his acceptance speech Dewey pledged himself to continue the war on crime with the wider powers of the Governor's office, and gave assurance that he would leave an efficient staff in the district attorney's office to deal with New York City's crime and racket problems.

Two great demonstrations, the first when he was placed in nomination by former Supreme Court Justice William F. Bleakley and the second when he came into the convention hall tonight, gave eloquent testimony to the faith which the Republican Party has placed in Dewey's leadership. Rarely in New York's political history have conventions been stirred with such enthusiasm.

Chosen by Acclamation

Nominated by acclamation this morning after a half hour demonstration that included a parade along Broadway, Dewey came to Saratoga Springs late this afternoon and conferred for two hours with the leaders who are trying to work out a satisfactory supporting ticket.

That ticket was still in doubt as the convention recessed at 8 p. m., but tentative agreement rad been reached, with Dewey's approval, on the following slate:

Lieutenant governor—State Senator Frederick H. Bontecou, of Dutchess County.

Attorney general—Col. Arthur V. McDemott, deputy commissione of welfae, New York City.

Sontroller—Julius Rothstein, of Utica.

United States Senate, short term—Edward F. Corsi, New York City.

Representative-at-large— Richard B. Scandrett, of Orange County, and Mrs. Helen Z. M. Rodgers, of Buffalo.

Gannett Considered

For the full Sentae terms, four names were unde consideation, Paul Shipman Andews, dean of the University of Syracuse law schools; John Lord O'Brien, of Buffalo; Harold B. Johnston, publisher, of Watertown, and Frank E. Gannett, publisher, of Rochester.

As the convention prepared to resume its delibertaions later in the night, a fight on the floor was in prospect over the nomination for lieutenant governor in behalf of Thomas Bodeick, of Rocheste.

Fairfax Police, Dogs Comb Woods For Murderer

Virginia State troopers and Fairfax County police, with bloodhounds from Lorton Reformatory, last night were searching woods, and fields near Gum Springs, Va., for a colored man wanted in North Carolina for murder.

Asked to arrest William Young, 26, Sergt. E. J. McDermott, of the State police, went to a home near Gum Springs where the man was believed to be staying. He was told Young had left a few minutes before.

With the help of county police and the bloodhounds, Sergt. McDermott set out to trail his man through the swamps and woods surrounding the place. It is 6 miles south of Alexandria, near the open air theater.

Sleeping Sickness Traced To Horses in Mass. Epidemic

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 29.—The Rockefeller Institute today announced an outbreak of human sleeping sickness now going on in southwestern Massachusetts has been traced to horses.

This is the first time horses have been definitely implicated as causes of human encephalitis. The horses in southwestern Massachusetts have been dying of encephalomyelitis, a well-known animal disease, resembling human sleeping sickness, but not heretofore known to be the same.

The horse disease is caused by a virus of the same kind found in the brains of five children who died of sleeping sickness in the disease area.

The report is made in the publication Science by Leslie T. Webster and F. Howell Wright. Medical men here commented the discovery is of "tremendous importance." Viruses are the known cause not only of human sleeping sickness, but of other serious diseases and of epidemic flu.

These viruses virtually disappear in the intervals between the human epidemics. Medical scientists have been trying to find the hiding places, with the idea they could prevent renewed epidemics. The sleeping sickness discovery is evidence a virus can modify its form and hide among the animals.

Previous evidence of the same sort has been found by the Rockefeller Institute to show the flu virus hides in swine.

Teschen Fight Grows Ultimatum Stands Deadline Tomorrow Regulars on Move

By the United Press.

Teschen, Polish - Czechoslovak Frontier, Sept. 29.—Fighting along the frontier increased tonight, bringing to 150 the toll of Polish lives lost in guerrilla warfare, as the deadline approached in Poland's ultimatum to Czechoslovakia for surrender of the Teschen area.

The Polish government has warned Prague that unless the 600-mile-square Teschen region is evacuated before Saturday morning the Polish army will "march in and take it."

Poland has 1,600,000 troops under arms and heavy troop movements toward the frontier were reported as the hour for expiration of the ultimatum neared. Troop and supply convoys and trains were said to be clogging highways and impeding railroad traffic in western Poland.

Spurn Munich Peace

Government officials insisted the four-power peace plan worked out at Munich, which provides for Polish and Hungarian plebiscites in Czechoslovakia, would not be permitted to interfere with the demands of the Polish ultimatum.

Discussing the Munich developments, officials said Poland refuses to be bound by any agreement reached without her participation.

"If there is to be an integral solution of the Central European problem and if new guarantees of the new boundaries of Czechoslovakia are to be given, it is impossible to count on Poland's guarantee as long as Polish interests are not upheld," a spokesman said.

More than 400 Polish families fled across the river border line of Teschen, which straddles the frontier, and reached Polish soil during the day. Many of them carried gas masks in fear of Czech or perhaps Soviet Russian air raids as they fled on into the interior.

The bloodiest clash of the day occurred in the steel mill town of Wickowice, where members of the Polish minority fought a running battle with members of the Czech "people's guard."

Rioting and Bombing

Refugees from Karwinas reported rioting there. Two Czech guards were killed at Teschek, and at Ropica, Polish civilians were said to have blown up a Czech customs post. Five Czech customs guards were reported killed at Trziouiec.

Government officials said President Benes of Czechoslovakia still has an opportunity to submit to the Polish note of last week demanding annexation of Teschen Silesia, which holds the bulk of the Polish minority of 82,000 under Prague's rule.

Large numbers of Polish military and government officials arrived here tonight from Warsaw, ready to take over immediate control of the Teschen belt which they claim was "taken behind Poland's back" in January, 1919, while Polish troops were beating off a Bolshevik invasion from the east.

The Teschen area is said by Polish officials to be inhabited 75 per cent by Poles. Prior to the World War it, like most of the Sudeten German areas, formed part of the Austro-Hungarian Empire. After the collapse of Austria the Poles and Czechs agreed, on November 3, 1918 to a temporary frontier.

Before the frontier was definitely fixed Czech troops allegedly "stole the area without awaiting a decision of the Paris peace conference.

Summary of Historic Terms Partitioning Czechoslovakia

Copyright, by the Associated Press.

Over the conference table in Munich yesterday it was decided that lands would be ceded to Germany as indicated above between broken and solid line, this area to be taken over immediately. Black areas inside the new Czechoslovak boundaries indicate where plebiscites probably will be held later.

The agreement concerning the partitioning of Czechoslovakia, signed by the heads of Western Europe's four major powers in an effort to prevent a general war, provided for gradual occupation of parts of Czechoslovakia's Sudeten areas, starting Saturday, the deadline Reichsfuehrer Hitler set for acceptance in his ultimatum.

The evacuation is to be completed by October 10 without damage to existing property. An international commission of representatives of the four powers, the United Kingdom, France, Germany and Italy, together with Czechoslovakia will arrange details of the evacuation.

Plebiscites are to be held, not later than the end of November, in other Czechoslovakian areas having German population. Residents are to have the option to move into or out of the areas ceded to Germany. The International Commission will determine the plebiscite areas and these, in the meantime, are to be occupied by international bodies.

If agreement is not reached within three months on the question of Hungarian and Polish minorities in Czechoslovakia the four powers will confer again to settle that question.

Britain and France agreed to join an international guarantee of new Czechoslovak boundaries as provided in the original Anglo-French partition plan.

Germany and Italy agreed to give guarantees to Czechoslovakia against unprovoked agression when the Hungarian and Polish minority questions are settled.

Czechoslovakia must release within four weeks all Sudeten Germans, who so desire, from military and police forces and Sudeten political prisoners are to be liberated within that same period.

Ugaki Resigns In Feud With Japan's Army

Gives Up Foreign Office Disputed Rule in China Planes Bomb Yunnanfu

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, Sept. 29.—Gen. Kazushige Ugaki resigned tonight as foreign and overseas minister following upon a month's conflict over the extent to which the army and navy should control affairs in China in the future.

His special advisers, former Foreign Ministers Hachiro Arita and Naotake Sato, also resigned.

Government officials said there would be no change in Japan's foreign policy.

Fought Army Faction

The cabinet will meet tomorrow when Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye was expected to take over the foreign affairs portfolio until a successor to Gen. Ugaki could be named.

The 70-year-old Ugaki is known as a liberal and long has been at odds with the dominant faction in the army over the general lines of imperial policy.

He succeeded Koki Hirota as foreign minister last May 26 in a cabinet shakeup interpreted at the time as designed to rally all actions behind efforts to win an early victory in China.

Arita and Sato, his advisers, advocated moderation toward China when each held the foreign affairs portolio before the outbreak of the Chinese-Japanese conflict on July 7, 1937.

Ugaki's resignation was believed due to differences with the Army

President Asks Nation to Pray For Peace

Devotion Set for Sunday Responds to Clergymen He'll Worship Here

By Sidney Olson.

A Nation will go to its knees Sunday morning to offer a thankful prayer that the world is not at war.

Hundreds of telegrams from the country's clergymen came yesterday to the White House asking the President to set aside Sunday as a day of prayer.

President Roosevelt said he did not feel that he should issue a special proclamation. Instead, he decided simply to ask the people to pray on that day "for the continued peace of the world."

The first family of the land will make their devotions at St. Thomas' Episcopal Church unless the President journeys over the week-end to Hyde Park.

Thus, while political bitterness and bickering is momentarily submerged in national gratitude that the fever of another world crisis is fading, the devout folks of the land will whisper their prayers that the present peace will never be broken by the thudding tramp of the boots of men marching without hope and without reason to death.

Germans Take Borderline Area Tomorrow International Force to Guard Other Regions Plebiscite in Interior Before Nov. 30 Acceptance by Prague Regarded as Certain

By Edward W. Beattie, jr.

Copyright, 1938, by the United Press.

Munich (Friday), Sept. 30.—Britain, France, Germany and Italy early today signed a compromise agreement for surrender of Czechoslovakia's strife-torn Sudeten areas to Germany without bloodshed.

The agreement of the "Big Four," racing against time to head off a general war, came only 24 hours before the October 1 "zero hour" fixed by Adolf Hitler for an invasion of the Sudetenland.

Germany's occupation of the Sudeten areas with a "token force" of Nazi troops will begin Saturday—the day that millions had looked forward to with fright as the day of war—and must be completed by October 10.

Announcement of the signing of the agreement was made by Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain at 12:30 a. m. as he emerged, weary but smiling, from the brownstone Fuehrerhaus where the four statesmen had worked through the day and most of the night.

Peace Now Up to Czechs

Arrangements were made to dispatch the plan to the Czechoslovak government in Prague before dawn.

Thus the decision of peace or war no longer rests with Hitler, but is up to President Benes and the Czech government.

The conferees of the four western powers—Hitler, Chamberlain, Premier Mussolini of Italy and Premier Daladier of France—were confident that Czechoslovakia would be prevailed upon to accept the decisions.

Britain and France will be able to tell Prague that, in the nine hours of historic consultation here, they have prevailed upon Hitler to modulate his warlike demands and ultimatums and compromise in the plan of peaceful settlement.

Mussolini, who played a major role in bringing about the eleventh-hour escape from a war that threatened the lives of millions, left for home immediately after the conference, aboard his special train. Chamberlain and Daladier planned to fly back to Paris and London today to report to their cabinets.

Details of Compromise

The compromise plan provides:

The evacuation of the predominantly Sudeten German regions of Czechoslovakia will begin Saturday and must be completed within 10 days, meaning their occupation by German forces.

The agreement is among Germany, Britain, France and Italy and Czechoslovakia is not included in it.

The Czechs must evacuate the regions without destroying any property, including factories, railroad lines and communications lines. The Czech government is "held responsible for the evacuation without damage to the installations."

The conditions and terms of the evacuation will be laid down in detail by an international commission to be composed of representatives of the four powers whose leaders met here yesterday and tonight, with Czechoslovakia represented.

The occupation of the Sudetenland by German troops will begin will begin Saturday "in easy stages" but will occur only in the predominantly German areas near the frontier where members of the Sudeten minority comprise virtually the entire population.

The territorial claims of the Hungarian and Polish minorities in Czechoslovakia—82,000 Poles and 419,000 Magyars—must be satisfactorily settled within three months by agreement between the affected governments, otherwise the "big four" will be called into conference again to lay down some solution.

After the German occupation of border areas of Czechoslovakia an international commission will be sent to Czechoslovakia to determine the other areas demanded by Hitler for the German Reich and arrange plebiscites in these districts.

These districts of smaller German population, many of them considerably inland, will be occupied by "international bodies" until the plebiscites are completed.

The Czech government must, within four weeks, release from military and police service any members of the Sudeten German minority of 3,500,000 who wish such release.

Czechoslovakia must also immediately release all Sudeten political prisoners.

Agreement After Midnight

Chamberlain and Daladier left the Brownstown Fuehrerhaus together at 12:35 a. m., and Hitler and Mussolini departed together a few moments later.

Mussolini left Munich by train at 1:55 a. m., accompanied by his son-in-law and Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano. Hitler and Field Marshal Goering made him a warm farewell at the railroad station to the accompaniment of surging cries of "Heil!" from the Bavarian crowd.

The actual signing of the agreement came at 12:35 a. m.

Hitler Yields One Point

The plan was said to be subject to alterations but its main points were understood to have been agreed upon by British Prime Minister Chamberlain, French Premier Daladier, the German Dictator and Italian Premier Mussolini—gathered around the table in the Fuehrerhaus.

Hitler, it was said, agreed during the late afternoon to surrender of his demand for immediate occupation by German troops of all the Sudeten districts which he claims for the Reich.

This concession overcame one of the major stumbling blocks of the negotiations—Czechoslovakia's refusal to give up her border fortifications.

A German spokesman said the German "token" occupation of the predominantly-German borderlands, which include the towns of Asch and Eger, will be completed in easy stages before October 10.

In the Sudeten zones farther in the Czech interior plebiscites will then be held under international control.

The spokesman confirmed the agreement provided for subsequent

Wallace Opens Drive to Keep Farm Backing

Faces Spreading Unrest AAA Policies Under Fire Speech Made in Kansas

By Robert C. Albright.

Faced with spreading unrest over run-away surpluses and crumbling prices, the Administration yesterday opened an intensive campaign to hold farmer support for AAA policies, now under attack.

A plea for continuance of the program, buttressed by processing taxes and price parity guarantees, was carried to midwest wheat farmers by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace.

Wallace told farm leaders at Hutchinson, Kansas, to "fight for the program that you have." Today he will continue the defense drive before surplus-depressed cotton growers in Fort Worth, Tex., and on October 14 will speak to corn farmers at Springfield, Ill.

Prefers U. S. Monopoly

Wallace warned against cost-of-production price-fixing plans advanced in the last Congress, which he said would "soak the consumer, sink the farmer" and mean uncontrolled production. He said it would be "preferable" to have a Government monopoly of the grain business, fixing prices on domestic sales and selling surpluses abroad.

Against both of these alternatives, he committed himself for the first time to a return to the invalidated processing tax as "the surest way for wheat farmers to get their fair share of the national income."

As Wallace was speaking in Kansas, Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, predicted revision of the entire farm program next session because "it hasn't worked" and demanded an "11-cent plus" loan to cotton farmers, in lieu of the 8 cents now sanctioned.

Meeting Set on Cotton

Smith, who won South Carolina's renomination over Administration efforts to purge him, will meet today with seven others, Senators from cotton growing sections to frame new aid proposals for cotton growers now buried under an August 1 carry-over of 13,400,000 bales.

He will urge colleagues to demand that the AAA boost the cotton loan rate to the 75-per-cent-of-parity maximum allowe dunder the farm act. Invited to today's conference are Senators George and Russell, of Georgia; Senators Harrison and Bilbo, of Mississippi; Senator Reynolds, of North Carolina; Senator Thomas, of Oklahoma; and Senator Clark, of Missouri.

Secretary Wallace's appeal to wheat farmers, to be followed by speeches to cotton and corn producers, will concentrate on the Nation's three basic corp problems now threatening farm revolt in many sections, with political repercussions in November.

Price Dragged Down

The near-record 940,000,000 bushel wheat crop, with a 300,000,000 carry-over in prospect next July, already has dragged the farm price of wheat down to 50 cents on the farm, against $1.25 two years ago. Despite record surpluses abroad the Administration is attempting to subsidize foreign export of 100,000,000 bushels. Only 30,000,000 bushels of wheat and flour have been exported, including 10,000,000 under the new subsidy policy.

Defending AAA wheat policies against critics who he said "want the Nation to go back to the heartless method of 1932," Wallace yesterday outlined every link in the program, soil conservation, acreage allotments, wheat loans, marketing quotas (now in use only by cotton and tobacco growers), crop insurance and surplus removal.

He called control of production and parity payments the "two strong legs" of the program and described the other measures as "arms."

He said "we are quite possibly headed for even lower prices if the present farm program is cast aside."

Program "Buttressed"

But Wallace said the program must be "buttressed." He proposed return to processing taxes and "the method that was in effect for two and a half years previous to the Hoesac Mills decision of the Supreme Court in 1936."

"Why not use this kind of a tax once more to finance the parity payments for which the new act provides?" he said. "We know it will work because it has worked. To processors and handlers, I would point out that the bother of collecting the tax from the consumer and paying it to the Government would be as nothing compared with the regimentation they would get under almost any price-fixing scheme."

If price-fixing methods must be adopted, Wallace said, he preferred purchasing at a fixed price all wheat produced on acreage allotments by co-operating farmers, and selling certain portions of this to domestic consumers at a price that would get back the Government outlay. Non-co-operators would be taxed out of competition, and the surplus would be marketed abroad. Wallace admitted this would mean a virtual Government wheat monopoly of the grain business. He said he was "not advocating this" but it was more workable than other price-fixing proposals.

Smith Opposes Idea

Senator Smith, who is chairman of the Senate Agriculture Committee, said flatly he is opposed to return of processing taxes, "or any plan to tax one part of society for the benefit of another." He said he was equally opposed to a Government wheat monopoly. The South Carolina Senator said he is interested now chiefly in additional loan aid for cotton farmers, but predicted farm legislation will have to be substantially revised next session. He said he will introduce a bill of his own, "the basic idea o which will be to give farmers a guaranteed price or all they produce, figured on what they have to pay for the commodities they use." He said he would "let the farmers decide whether they want to reduce acreage or not."

Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, who Wednesday attacked cotton farm policies as "an absolute failure" and proposed exchange of surplus cotton for foreign silver, financed by certificates issued against the silver, also was invited to today's cotton conference. Smith said the Pittman proposal "is a magnificent idea if it can be shown to be feasible."

Clark Sees Senate Backing New Roosevelt Reorganization Plans if They're Specific

By the Associated Press.

Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, suggested yesterday President Roosevelt submit to the next Congress specific recommendations for Government reorganization instead of asking broad discretionary powers to make the changes, as he did last session.

SEN. CLARK.

"I don't believe Congress will be in any mood to give the President a blank check on reorganization," Clark said. "If he will submit recommendations for specific consolidations and changes, however, I think most of them would be approved."

The Senate approved the Administration's reorganization program at the last session, but it died in the House. Clark, one of the bill's foes in the Senate, predicted that body would not approve a similar measure next year.

The Missourian said he based his prediction on the fact that at least seven of the Democratic Senators who voted for the bill—Berry, of Tennessee; Dietrich, of Illinois; Hitchcock, of South Dakota; Milton, of New Jersey, McAdoo, of California; Pope, of Idaho, and Reames, of Oregon—will not be back next year, either because of voluntary retirement or primary election defeats. Opponents thus far have lost only one of their number, through the death of Senator Copeland (Democrat), New York.

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—Mayor LaGuardia, a member of the American Labor Party, announced today he intended to support Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, for re-election.

In a telegram to City Treasurer Almerindo Portfolio, who is a delegate to the Republican State convention at Saratoga Springs, the mayor said:

"In reference to our talk the other day, in order to avoid any misunderstanding or disappointment later on, I want to again remind you that I expect to support Senator Robert F. Wagner for re-election."

Important political decisions are expected to be reached in the course of current conferences being held by John L. Lewis, chairman, and other officials of the Committee for Industrial Organization.

In addition to settlement of the internal dispute in the United Automobile Workers Union, a C. I. O. affiliate, and fixing the date and place for the first general C. I. O. convention this fall, the labor leaders are expected to determine their joint stand in the elections in numerous States.

The C. I. O. has already declared war on all members of the House who voted to recommit the President's reorganization bill, and on Rules Committee members who refused right-of-way at the last session for the Lewis-sponsored amendments to the Walsh-Healey act requiring maintenance of wage and hours standards on Government contracts involving $10,000 or more.

C. I. O. forces have been jubilant over primary defeats of Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), New York and Gov. Charles F. Hurley (Democrat), Massachusetts, both of whom the organization fought unrelentlessly.

'Arrangement' Denied Prober Defended Kuhn Attacked

The testimony presented to special House committee investigating un-American activities served yesterday to provoke a sharp clash between the German Embassy here and Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, chairman of the committee.

Both sides acted after John C. Metcalfe, committee agent who joined a German-American Bund under an assumed name to investigate the organization, told the committee:

"Fritz Kuhn (leader of the German-American Bunds) informed this investigator when the latter was disguised as a storm trooper, that not only did he have power over the ambasssador and consular set-up in the United States but that he had a special arrangement directly with Adolf Hitler of Germany. Kuhn has repeated this same statement to others and indicated the arrangement included a secret relationship between the Bund organization and Dr. Hans Heinrich Dieckhoff, present German ambassador to the United States.

Brings Quick Denial

Report of the charges brought quick denial from Dr. Hans Thomsen, counselor of the German Embassy, who said:

* * * *

"Mr. Metcalfe became a member of the German-American Bund under an assumed name and then wrote a series of newspaper articles. Then he was picked up by the House Un-American Activities Investigating Committee. If Mr. Dies wants to get the real truth why doesn't he cite Mr. Kuhn as a witness. His failure to do that seems to me to mean that he doesn't think much of Mr. Metcalfe's testimony himself.

"Personally I hold no brief for Mr. Kuhn, but I know he said no such thing."

When Dr. Thomsen's statement was called to the attention of Representative Dies he immediately went to the defense of the committee investigator.

"It seems strange," Dies said, "the German Embassy should ask us to get our information from a man who has been absolutely proven to have ordered the Bund posts throughout the country to destroy all evidence that might be called before this Congressional committee."

Quoted Special Arrangement

The incident, marking the first in which the German Embassy has been brought into the inquiry and Chairman Dies' comment forecast further discussions of the charges when Metcalfe resumes the committee stand tomorrow.

In his testimony today Metcalfe said Kuhn's statement of the Bund's relations with the German diplomatic corps took place in Kuhn's headquarters in New York City, August 16, 1937.

The Gallup Poll

Americans Believe Reich Couldn't Hold Out Economically in War With the Allies

By Dr. George Gallup,
Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, Sept. 29.—Despite Chancellor Hitler's boasts of the power of German arms, an overwhelming majority of American voters think that if England and France were to go to war against Germany, the Reich would be defeated.

While the ordinary voter is equipped with no special knowledge of military strategy or the precise strength of opposing forces, nevertheless the public has a definite impression that Germany could not hold out long enough economically to win a war against a coalition of powers. As one voter, echoing the view of thousands, put it: "Raw materials and money would take their toll of Germany."

The American Institute of Public Opinion, which is conducting an intensive survey of the public's attitude toward war, asked a cross-section of Americans in every section:

"If England and France go to war with Germany, which side do you think will win?"

The vote is:

England and France, 86 per cent.

Germany, 14 per cent.

"Germany is putting up a good bluff," declares a real estate operator in Dayton, Ohio, "but is not prepared to win a great war."

Among other points of view expressed by voters the following are typical:

Oregon traveling salesman, 53—"England and France will win because the United States can't stay out. It will be democratic countries against the rest of the world."

New York woman designer, 21—"Russia will join the allies. Fascist countries will have difficulty with their own people."

Florida truckman, 44—"England and France will win because the United States ain't got no better sense than to jump in again."

Among the minority who think Hitler would win the most typical comment is that Germany is better prepared to fight.

South Dakota farmer, 30—"Hitler is better equipped for war. The whole nation is trained and regimented. It knows just what to do."

New Jersey mechanic, 46—"The Dutchmen will clean them up if they are left alone. They're born fighters."

Egly Accepts Post With SEC

Henry H. Egly, vice president of Dillon, Read & Co., has taken a year's leave of absence to head the Securities and Exchange Commission's newly established unit to carry out function of the commission in the recently enacted program of regulation for the over the counter markets, William O. Douglas, chairman, announced yesterday.

Egly will be in direct charge of the activities of the over the counter division, which will have the responsibility for setting up and perfecting the machinery whereby the over the counter business may accomplish the co-operative regulation sought by the act.

Gen. Wililams' Counsel Quits

J. Leonard Townsend withdrew yesterday as counsel for Brig. Gen. Alexander R. Williams, former acting quartermaster general of the Army, whose trial for a conspiracy to defraud the Government is scheduled tentatively in District Court for early in October.

Townsend told Justice Peyton Gordon that he wished to accept appointment as senior attorney in the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Motorman Exonerated In Track Death

Accident, Jury Holds Man Lying on Rails Skull Was Crushed

A coroner's jury yesterday held that Frank Thomas Harrington, 55, of 4134 Conduit road northwest, was killed accidentally when run over by a street car near his home Wednesday night.

Although the coroner's office and police list Harrington as the city's sixty-sixth traffic fatality for the year, his death is not recognized as a highway mishap by the Department of Vehicles and Traffic.

Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer contends the man was killed on a private right-of-way of the Capital Transit Co. and not on a street under municipal jurisdiction.

Harrington was killed while lying between westbound rails on the Cabin John line. Motorman DeWitt C. Brown, of 223 Eighth street northeast, exonerated of blame in the death, said he did not see Harrington's prone figure until too late to avoid striking him.

There was no explanation at yesterday's inquest as to how the man happened to be lying on the tracks. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald said a blood test for alcoholic content would be made on Harrington's body.

A preliminary autopsy disclosed the man was apparently alive when struck by the street car. His skull was crushed and leg severed at the ankle. Witnesses on the street car said Motorman Brown "did all within his power" to bring the car to a stop before the accident.

Franklin County School Building Program to Start

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 29.—New educational structures to cost approximately $1,280,000 will be added to the public school systems of eight Franklin County school districts, following grants made in the school building program of the PWA general State authority. More than half of the county's 82 one-room buildings will be closed as a result. The largest project is for $400,000 for a 32-room senior high school building in Chambersburg.

Construction and additions to buildings in Quincy township will total $275,000. The Mercersburg allotment for renovizing the present high school is $225,000. Two buildings each in Green and Letterkenny townships will total $100,000. A six-room and a four- room building project in Southampton township will cost $90,000. The Lurgan township appropriation of $50,000 is for a six-room building. The construction of a $40,000 four-room building at Mont Alto is the final allotment of the quota.

Ira Hoover Estate Valued at $150,000

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 29.—The will of Ira N. Hoover, member of one of Waynesboro's oldest families, who died here a week ago was admitted to probate yesterday in the office of the register and recorder, disposing of an $150,000 estate. The bulk of the estate was bequeathed to an only daughter, Miss Eleanor Hoover, who was also named executrix. Public and charitable bequests included $2,000 to the Lutheran Church, $1,000 to the Y. M. C. A. and $1,000 to the Waynesboro Hospital.

ROSALIE SPATCHER, ballet dancer in a New York theater, learned that she had been bequeathed securities and jewels valued at $30,000 when the will of Mrs. Edna Morse Elliott, 75-year-old theater patron, was made public. Miss Spatcher always chatted with the old lady each time she attended a performance. A similar sum was left to an assistant theater manager.

Reliefers Here Busy With Data On Pensions, Bird Stomachs

Refurbish 2,000,000 Records at Archives 290 on One Project, 80 on the Other Biological Surveyers Count Fur Farms

WPA relief workers are revitalizing 2,000,000 pension records, some dating to the Revolutionary War, in the National Archives, and others, in the bureau of biological survey, are correlating data on subjects ranging from a census of fur farms to a study of the contents of birds' stomachs.

In all, 290 men and women are employed on the Archive's project, which will last a year. The pension records were sent to the Archives two years ago, and the individual papers, some yellowed from tremendous age, were so badly creased and folded that complete ruination was feared when the project began.

The individual cases, which number from one to 500 pages—according to the career of the veteran and the extent of claims made by him and his family—are being vaporized in special vaults, run through a battery of 50 ironers and then sorted, classified and filed away.

In the Biological Survey, more than 80 WPA workers are at present employed. All of their work is such as the bureau's regularly-employed personnel had been unable, for reasons of employe shortage or lack of operating funds, to bring to date.

The bureau, it was stated yesterday, has vast files of records, the results of long scientific research, which never had been correlated or brought up to usable form. Some of these records concerned the feeding habits of wildlife. In this work, scientists took specimen's of the stomach contents of numerous birds and beasts to determine feeding habits and requirements. This information is used to guide the survey in planting and replanting feeding areas in public game preserves.

Luray P.-T. A. Weighs School Bible Study

Luray, Va., Sept. 29.—The Rev. Minor C. Miller, of Bridgewater, told the Luray Parent-Teacher Association he advocated religious instruction in all schools. He said such instruction inaugurated in 1929 was being conducted in approximately 23 counties of the State.

Following his talk, the Luray P.-T. A. unanimously voted as one of its objectives for the year the investigation of the inclusion of such a course in the local school.

Nichols Held By Coroner in Wife's Death

Fights Revealed Victim Choked Attempted Suicide

Edward Nichols, 29-year-old plumber, was held for grand jury action yesterday at a coroner's inquest into the brutal slaying of his wife, Mrs. Viola Katherine Nichols, 32, a beauty shop operator.

According to testimony of Detective Sergt. John Wise, Nichols admitted beating his bride of a few months with a rolling pin because she awakened him in the middle of the night to ask a question.

An autopsy revealed that Mrs. Nichols was strangled to death, but her husband told police he "could not remember" choking her, nor could he recall how many times he struck her with the rolling pin, the coroner's jury was told.

Residents of the house at 1303 P street northwest, where the couple had lived since the first of the year, told of repeated quarrels between the pair, and on one recent occasion Nichols confided in a friend that he and his wife were going to "call it quits" because they "just couldn't get along," it was testified.

When other roomers in the house went to investigate water leaking from the Nichols' apartment early Wednesday, they found the husband slumped over a chair in the gas-filled kitchen and his wife apparently dead, her head and face battered, on the bedroom floor.

Nichols was revived and allegedly told police how he beat his wife with the rolling pin after she attempted several times to arouse him from sleep "to talk."

Nichols will face the grand jury on murder charges.

Va. Power Firm Given Setback

Pearisburg, Va., Sept. 29 (AP).—Judge A. C. Buchanan gave the Appalachian Electric Power Co. until October 6 today to file an amended bill in its fight to prevent the town of Galax from erecting a municipal power plant.

Judge Buchanan read an opinion in Circuit Court here this morning which in effect upheld the regularity of an election to vote bonds for the municipal plant and the town's right to build the plant.

Union Urges PWA Handle All Work Relief Building

Houston, Tex., Sept. 29 (AP).—American Federation of Labor building trade unionists demanded today that the expenditure of Federal work relief funds on construction projects be taken from the Works Progress Administration and placed under Secretary Ickes' Public Works Administration.

The proposal was presented to the annual convention of the building trades unions by Charles Case, Columbus, Ohio, representing the Ohio Building Trades Council.

The resolution pointed out unskilled building workers were employed on WPA construction projects. PWA construction work, financed both by the Federal Government and the local community, is done by private contractors.

Suspect Seized In 4 Assaults

Clarksburg, W. Va., Sept. 30.—Charged with making attacks on four small girls in the eastern part of the city, Adam Fisher, 78, of Nutter Fort, a former resident of Webster Springs, today was held in the county jail here.

"When the November grand jury meets," said Prosecuting Attorney J. Philip Cliffod today, "I will ask four indictments, all of which carry the death penalty."

All the attacks are alleged to have occurred in a "shanty" where Fisher has resided for more than a year.

PWA Deadline Expires; Virginia Projects Listed

The WPA deadline for receiving new applications for funds in its 1938 program expires today with almost 7,000 projects approved, it was announced yesterday.

The allotments to date, a WPA statement said, have released almost $1,500,000,000 in construction work to industry throughout the country. Nearly 1,000 projects already are under construction, 92 days ahead of the time by which Congress said construction must start.

Grants of $13,850,253 and loans of $3,564,607 for 120 projects to cost $30,718,377 were announced yesterday. They include:

Charlottesville, Va., hospital buildings, $167,726; Lexington, Va., school, $153,819; Richmond, Va., library, $818,181; and Vinton, Va., sewage system, $31,909.

The Charlottesville grant is for construction and equipment of an infirmary-culinary building, alterations of an existing culinary building for other purposes, the moving of two existing buildings and construction of foundations and service connections for them. Part of the proposed building is to be of three stories. The estimated total cost is $372,725.

35 Send Queries On Amnesia Victim Already Identified

An amnesia victim, who a month ago stirred public interest, and who was identified and left for his home in Elizabeth City, N. C., might be the husband of a woman in Englewood, N. J., according to a telegram received from that woman yesterday by police.

"That makes the thirty-fifth inquiry we have had from different sections of the country, since the man has left," wearily commented Mrs. Pauline Crawford, clerk of the Public Relations Squad, as she prepared to type another letter informing the anxious woman he was not her husband.

Pictures and stories published in newspapers about the missing man's plight, were recognized as J. Paul Spence, 24, of Elizabeth City, N. C., by former football teammates who sought him out to tell him that he had a wife and a job waiting for him at home.

U. S. Makes 831 Va. Home Loans

The Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corporation reported yesterday that 831 home construction and home purchase loans were made by the 25 insured savings and loan associations in Virginia in the first eight months of 1938.

These institutions had assets of $19,958,000 as of September 1, an increase of $5,423,000 in the first eight months of the year, the report said. Home mortgage loans amounted to $17,761,000 on the same date, an increase of $4,716,000 during the eight-month period.

Savings invested in the institutions totaled $12,138,000, an increase since the first of the year of $4,230,000.

$478 in Jewels, Cash Stolen From Desk

Jewelry and cash valued at $478 was stolen yesterday from the desk of Ada Hoffman, at 1316 Seventh street northwest, while Bertha Foley reported missing from the same address a lady's blue pocketbook, containing $8.

Samuel Irving, proprietor of a restaurant at the 500 block Thirteenth street northwest, reported to police merchandise valued at $125 had been stolen by burglars, who jimmied the back door.

Troops Rush To Charleston After Tornado

Storm

lina came en masse to the hospital.

After that ten seconds of havoc there was absolute quiet for what seemed like five minutes. Nobody moved. Then, like rabbits, people began boiling out of doorways. Timidly, they looked at the sky; horrified, they gazed on what a moment before had been clean, rain-swept streets. Huge old trees sprawled across buildings. A sign advertising a hotel three blocks away lay in the middle of Meeting street. My canvas-topped car was unscratched. Next to it was a car standing straight upon its radiator, stripped clean of fenders.

Most serious loss of life occurred in the Charleston Paper Co.'s building on the waterfront, a two-story brick structure which was leveled a moment after its employes had reported for work. Six bodies had been removed by rescue workers this afternoon and an ever-growing crowd stood silently watching on the docks across the street.

Ancient Church Wrecked

St. Philip's Church, dated back to pre-Revolutionary times was damaged, as was the quaint little Huguenot Church, only one of its denomination in the United States. The Dock Theater, restored last year by the WPA as an example of one of the country's oldest playhouses, was injured, as were the old market building and the city hall, which lost its roof.

Meteorologist J. E. Lockwood said apparently three separate tornadoes swept through Charleston within a few minutes. The second wrought this havoc, he said, developing a velocity of 72 miles an hour.

The first struck from across the Ashley River, but did little harm. The third hit Sullivans Island, a resort 10 miles from here, scattered some 15 houses but injured no one.

The Red Cross calculated at least 30 blocks were damaged and placed the number of dead at 25 and injured at 340.

Militia Clear Streets

An hour after the blow streets in the area were jammed with the curious. It was not until late afternoon that militia, soldiers from Fort Moultrie and sailors from the navy yard, called as emergency traffic officers, cleared the stricken section of the city of automobiles. Another almost solid downpour added to the confusion. Alert youngsters, some not in their teens, directed traffic at intersections and were obeyed.

United States Judge Frank K. Myers wired the President to authorize the militia to assume police powers and guard against looting during the night. He also asked for soldiers and Marines to protect Government property.

"My grandson, Barnard Maybank, jr. (son of the Governor nominate) moved from his room in my house to a porch sometime during the night," the judge said. "The blow hit the house, smashed his bed against a wall. The porch was untouched."

A cause of added sorrow to the people of Charleston was the fact that the worst blow struck in a section of town that can never be replaced, the part in which history was made, which still retains flavor of the old South.

First Tornado Since 1811

One lady in front of a shop on Church street was almost in tears. "My antique business will be ruined," she said.

The local authorities said this was the first tornado to strike Charleston since 1811. The city suffered severely in an earthquake in 1886, and in 1893 a hurricane cost numerous lives in the surrounding country, but not in the city proper. In 1911, also, a hurricane killed several people here.

The Weather Bureau described the storm as purely local. It was in no sense a hurricane such as swept up the Atlantic Coast a few days ago and caused tremendous loss of life and property in New England.

First D. C. Movie Operator Dies

William Henry Marshall, 60, believed to be one of the first motion picture operators in Washington, died yesterday at his home, 3504 Thirteenth street northwest. He had been ill only a week.

Mr. Marshall worked in the projection room of the Savoy Theater for the last 10 years, and for the previous 20 years was associated with other movie houses here. His day-time employment was at the Navy Yard, from which he retired last December.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Blanche Devine Marshall, and a son, Kenneth Coney Marshall. Masonic funeral services will take place at the S. H. Hines chapel, 2901 Fourteenth street northwest, at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

MISS MARY E. SHEADS

Hanson Ely, Jr., War Hero's Son, Is Dead at 42

Hanson E. Ely, jr., 42, son of Maj. Gen. Hanson E. Ely, the World War hero, died yesterday in Orange, N. J. He had been ill five weeks.

The body will be brought to Washington for funeral services at 10 a. m. tomorrow in St. John's Church, Sixteenth and H streets northwest, with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

A graduate of the Naval Academy in 1917, Mr. Ely later became Washington representative of the Electric Research Products, Inc., subsidiary of the Western Electric Co. He went to New York City several months ago as research engineer for th American Telephone & Telegraph Corporation. He was a member of the Army and Navy Club.

Surviving are his parents, who live in Washington; his wife, Mrs. Anne Carter Lee Ely, a granddaughter of Robert E. Lee; two children, Hanson E. Ely, 3d, 15, and Anne Carter Ely, 11; three brothers, Capt. Louis Ely, Field Artillery, United States Army, stationed at Philadelphia; Capt. Eugene B. Ely, Field Artillery, stationed at Madison Barracks, New York, and John Ashton Ely, a cadet at the West Point Military Academy, and a sister, Eleanor Julia Ely, Washington.

GPO Cafe Strike Parley Called

Commtites representing the Cafeteria and Recreation Association of the Government Printing Office and the Hotel and Restaurant Employes Alliance, Local 781, will meet this morning in an attempt to settle the 11-day-old strike of workers at the G. P. O. cafeteria.

The printing office unit will be represented by Thomas J. Ford, president; William J. Cassiday, secretary, and Maj. Louis J. Vogt, treasurer. Garland P. Webb, business agent; Morris Verbov and Mrs. Ida Jiron have been named to the negotiating committee of the union.

Demanding wage increases and shorter hours, the cafeteria help struck September 19 and the dining room has been closed since.

Any agreement reached today must be approved by Augustus E. Giegengack, Public Printer, before becoming effective.

T. J. Kennamer Dies; G.O.P. Committeeman

Birmingham, Ala., Sept. 28 (AP).—T. J. Kennamer, 68, Republican national committeeman and former United States marshal, died ta his home here tonight of a heart attack.

day upon Gov. Herbert H. Lehman to stand for a fourth term, and tonight there were indications he would captiulate.

They wanted him to forgeo his desire for a Senatorial nomination so that he might face Dewey, nominee of the Republicans.

Postmaster General James A. Farley, the Democratic National and State chairman who was active in the "draft Lehman" movement, expressed conviction the Governor would accept, as the strongest available candidate against Dewey.

Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, who himself had refused to be considered for Governor, preferring to stand for e-election, keynoted the convention, dnouncing the "egressive Republican record." He said the Republicans were "last minute hitch-hikers seeking a free ride on the progressive band wagon, and announced he was willing to give sympathetic consideration to "any proposal to strengthen and improve the basic purposes" of the Wagner Labor Act.

Farley predicted the platform would "whole-heartedly indorse" the New Deal.

2 Counsel Named For Wage Bureau

Elmer F. Andrews, administrator of the wage and hour division, yesterday announced that George A. McNulty, now assistant general counsel of the Securities and Exchange Commission, would be associate general counsel of the wage and hour division; and Rufus G. Pole, now associate solicitor of the United States Department of Labor, would be assistant general counsel.

McNulty has been a member of the legal staff of the Securities and Exchange Commission since 1935, and has participated in many of the commission's major cases. With the consent of the securities and exchange commission, McNulty served from May through August of this year as counsel to the Senate Civil Liberties Committee in the "little steel" hearings.

Poole was assistant solicitor of the Interior Department from 1933 until March, 1938, when he assumed his present position as asociate solicitor in the United States Department of Labor. In the latter post, he acted as representative of the department in the preparation of wage and hour legislation.

NIGHT COUGHING CAN OFTEN BE PREVENTED

If your child often coughs at night because of even a slight cold—do this at bedtime: Thoroughly massage Vicks VapoRub on throat, chest, and back. VapoRub's poultice-vapor action tends to keep the air-passages clear, helping to maintain normal breathing through the nose, and so reducing mouth-breathing (the frequent cause of night coughs). Try it tonight—learn for yourself another reason why VapoRub is a family standby in more homes than all other medications of its kind put together.

Wife of Consul Must Wait for U. S. Citizenship

Mrs. Arthur L. Richards, wife of the United States consul in Capetown, South Africa, still was a British subject today, because Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat of District Court held that the law did not permit her to swear allegiance to this country until 90 days after her application was filed.

Richards pleaded in vain that he had only 60 days leave and that there was no Federal court where she must take the oath in South Africa.

Mrs. Richardson was born in London in the World War era. Her father was an American, but became a British subject when he joined the Canadian army.

Woman Injured Here As Street Cars Crash

Ethel Errera, 28, of 921 Ingraham street northwest, suffered a possible fracture of the spine and possible internal injuries yesterday when she was thrown against the cashfare box while riding in a street car at Seventh and C streets northwest.

Speed Signs Asked On Wisconsin Ave.

The Keystone Automobile Club urged the Maryland State Roads Commission last night to post speed limit signs along Wisconsin avenue from the District line to Bradley Lane.

In a letter to J. Glenn Beall, chairman of the commission, George Keneipp, Keystone manager, said a "great deal of confusion exists in the minds of motorists as to just exactly what the speed limits are on this very heavily traveled road."

Rites Tomorrow For Mrs. Costin

Mrs. Ida B. Costin, 78, a resident of Washington for 25 years, died yesterday at her home at 1056 Quebec place northwest, after a prolonged illness.

She leaves her sister, Mrs. Susie Richardson; a son-in-law, E. N. Sauer, and a grandson, all of the Quebec place address. Funeral services will be held at the residence at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Blast on Launch Blows Salesman Through Window

One man was seriously injured, and three other persons endnagered yesterday when their cabin cruiser, Panchax, exploded and caught fire while docking near the foot of K street southwest, in the Washington channel.

Ernest White, 50, 800 Maine avenue southwest, suffered internal injuries and a fracture of the pelvis, doctors believed, when he was blown through a window by the blast.

White, representing a motorboat sales company, was driving the boat when the explosion occurred, following a trial run. He was taken to Emergency Hospitla.

George M. Ray, 1302 Eighteenth street, owner of the boat and two other passengers, Isaac Bracey, 1621 Corcoran street nortwest, and Roy Rose, 800 Maine avenue southwest, were able to jump to the dock as they heard the explosion.

Origin of the explosion, and extent of the damage were not determined. The fireboat, Firefighter, extinguished the blaze. Photogrophs on picture page.

plebiscites for the Hungarian and Polish minorities.

When the statesmen reconvened tonight at the Fuehrerhaus their discussions were understood to have turned to the whole broad picture of European appeasement—perhaps paving the way for a four-power understanding to banish Europe's recurrent war scares.

Hitler was said to be ready to enter talks with Chamberlain and Daladier on the matter of Germany's demand for the return of her war-lost colonies.

"Last Claim in Europe"

Der Fuehrer has publicly proclaimed that his demand for the Sudetenland comprises his "last territorial claim in Europe."

Chamberlain told the House of Commons in London Wednesday that, in their talks at Berchtesgaden and Godesberg, Hitler had brought up the "awkward subject" of colonies.

There were widespread indications that the "big four," apparently having dispelled the imminent threat of war, would take advantage of their historic meeting to work toward a settlement of all the outstanding problems contributing to European unrest.

In an hour-and-a-half recess in the conferences during the evening, Chamberlain emerged from the Fuehrerhaus with a smile on his gaunt face and hurried to his suite at the Regina Palace with his advisers as an honor guard of "S. S." Storm Troopers snapped to salute.

The four statesmen conferred with members of their staffs during the recess, then hurried back into conferences with Hitler.

Making Formal Draft

The spokesman for Chamberlain was cautious in his statements regarding the new plan.

"The discussions have been of a friendly character and there still are a number of points to be discussed," he said.

It was learned that when the "big four" returned to their discussions at 10 p. m. they were accompanied by jurists, indicating the formal draft of the plan was about to be made.

Mussolini announced he hoped to leave for Rome about midnight and the Italian spokesman said Il Duce was elated with the results in Munich.

One of the chief difficulties, the German spokesman said, is that of getting the details of the new plan to Prague soon enough to bring about Czech evacuation of the border strip within the specified time to permit occupation by the German "token force."

Acceptance Felt Sure

The plan probably will be handed the Czech ministers in London and Berlin for transmission to Prague, he explained.

Germany, the spokesman said, is convinced that Prague "must accept the plan" because of its Anglo-French sponsorship.

The main object of the conference was to bring about fulfillment of Hitler's demands "without acts of bloodshed and violence," the spokesman added.

The new lease on European peace will be signed by Chamberlain for Great Britain, Hitler for Germany, Mussolini for Italy, and Daladier for France.

Hitler opened the conference with a firm declaration that Saturday is the inflexible "zero hour" for the entry of his troops into Czechoslovakia.

The eight-point plan, over which the "big four" struggled without pausing to eat or rest, was understood from reliable British quarters to have been evolved mostly from the proposals of the gaunt-faced Chamberlain—the only man among the four who was not in the trenches in the last great war.

Concession to Czechs

London (Friday), Sept. 30 (U.P.).—The Daily Mail's correspondent, Ward Price, now in Munich, said early today Reichsfuehrer Hitler had agreed to permit Czechoslovakia to withdraw war materials from the evacuated Sudeten areas.

Hitler, meeting with Prime Minister Chamberlain, Premier Daladier and Premier Mussolini at Munich, was reported to have declined, however, to guarantee the new Czech frontiers unless the Hungarian minority question was settled at the four-power conference.

Price said Mussolini raised the question of Hungarian minority claims, and the British and French delegations sought to persuade Hitler to give the international guarantee under the express stipulation it would not be operative until settlement of the Hungarian question.

Agreement Quick

The dispatch said that due to apparent British and French objections to the use of German regular troops to police the areas during evacuation, Hitler had offered the use of storm troopers.

Much to the Germans' surprise, Daladier and Chamberlain replied they preferred the use of German soldiers to police predominantly German areas.

When Hitler first presented the scheme for progressive occupation of distinctively German areas between October 1 and October 10, Chamberlain suggested this proposal should be submitted to the Czech government.

Daladier, however, replied the heads of the four governments assembled to find a solution to the questions, must take full responsibility, and declared himself ready to accept the German plan.

After this the meeting was devoted to a discussion of the plan already adopted in principle.

Germans Resume Normal Shipping As Crisis Easess

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—Resumption of German merchant shipping after a tie-up that confused all ocean traffic during the European crisis was ordered tonight.

The Hapag Lloyd Line received cable advices that the liner Europa, which had returned to Bremerhaven on an ocean turn-around order sent by radio, again had sailed for the United States at 4 a. m. Friday (10 p. m. Thursday, E.S.T.)

Norma Shearer Denies Tax Claim

Los Angeles, Sept. 29 (AP).—Norma Shearer, film actress, testified briefly in Probate Court today to clear the way for approval for payment of a $754,234 Federal income tax claim against the estate of her late husband, Irving Thalberg, producer.

She testified her business affairs and income and those of Thalberg never were intermingled—so the Government claim therefore did not apply to her in any way.

Athletic events will be staged in the gymnasium, and exhibits of model airplanes, photographs, and wodowork will be shown in the club room.

Game rooms will be open during the evening, and a father-son swimming meet will be held at the pool. Ward M. Barrick, director of the boys' department, will lead the program.

Numbers Suspect Held For Grand Jury Action

Arrested last Friday on a charge Pierce, 29, colored, 710 Fifth street of operating a lottery, Charles C. northwest, was held under $1,500 bond for action of the grand jury, following a hearing before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage esterday.

Pierce was arrested by police for allegedly selling numbers at Fifth and H streets northwest.

Woman Speeds By Wrong Officer, Waves, Pays $5

After waving cheerfully at a motorcycle officer—whom she thought she knew—and exceeding the 22-mile-an-hour speed limit to pass him, Mrs. Pansy F. Bierly, of Riverdale, Md., was fined $5 in Traffic Court yesterday.

Officer R. A. Cunningham, who arrested the defendant on Bladensburg road northeast, told Judge Edward M. Curran that Mrs. Bierly passed him going east exceeding 22 miles an hour.

The defendant explained that she thought Policeman Cunningham was an acquaintance, and merely wanted to give him a friendly greeting.

"Five dollars," said Judge Curran.

Wages Depend Upon Prices, Steelman Says

Pittsburgh, Sept. 29 (AP).—Henry A. Roemer, president of the Pittsburgh Steel Co., told stockholders today steel wages "cannot be maintained unless there be compensating advances in the price of steel products." In his annual report, Roemer declared there must be stability of prices to have stability in wages. He added:

"The reduction in the prices of steel, which became effective throughout the industry on June 24, 1938, did not, of course, affect the earnings for the fiscal year just closed, but will be reflected in the results for the current year, except to the extent that the condition may be corrected by an increased volume of business, lower costs or increased prices."

Chinese Boy Adopted by Woman Here

Is American-Born Pupil at St. Matthew's Learns Native Culture

A Chinese boy who has never seen his native land is learning the ancient customs and culture of China from an American woman who adopted him two weeks ago and brought him here to grow up in her Georgetown home in an atmosphere that is typically Chinese.

At her home yesterday, Miss Genevieve Wimsatt, of 1511 Twenty-eighth street, sat and watched her 7-year-old foster son fidgeting around on the floor and said she plans "to sell him heart and soul on his native China."

Miss Wimsatt calls the boy Er Lang, but to his classmates in the third grade at the St. Matthew's Parish School on Rhode Island avenue he is known as Bobby Lowe.

Bobby, born in New York, was left on the doorstep of the Maryknoll Mission, in Ossining, N. Y., about four years ago. Until Miss Wimsatt adopted him September 14, his education had been in the hands of 120 nuns at the mission preparing for foreign service.

All of Bobby's forebears—even his mother and father—were born in and lived in China. But shortly before he was born his parents came to New York, and Bobby is now typically American.

Miss Wimsatt, who has made "six or seven" trips to China, thinks "Bobby is the best excuse I can find for going back to China." She once edited a woman's publication in China and has written several books about Chinese subjects.

"I am teaching Bobby the laws of Confucius now and also how to use chopsticks," Miss Wimsatt said. "I'm going to sell him heart and soul on his native country, and if he develops the will to get his college education in a Chinese university I shall take him to China."

At present, however, Bobby's ideas are pretty much along the same line of the other boys his age in the neighborhood. Only seven years old, Bobby speaks in precise English with the assurance of an older child and is slightly farther advanced than other children of his age in school.

But Bobby has one failing—spelling.

Down through the centuries his ancestors have known only the Chinese language, a tongue in which separate characters often represent an entire word or meaning.

"I don't mind studying arithmetic. But I don't like spelling," he said thoughtfully yesterday. "I don't know why I can't spell. I just can't."

After Christmas Miss Wimsatt plans to have a private tutor to teach Bobby the Mandarin Chinese dialect. Mandarin, the "aristocratic" language of China, is the official language, or "kuan hua," all through the war-torn republic, she said.

Miss Wimsatt expressed a desire to return to China" as soon as things settle down." She said she planned to return to China "as soon as things China, where she hopes to take Bobby.

She predicted Yunan Province would become the "cultural center of China when the war is ended" and explained several large Chinese universities and cultural centers were moving from upper China.

Bobby's name at birth was Lowe Yanh Huang, although Miss Wimsatt is inclined to doubt if the Lowe is correct. She will get final adoption papers in about six months at which time she will get his full name, written in Chinese, and correctly translate it.

The name she gave him, Er Lang, means "Second Son." She gave him that name because he will take the place of another child, an American born in Washington, whom she adopted about six years ago. He died two years ago at the age of 11.

Dr. Darby Urges City to Pray for Peace at Munich

Speaking on behalf of the Washington Federation of Churches, of which he is executive secretary, Dr. W. L. Darby Wednesday asked that "pastors and other Christian people of this area today offer special prayers that the European negotiations now subject to conference may prove successful and peace be maintained."

In New York Mayor LaGuardia issued a proclamation calling upon all residents of that city to pause for five minutes at 12:30 p. m., during the four-power meeting at Munich and pray "for the peace of the world."

He suggested that all churches be open for special prayer and ring their bells as 12:30 o'clock.

Optical Firms Fail To End Labor Trial

The Dr. Ritholz Optical Co. and the National Optical Stores Co., both of Chicago, Wednesday failed in District Court to block a National Labor Relations Board hearing with the plea the board's jurisdiction ended when they stopped interstate operation.

The companies discontinued their manufacturing business, which was interstate, August 11, 1937, after expiration of two contracts with its employes.

Last Tuesday the labor board issued a complaint charging the companies with violating the Wagner act by refusing to bargain collectively, engaging in a lockout and interfering with union membership of employes. A hearing was set for today in Chicago.

Charles P. Posey, Former Captain On Potomac, Dies

Capt. Charles P. Posey, 72, retired Potomac River captain and one-time member of the Metropolitan Police force, died Wednesday at the home of his niece, Miss Sadie Bowie, Conduit road, Md.

Capt. Posey served on the police force for a brief period, nearly 40 years ago. He was seriously injured when a colored man he was chasing turned and struck him in the chest with a brick. His injury forced his retirement from the force shortly afterward.

He later served as captain of a Potomac River passenger steamer. A native of Charles County, Md., he came to Washington as a young man.

Besides his niece, he leaves a sister, Mrs. Susie Whittington, of Washington, and several nieces and nephews.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. today at Chambers funeral home, 1400 Chapin street northwest. Burial will be in Potomac, Md.

Say it with a Clear Skin

NO man or woman wants to have a finger poked at them or receive sympathy because of an unhealthy skin appearance.

Some skin troubles are tough to correct, but we do know this—skin tissues like the body itself must be fed from within.

To make the food we eat available for strength and energy, there must be an abundance of red-blood-cells.

S.S.S. Tonic builds these precious red cells. It is a simple, internal remedy, tested for generations and also proven by scientific research.

You, too, will want to take S.S.S. Tonic to regain and to maintain your red-blood-cells . . . to restore lost weight . . . to regain energy . . . to strengthen nerves . . . and to give to your skin that natural health glow.

Take the S.S.S. Tonic treatment and shortly you should be delighted with the way you feel . . . and have your friends compliment you on the way you look. There is no substitute for this time-tested remedy. No ethical druggist will suggest something "just as good."

S.S.S. Tonic stimulates the appetite and helps change weak blood cells to strong ones.

Soviet Ready To Join World Conference

Text of Notes Revealed American Plan Backed Use of Force Decried

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Sept. 29.—The texts of President Roosevelt's appeal to Soviet Russia to exert her influence to avert war over the German-Czechoslovak dispute and Russia's reply pledging her support were issued here today.

In the reply the Soviet government also declared it was ready "to support the proposal put forward by the Government of the United States on the convocation of an international conference and to take an active part in the latter."

The appeal to Soviet Russia did not mention a conference but in a message to Reichsfuehrer Hitler on Tuesday the President suggested that the negotiations over the German-Czechoslovak dispute could be widened into an immediate conference in some neutral spot of all the nations directly interested in the controversy.

Text of American Note

The text of the American communication as issued here follows:

"It is the opinion of the Government of the United States that the situation in Europe is today so critical and the consequences of war would be so disastrous that no steps should be overlooked or omitted that might possibly contribute to the maintenance of peace.

"The President of the United States has already sent an urgent appeal to the Chancellor of the German Reich, the president of Czechoslovakia and the prime ministers of Great Britain and France urging the importance of keeping negotiations alive and seeking a just settlement of the dispute through peaceful means.

"If the chiefs of state or the government of the U. S. S. R. were at once to send a comparable message to Germany and Czechoslovakia, emphasizing in their own words the supreme importance of foregoing the use of force in settling the dispute now at issue, the Government of the United States feels that the cumulative effect of such an expression of opinion might possibly even at this late date influence the course of events and contribute to the preservation of the peace of Europe. This suggestion on the part of the Government of the United States does not in any way imply any opinion as to the points of dispute at issue.

The Soviet Reply

The text of the Soviet note in reply follows:

"The government of the U. S. S. R. is invariably guided in its foreign policy by striving for universal peace. Rejecting the resort to force for the solution of international conflict, the U. S. S. R. in due time supported the initiative of the Government of the United States of America which proposed to renounce war as an instrument of national policy in the Kellogg pact.

"Moreover upon the proposal of the government of the U. S. S. R. an agreement was concluded February 9, 1929, in Moscow by the U. S. S. R. and a number of countries on putting this pact into force before its term.

"At the present time events developing in Central Europe threaten to grow into a new World War. In this responsible moment the government of the U. S. S. R. cannot but appreciate the message of the President of the United States of America appealing for peaceful settlement of the conflict that has arisen.

"The government of the U. S. S. R. sympathetically accepts the proposal the Government of the United States addressed it it—to contribute to the prevention of war and a peaceful solution of the present international crisis.

"Noting the existence of obstacles to Anglo-French mediation between the Czechoslovak republic and Germany despite the readiness shown by Czechoslovakia to sacrifice her vital interests for the sake of universal peace, the government of the U. S. S. R. sees in immediate convocation of an international conference the most effective means for the prevention of further aggression and obviation of a new world war.

"Back in March of the current year after the violent seizure of Austria which endangered the peace of Europe, the government of the U. S. S. R. suggested in order to prevent further most dangerous international complications the immediate calling of such a conference which could find practical measures for resisting aggression and securing peace by collective efforts.

"True to its striving for peace, the government of the U. S. S. R. is ready also at the present moment to support the proposal put forward by the Government of the United States on the convocation of an international conference and to take an active part in the latter."

Planes Raid Kunming

Shanghai, Sept. 29. (AP).—Japanese reported today their initial aerial foray into Yunnan province, in southwest China bordering on Burma and French Indo-China.

Japanese naval bombers were reported to have invaded the province Wednesday, bombing the airdrome and other military establishments of its capital, Kunming, (Yunnanfu).

Seven of 10 Chinese planes which engaged the raiders were said to have been shot down. The Japanese acknowledged the loss of one plane.

On the Yangtze River, the Japanese reported the capture of Tienkiachen forts commanding narrows on the river 90 miles downstream from Hankow, China's military capital.

Gen. Arnold, who has been acting chief of the Air Corps since the death in an air crash last week of Maj. Gen. Oscar Westover, is one of the Army's outstanding aviators.

Shortly after the Wright Brothers made their first hesitant flights at Kitty Hawk, N. C., Gen. Arnold was sent to Dayton, Ohio, to learn to fly and to make comprehensive studies of the possibilities of aircraft for observation and fighting. He holds Permit No. 3 from the Aero Club of America and was the second Army officer to receive a military aviator's license.

Reprimanded in 1926

Always an aggressive champion of aerial defense, he was reprimanded in 1926, during the Gen. William Mitchell controversy over national defense policies, for what was considered an excess of zeal for air armament.

His technical investigations in the field of aviation have included such subjects as photography, special means of topographical observation, aerial mass attacks and engineering problems of flying.

Beginning his flying career in 1911, he was the first recipient of the Mackay Trophy, one of aviation's highest awards, for a flight made at College Park, Md., the following year. Twenty-three years later, Gen. Arnold again won the trophy for his leadership of the Army flight to Alaska.

Commissioned in 1907

A native of Pennsylvania, Gen. Arnold was graduated from West Point in 1907 and was commissioned in the infantry. He transferred to the aviation section of the Signal Corps in 1916 and when the United Staes entered the World War was on duty in the Panama Canal Zone organizing the flying service. In May, 1917, he was ordered to Washington for service with the Air Division of the Signal Corps and later as assistant director of military aeronautics.

After five years of service on the West Coast, Gen. Arnold returned to the National Capital for duty in the Office of the Chief of the Air Corps. He served for four years as commander of the First Wing, G. H. Q. Air Force, and came to the War Department as assistant chief of the Air Corps in 1936.

Col. Sultan, who was ordered to command the Second Engineers at Fort Logan, Colo., received the Distinguished Service Medal for his World War services while on duty with the War Department general staff. In 1931 he was awarded an Oak Leaf Cluster in recognition of his activities on the Nicaraguan Canal survey and as director of the Army's relief activities following the earthquake there.

Before the war, Col. Sultan was instructor in engineering at West Point and from 1916 until 1918 he was in charge of construction of fortifications in the Philippines.

In 1926 he was named resident member of the Board of Engineers of Rivers and Harbors with headquarters here.

Commander of the Third Cavalry since 1936, Col. Wainwright was on duty with that regiment from 1923 until 1925.

He was on patrol duty on the Mexican border during the disturbances of 1914 and 1916 and during the World War was overseas for two years. He participated in the St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne offensives as assistant chief of staff for operations of the Eighty-second Division. After the armistice he was on general staff duty with the American forces in Germany. Subsequently he served two tours of duty with the War Department general staff and three as a member of the faculty of the Cavalry School, Fort Riley, Kans.

Entering the aviation section of the Signal Corps in 1914, Col. Kilner qualified as a junior military aviator at the Aviation School, San Diego, and then served in the Southwest with the First Aero Squadron. He was a member of that unit while it was attached to Gen Pershing's Punitive Expedition into Mexico in 1916.

Commanded School

Shortly after the United States entered the World War, Col. Kilner was placed in command of the Signal Corps Aviation School at Mineola, Long Island, but in October, 1917 he was ordered to France to take command of the Third Aviation Instruction Center at Issoudon. The following year he was transferred to Tours for duty at the Headquarters, Air Service, Service of Supply.

Since the Armistice he has twice been on duty here in the office of the Chief of the Air Corps and from 1931 until 1933 he was executive officer for F. Trubee Davison, the Assistant Secretary of War for Air.

Gen. Wilson, who was commissioned a lieutenant of Volunteers during the Spanish-American War, served in the Philippines during the insurrection and was appointed a second lieutenant in the Regular Army Artillery in 1901.

Served Overseas

Five months after the entrance of the United States into the World War, Gen. Wilson sailed for France with the Seventh Coast Artillery Regiment. Overseas he also served as artillery inspector of the Thirtieth Artillery Brigade and as a member of the training section of the General Staff of the American Expeditionary Forces.

After completing a three-year tour of duty as chief of staff of the First Corps Area, Boston, Mass., Gen. Wilson assumed command of the First Coast Artillery District last June.

After taking part in the Aisne-Marne, Oise-Aisne and Meuse-Argonne Offensive, Gen. Beck returned to Washington for duty as executive of the war plans division of the War Department General Staff. He also has served here in the office of the Chief of Cavalry and as a student at the Army War College.

Gen. Beck Holds Medals

Gen. Beck holds the Distinguished Service Medal, the French Croix de Guerre and is an officer of the French Legion of Honor.

A native of Massachusetts, Col. Daley, was in France as division engineer of the Third Division. In 1919 he was attached to Gen. James G. Harbord's mission to Turkey and also served with the Allied High Mission to Armenia.

While Herbert Hoover was director of Russian Famine Relief, Col. Daley served as his executive and then was deputy Red Cross commissioner to Greece.

After four years' service here in the office of the Chief of Engineers, he was on duty in engineer posts in the Middle West and then named division engineer of the North Atlantic Division.

Col. Chaffee, who has spent most of his military career in the Cavalry, participated during the World War in the Oise-Aisne and Meuse-Argonne Offensives and in the occupation of the St. Die Defensive Sector. After the Armistice he commanded the Ninth Inantry in Germany.

In 1927 he began a four-year tour of duty with the operations and training division of the War Department General Staff and then was attached to the mechanized cavalry units stationed at Fort Knox, Ky. He returned to Washington in 1934 to serve with the budget and legislative branch of the War Department General Staff and recently was ordered to command of the First Cavalry (mechanized) at Fort Knox.

Col. Murray, a member of an old Army family, is the son of Gen. Arthur Murray and the grandson of Gen. R. E. DeRussy.

Overseas he commanded the Fifth Field Artillery in the Ansauville defensive sector, and in the Soissons engagements of the Aisne-Marne offensive.

Murray Served In Philippines

Upon his return to the United States he was on duty here in the Office of the Chief of Field Artillery and then commanded the First Battalion, Sixteenth Field Artillery, Fort Myer, Va.

Col. Murray was assistant to the Governor General of the Philippines from 1929 until 1932 and then served for four years with the Field Artillery Board, Fort Bragg, N. C.

President's Peace Pleas Cover World

More Replies Received U. S. Tension Eased No Money Scare

The extent of President Roosevelt's efforts to mobilize world opinion for a peaceful settlement of the Sudeten crisis became apparent yesterday when confirmation was received from many capitals of appeals received from the White House.

Besides his cabled messages to Germany, Czechoslovakia, France, Great Britain and Italy, it was learned that his messages had gone to Moscow, Tokyo and Oslo. Others were indicated, but officials here declined to say what number of nations had been approached. No hint of the contents was given, although it was understood they were similar to the message sent personally to Premier Mussolini of Italy.

Tension Eased

While Czechoslovakia made public a note to the United States, carried in full in The Post today, promising new concessions to Germany but proposing arbitration by President Roosevelt if current negotiations fail, the note had not been formally presented to the State Department last night.

Official Washington, wartime tension relaxed, prepared to turn attention to more or less neglected domestic affairs. The President continued to keep in close touch with negotiations at Munich by radio, news dispatches and State Department communiques from American officials abroad.

The parade of ambassadors and ministers of the State Department continued, as diplomats exchanged information. The President kept a full day's engagements on other matters without interruption, numbering among his visitors Norman H. Davis, Red Cross chieftain, who reported on the Charleston, S. C., tornado, and Gen. Malin Craig, Army chief of staff, who discussed Army business.

Money in Fine Shape

Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., at his regular press conference, told the press that the international monetary machinery, always the most delicate in war war scares, had "worked extremely well" during the crisis.

He noted certain fluctuations in exchange values, but said they were at a minimum compared to the wild gyrations of money markets in 1914 and thereafter.

The Secretary said:

"Under the extremely difficult situation of the past few days, the tripartite agreement functioned perfectly."

He referred to the agreement among the United States, Great Britain and France, and concurred in by Belgium, the Netherlands and Switzerland, to keep the exchange value of their currencies as stable as possible.

Text of 4-Power Peace Pact

By the United Press.

Munich, Friday, Sept. 30.—The official text of the communique covering the four-power agreement on the solution of the German-Czech dispute follows:

"Agreement reached September 29, 1938, among Germany, the United Kingdom, France and Italy:

Germany, the United Kingdom, France and Italy, taking into consideration the agreement which already has been reached in principle for cession to Germany of Sudeten German territory, have agreed on the following terms and conditions:

These terms and conditions govern the cession and measures consequent thereon, and by this agreement they hold themselves responsible for the steps necessary to secure its fulfillment.

Evacuation Begins October 1.

Firstly, the evacuation will begin on October 1.

Secondly, the United Kingdom, France and Italy agree that evacuation of the territory shall be completed by October 10 without any existing installations having been destroyed, and the Czechoslovakian government will be held responsible for carrying out the evacuation without damage to said installations.

Thirdly, the conditions governing evacuation will be laid down in detail by an international commission composed of representatives of Germany, the United Kingdom, France, Italy and Czechoslovakia.

Occupation by Stages

Fourthly, the occupation by stages of the predominantly German territory by German troops will begin on October 1. These territories marked on the attached map will be occupied by German troops in the following order:

The territory marked No. 1 on the 1st and 2nd of October; the territory marked No. 2 on the 2nd and 3d of October; the territory marked No. 3 on the 3d, 4th and 5th of October; the territory marked No. 4 on the 6th and 7th of October.

The remaining territories of predominantly German character will be ascertained by appointment of the aforesaid international commission forthwith and will be occupied by German troops by October 10.

Plebiscites Outlined

Fifthly, the international commission referred to in paragraph (point) three will determine the territories in which the plebiscites are to be held. These territories will be occupied by international bodies until the plebiscite is completed. The same commission will fix the conditions under which the plebiscite is to be held, taking as basic conditions the Saar plebiscite.

The commission will also fix a date not later than the end of November on which the plebiscite will be held.

Sixthly, final determination of these frontiers will be cleared up by the international commission. The commission will also be entitled to recommend to the four powers, Germany, the United Kingdom, France and Italy, in certain exceptional cases, minor modifications in the strictly ethnographical determination of the zones which are to be transferred without plebiscite.

Transfer of Populations

Seventhly, there will be a right of option into and out of the transferred territory, the option to be exercised within six months of the date of this agreement. A German-Czechoslovak commission shall determine details of the option and consider way of facilitating the transfer of populations and settle questions of principle arising from said transfers.

Eighthly, the Czechoslovak government will, within a period of four weeks from the date of this agreement, release from their military and police forces any Sudeten German who may wish to be released and the Czechoslovak government will, within the same period, release Sudeten German prisoners serving terms o fimprisonment for political offenses.

Guarantee of Borders

The text of an annex to the agreement follows:

"His Majesty's government, the United Kingdom and the French government entered into the above agreement on the basis that they would stand by the offer contained in paragraph six of the Anglo-French proposals of September 19 relating to an international guarantee of the new boundaries of the Czechoslovak state against unprovoked aggression.

When the question of Polish and Hungarian minorities in Czechoslovakia have been settled Germany and Italy, for their part, will give a guarantee to Czechoslovakia.

The heads of the governments of the four powers declare that the problems of the Polish and Hungarian minorities in Czechoslovakia, if not settled within three months by agreement between the respective governments, shall form the subject of another meeting of the heads of the governments of the four powers here present.

Supplementary declaration:

All questions which may arise from the transfer of territories shall be considered as coming within the terms of reference to the international commission.

Munich, 29th of September, 1938.

11 Americas Back Roosevelt Peace Plea

Indorsements Wired Messages Praise Stand President Replies

Eleven aLtin-American nations, in addition to five previously announced, have wired President Roosevelt their indorsement of his appeals to Chancellor Hitler of Germany and President Benes of Czechoslovakia not to break off negotiations looking to a settlement of the Sudeten controversy.

The Stete Department last night made public messages of commendation from presidents of the 11 countries, together with replies from Mr. Roosevelt.

"The Government and people of Venezuela adhere to the generous sentiments which inspir the messag," said the wire from President E. Lopez Contreras.

President Stenio Vincent of Haiti said: "It was with great satisfaction that I heard last night Your Excellency's last moving appeal to the Chancellor of the eRich. I am happy to felicitate you both in my own name and in that of the Haitian people for the new personal contribution of Your Excellency to the work of safeguarding peace and civilization."

"To You Falls the Honor"

"To you," said President Eduardo Santos of Colombia, "falls the honor or uniting the peoples of America in a supreme effort to avert the immense peril which is threatening humanity and to avoid a senseless conflict whose atrocious consequences would make themselves felt for many decades in all human homes."

President of Leon Cortes told Mr. Roosevelt "the Costa Rican government and people share and associate themselves with profound satisfaction with the actions which Your Excellency is carrying on so that the world may not witness the havoc of a new war . . ."

"The government and people of Bolivia associate themselves with the noble action of Your Excellency in behalf of humanity and world peace," said the telegram from Lieut. Col. German Busch, president of Bolivia.

"The Paraguayan people and their government," said Felix Paiva, president of that country, "cordially adhere to the exhortations of Your Excellency to the European governments to maintain peace ih the world."

"Earned the Gratitude"

Honduras' President Tiburcio Carias Andino wired that "Your Excellency once more has earned the recognition and gratitude of civiled humanity. On this date my government has united itself with that of Your Excellency in entreating a peaceful solution on the part of the States in conflict.'

"I pray to the God of nations," said the message from President Anastasio Somoze of Nicaragua, "that such a call may save the world from horror and may demonstrate that there is something substantial and permanent in the culture which man has achieved."

President Maximiliano H. Martinez of El Salvador, declared "the eminently pacific spirit of America is summed up in the message of Your Excellency entreating peace in Europe."

From President Manuel Maria Borrero of Ecuador, came a message of appreciation saying that "Humanity, terrified before the terrible possibility of conflict, will not forget Your Excellency's most important initiative, and hopes that the labor initiated in support of universal peace may conclude with happy success . . ."

Text of Czech Concessions

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 29.—The text of the Czechoslovak Legation's statement on its concessions and willingness to submit the Sudeten German issue to President Roosevelt follows:

It is reported from Czechoslovak official circles in Prague that before the Munich conference, the Czechoslovak government accepted further concessions.

It is prepared to cede to Germany territory containing more than 50 per cent of German inhabitants and asks for itself only frontiers of such a kind as to make a new Czechoslovak state capable of existence and defense.

The Czechoslovak government, however, cannot agree to a plebiscite as well in the areas which contain a large Czechoslovak majority or those which are entirely Czechoslovak, as demanded by Germany for military reasons.

The Czechoslovak government agrees to time limits for the final settlement.

All these arrangements are to be carried out by December 15, but a settlement is possible by October 31.

The Czechoslovak government agrees to supervision by an international commission and by the British Legion as well as to occupation by British troops before the territory is handed to the Germans.

It agrees to negotiations regarding demobilization and to the recall of its troops and to the revision of its system of treaties, but in the interests of its own defenses and that of the Czechoslovak and democratic German minority, and also of the Jews in the territory, it cannot evacuate and demobilize or abandon the fortifications before the delimitation of frontiers has been fixed and an exchange of population guaranteed and a new system of international guarantees has been initialed.

It is anxious to expedite these negotiations, and in no case does it wish to delay the final settlement on which, at the advice of Great Britain and France, it is resolved once and for all and for which there have been so many telegraphic appeals from so many heads of states, led by President Roosevelt.

At this critical juncture, the Czechoslovak government is placing the interests of civilization and world peace before the distress of its own people and is resolved to make sacrifices which never in history were asked from an undefeated state with such concentrated effort.

It is, therefore, entitled to demand that the other side should also show an understanding for the peace of Europe and the world.

If in such an advanced state of negotiations insuperable obstacles were to arise, the Czechoslovakian government proposes the whole dispute should form the subject of an international conference or should be submitted for arbitration to President Roosevelt.

The Czechoslovak government submits completely to such a course in advance.

Car advertising's audience in Wasihngton numbers more than 600,000 men and women daily—an alert, intelligent buiying market, well night equal to the population of the city itself.

These wide-awake transportation riders are prospects for every conceivable type of product and service, for Washington buyers spend close to 395 million dollars annually in the District's retail stores. Colorful. inviting, impressive car advertisements appear before these shoppers evrey day, when they are actually on the way to buy—and thse eye-catching messages place effective sales-getting inducements before the great mapority of these shoppers for an average round trip totaling 40 minutes each day.

Car advertising in Washington, or elsewhere, not only produces sales of household goods and appliances, food, clothing, beverages, radios, automobiles, refrigerators, insurance, and thousands of other items and services; it also possesses that ever-desirable quality which further endears it to the hearts of economically-minded advertisers and their advertising agencies, to wit: Car advertising's cost is the LOWEST among the five major media. For with an expenditure of about 4½c in car advertising it is possible to reach 1,000 Washngton buyers. Carrying the lowest sales cost known to the advertising business, car advertising is THE sales-producing "buy" in the media field. It offers no substitutes, only results.

5 Row-House Appeals Denied In Arlington

Board Refuses Rezoning
Electric Rates Reduced
Cut 10 to 15 Per Cent

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va., Tel. OXford 0800

Development of row housing yesterday met with a serious setback when the County Board accepted recommendations of the Zoning Appeal Board and denied five applications for rezoning to allow construction of such houses.

Applications denied yesterday were made by Harvey Hatch, Glebe road, in Four Mile Run section; William M. Stone and Ashton C. Jones, Hatfield area; H. Hertoot, jr., South Glebe road; Richard A. Sutton, Ballston area; Frank Upman, Lee Highway near Glebe Road.

Application of the Reliable Construction Co., for rezoning from residential A to B in vicinity of North Wayne street near James Monroe School was denied.

Application of the Mace Properties, Inc., for rezoning from residential A to B on Wilson boulevard near Clarendon School was granted and, the application of Frank Upman for rezoning from residential A to local business along Lee Highway near Glebe road was granted.

Amendment Offered

Board Member F. Freeland Chew attempted to offer amendments to the zoning ordinance which, he said would settle the problem. After considerable discussion his efforts were defeated by a 3 to 2 vote. He was supported by the chairman, Mrs. Elizabeth B. Magruder.

The amendments offered read:

"No building, structure, dwelling or living unit of the type referred to and defined in Paragraph 14 of Section 2 of zoning ordinance and commonly known and designated as row houses, shall hereafter be erected or structurally altered in any district provided for in the ordinance, whether such district be residential, business or industrial, and such type of construction wheresoever proposed to be located is for all intents and purposes hereby specifically prohibited."

Proposed amendments also provide that all mention of row houses in present ordinance be stricken out.

Following the vote, Chew announced that he again would offer them for the board's consideration next Tuesday.

Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas said he believes that the board will have no more applications for rezoning for row house construction for sometime.

Appearing in behalf of residents of Woodlawn Village, former State Senator Frank L. Ball requested the board to surface treat a number of the streets within the village. The matter was referred to the county manager for a report at the October meeting.

Total expenditures amounting to $31,466.18 of which $14,744.14 represented the semimonthly payroll, were approved.

Electric Rates Reduced

Officials of the Virginia Service Co., announced a reduction in electric rates ranging from 10 to 15 per cent for the residents of Arlington County.

The reduction follows recent negotiations between the company and the State Corporation Commission, which brought about a cut of $350,000 annually for residents of Virginia.

The new rates go into effect in two steps, the first to be reflected in January bills and the second effective not later than October 1, 1939. This officials say, will be the fourth rate cut in the Arlington County-Alexandria area since May 1, 1936.

Aftere the minimum charge of $1 which entitles the consumer to 20 kilowatt hours, the new rates provide, in one specific instance, 50 kilowatt hours for $2.05 in January instead of the present rate of $2.17, and a further cut to $1.90 next October.

Lawyers' Luncheon

The Arlington County Bar Association will hold its luncheon meeting today at 12:30 o'clock at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

Edward Douglas White Council No. 2473 Knights of Columbus will sponsor a benefit bingo party tomorrow night at its clubhouse on North Washington Boulevard at Clarendon.

Rail Rate Boost On Line Denied

Richmond, Va., Sept. 29 (AP).—The State corporation commission denied today the petitions of ten Virginia railroads for an increase in rates of 10 per cent on agricultural limestone between points in Virginia.

Many Virginia agricultural organizations opposed the increase at the hearings September 13 on the grounds it would hinder the progress of soil improvement. It was contended the railroads would lose in the end, because of a decrease in shipments.

Motorist Obeys Sign and Receives Ticket

Where to Hang Wash Solved In Greenbelt

Wives Complain
Driers Installed
Worry Is Over

Housewives living in the apartments at the model town of Greenbelt, Md., won't have to worry about where to hang their wash after October 15.

O. K. Fulmer, assistant community manager, announced yesterday electric driers would be installed in the basements of each of the 44 apartment houses by that time.

Tests conducted on a sample machine is one of the basements showed the average wash could be dried in from 60 to 75 minutes, Fulmer said. It takes about two hours, however, he explained, when there are sheets in the wash.

Several months ago one apartment housewife complained, in a letter to the Co-operator, community newspaper, that she had no place to hang her wash where it would dry because of an ordinance forbidding use of back porches.

Health Program Sought

Adoption of the 8-point program for improvement of health conditions in Prince Georges County proposed by Dr. Allen Freeman, of Baltimore, will be urged upon the county commissioners at their meeting at Upper Marlboro Tuesday

Members of both the County Service League and the Welfare Board are expected to appear before the commissioners in support of the recommendations.

Dr. Freeman, dean of the Johns Hopkins University Department of Social Hygiene and Public Welfare, presented his program at a meeting Tuesday night at College Park under auspices of the Service League.

One of the recommendations was that the county health department's staff be more than doubled. Dr. Freeman declared the present staff could care efficiently for only 18,000 out of the county's 30,000 population.

Talks to Traffic Officers

Dr. J. W. Sprowls, professor of psychology at the University of Maryland, said yesterday traffic officers should be students of personality in order to understand why persons "deviate from normal expectations."

Speaking before 40 police officers at the university's traffic school, College Park, Dr. Sprowls described psychology as "a study of action" and added that "you have to study habits of people in order to control them."

Prince William Team Again Wins In Cattle Judging

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Manassas, Va., Sept. 29.—For the fourth consecutive year, a 4-H dairy cattle judging team from Prince William County won over competing teams at the Virginia State Fair at Richmond.

The Prince William team, made up of Frederick Harpine, Harry Fitzwater and Cleveland Fiory, all of the Nokesville Club, will compete with teams from other States at the National Dairy Show at Columbus, Ohio, from October 8 to 15.

Volleyball Meet Set for Virginia

Richmond, Va., Sept. 29 (AP).—John E. Belcher, associate physical director of the local Y. M. C. A., announced today the State volleyball tournament would be held here April 1, next year.

The Richmond Central Y. M. C. A., winner of the State title last year, will defend its championship against some of the finest teams in the State, tournament officials said.

The tourney was awarded to Richmond at a recent meeting of the State physical directors association.

Richmond won the Tidewater League championship as well as the State title last year and was runner-up in the Cherry Blossom tournament at Washington.

The Tidewater League will open its season next month with teams from Norfolk, Portsmouth, Newport News and Richmond competing on a regular schedule.

Veteran Cumberland Shoe Merchant Dies

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 29.—Conrad G. Smith, a shoe merchant here for half a century, died yesterday. He was a thirty-second degree Mason, a Knight Templar and a Shriner and was a lifelong member of Zion Reformed Church.

His survivors are two sons, G. Albert O. Smith and Otto C. Smith; two brothers, George C. and Adam Smith, and three sisters, Mrs. George Aberle, Mrs. Josephine Connor and Mrs. Leslie Beall.

Auto Railway Wins Right to Boost Fares

Some Rates Cut
Act on Petition
2 Counties Affected

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Sept. 29.—The State Corporation Commission today granted a petition of the Arlington and Fairfax Auto Railway Co. for certain increases in fares between Virginia points provided it furnished lower fares for persons regularly using its service.

The order provided that the carrier sell transportation cards in denominations of $5 and $10 at discounts of 20 per cent on the $10 cards and 10 per cent on the $5 cards, with such tickets to be good only where cash fare is 20 cents each way or over.

The petition for increased fares was filed May 19 and a hearing held June 6. At that time the applicant said it would provide lower fares for persons regularly using its service, and proposed $10 cards at 10 per cent discount, and $5 cards at 5 per cent discount. The commission was of the opinion that a possible lower charge could be assessed by the carrier for those having continuous need of its services.

The commission said the testimony presented indicated no proper basis for the present fares, and that it appeared that fares based on service would be proper and should be sufficient to allow the continued operation of the company.

Lineman Badly Hurt

Winchester, Va., Sept. 29.—W. R. Crauswell, 28, telephone lineman, is reported in a "very critical" condition at a local hospital from injuries suffered when a telephone pole snapped, pinning him to the ground.

Dr. Threadgill Quits Post at Greenbelt

Hits Interference
Group Plan Scored To Fill Job Soon

Dr. Francis D. Threadgill, assistant director of the Greenbelt (Md.) Health Association's medical center, revealed yesterday he had resigned from his post because he believd "mdicine practiced from a group standpoint would invariably be unsuccessful."

"There were just too many fingers in the pie," Dr. Threadgill said, citing "interference of laymen," officials of the health association, in the relationship between doctor and patient. "So many little things came up, I decided I didn't care to be associated any longer with that sort of practice."

"It happens quite often," he continued, "that a patient will not like a physician or his treatment and then it is satisfactory to everyone concrened if the patient terminates the relationship. But out here I found that instead patients go to a third party, a layman, and complain. Under such conditions the practice of medicine becomes intolerable."

Dr. Threadgill said he would continue his private practice in Washington. He was named as assistant to Dr. Thomas A. Christensen at the Greenbelt Health Center early last month.

The board of directors of the Health Association issued a statement assuring "all members as well as nonmembers that ample medical care will be provided at all times."

They said applications from several doctors were under consideration and that Dr. Threadgill's place would be filled shortly.

Joseph Blake, 75, Dies; Mother Was War Victim

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 29.—Joseph D. Blake, 75, whose mother was fatally shot by passing Civil War troops here as she stood at the window of her home holding him, an infant, in her arms, died at his home here Tuesday. He had been ill some weeks. He was a painter by trade.

HOW 25 WOMEN LOST UGLY FAT
In Special N. Y. Test

Ask Your Doctor If It Isn't Good Way. Read EVERY Word

NEW YORK, N. Y.—In a test by a prominent N. Y. Physician and nationally known newspaper woman—25 women lost a total of 286 lbs. in 40 days. YOU, too, can follow this SAME SENSIBLE plan right at home and here it is:

First of all go light on fatty meats and sweets. Eat plentiful of lean meats, fish, fowl, fresh fruits and vegetables. And for proper functioning—take a half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in hot water every morning. DON'T MISS A MORNING! And this is important!

Kruschen is NOT harmful. It is not just one salt as some people ignorantly believe. Rather it's a blend of 6 active mineral salts (formula right on box) which when dissolved in water make a healthful mineral drink similar to Famous European Spa waters where wealthy fat women have gone for years. A jar of Kruschen costs only a few cents and makes 8 gallons of a most highly efficient mineral drink.

So fat ladies—get some gumption! MAKE UP YOUR MIND YOU'LL STICK to the above Plan for 28 days—and just see if you don't lose fat and feel healthier and younger. (Note: You can get Kruschen at druggists everywhere.)

The Charleston Tragedy

Like all other communities along the Southern seaboard, Charleston must have been devoutly grateful for its preservation from the terrors of the recent hurricane. Yet, while that gratitude was still fresh, this charming city has been stricken by a storm not less deadly than the one it had escaped. Within a few seconds this tornado crushed out more than a score of lives and laid many a beautiful old edifice in ruins.

Thus the disaster becomes a tragedy for the whole Nation. Charleston's historic Georgian buildings are more than monuments to a vanished culture. They are living links between a twentieth century democratic and industrial civilization and its colonial and aristocratic origins. Charleston stands, in relation to the rest of America, much as Chartres does to France or Oxford and Canterbury to England.

Among the places to suffer severely was the Battery where, in 1776, Moultrie's guns beat off the British and where, in 1861, screamed the shell that began a civil war. Also damaged was old St. Michael's Church—built in 1752—whose very bells are so closely associated with the great turning points in American history.

The aid which the rest of the country, through the WPA and other constituted agencies, is already sending to Charleston should include more than the immediate work of rescue and relief. It should include the work of careful restoration.

A Word Of Praise

Former President Hoover probably knows more about the misery and futility of war than any living American.

The men at the front in the last Great War experienced the personal horrors of the conflict, but their field of observation was limited. The political heads of governments and the strategists behind the lines were forced to concentrate their attention upon difficult problems that left little time for contemplating the sufferings of individuals.

Herbert Hoover, however, living in London as a private citizen at the outbreak of the war in 1914, served as a noncombatant, devoting his organizing and administrative abilities voluntarily to providing relief for the starving people of Belgium. He speaks, therefore, with the deep conviction growing out of his close contact with the victims of the last Great War when he applauds President Roosevelt's appeals for peaceful negotiation of the European dispute over Czechoslovakia.

Mr. Hoover's ungrudging indorsement of the Administration's efforts to prevent war is in sharp contrast with the unsparing attack which he subsequently directed against other policies of the Administration, particularly the political abuses that have crept into the Federal relief system. In his Kansas City address, he has set an example which other Republican orators might follow to advantage of bestowing praise upon political opponents when it is deserved, without pulling punches when there is ground for criticism. That is the kind of eclectic criticism that Senator Vandenberg was pleading for in his address defending "yes, but" men.

Praise For 'Yes, But' Men

Senator Vandenberg's conception of the role played by the "yes, but" politician under our system of government is an illuminating exposition of a theme that has been badly distorted during the heat of the recent primary campaigns by orators on both sides. His praise is really intended not so much for the "yes, but" man as for the "yes, but" attitude toward issues of major importance.

There is, indeed, a certain type of legislator who renders disservice to his party as well as to the Nation. That is the professional obstructionist who relies upon his nuisance value to keep his name before the electorate and refuses to surrender a party label even when he has become a liability from the viewpoint of most of his colleagues.

The "yes, but" politicians whom Senator Vandenberg praised in his address to the Michigan League of Women Voters should be sharply differentiated from perennial trouble-makers who seriously interfere with the proper functioning of a government run by political parties. He was defending "yes, but" men who are believers in the party system of government but nevertheless refuse to vote unthinkingly at the behest of party leaders. Such men regard it is as their duty to preserve their independence of judgment and to distribute praise and blame in accordance with their convictions.

Partisan politicians who condemn every action and reject all programs of an opposing party, while refusing to indulge in self-criticism, are dead wood. They are not fitting representatives of the people of a progressive country. Whether they are labeled Democrats or Republicans, they have nothing constructive to contribute to solution of the Nation's problems. Moreover, the obedient partisan follower who never presumes to question orders is the kind of man admirably adapted to the purposes of a dictator.

Whenever the party system upon which our Government is based becomes so rigid that legislators who are discriminating in their criticism are no longer tolerated inside the ranks, the foundations of democracy will be undermined. It is the "yes, but" men who provide the leaven that makes Democratic institutions work.

A Turning Point

After three weeks for which history shows no parallel, constructive choice is being made. War is averted. Peace, at least temporarily, is confirmed.

It is a healthy sign that the agreement worked out at Munich is one of compromise. In the situation which had evolved no national viewpoint could have triumphed except through the exercise of force. And solution by force would have been all too likely, in the carefully chosen words of Neville Chamberlain, to "end civilization."

The brunt of the sacrifice is to be borne by Czechoslovakia. It is not merely loss of territory and dislocation of national economy which the Prague government must confront. Perhaps more galling is a less obvious humiliation of the little republic. It must agree to abandon the once vivid ambition of being a first-class power. It is to become a neutralized area with positive restrictions in the field of foreign policy. And additional territory may have to be abandoned to Hungary and Poland as a result of the precedent set in ceding a large part of the Sudeten area to Germany.

These will eventually seem small sacrifices, however, if in exchange Czechoslovakia becomes another Switzerland—secure, prosperous and respected for accomplishments more impressive than the possession of a huge and burdensome military establishment. That there is good prospect of such a development is indicated by the tenor of the Munich conversations. But it will be necessary to see that the guarantees accorded Czechoslovakia are real, reliable and enduring. There must be compensation for the renunciation made by this fine people in behalf of peace.

France has also made great concessions for the common good. The dominant continental power of 1919 now sees the discard of its whole post-war diplomatic system. With the change in Czechoslovakia the Little Entente loses most of its political meaning. The weak nations of central and eastern Europe cease to be French satellites. Henceforth they will look to Berlin, not Paris, for leadership and direction. But the greatness of France was never in her imperial power. Now, as always, it is in a cultural leadership which, without peace, would wither and die.

Great Britain, too, yields much of that intangible value known as prestige. By permitting the growth of German domination in Middle-Europe she abandons that historic policy which for centuries has made London oppose supremacy by any single continental power. Mr. Chamberlain's three trips to Germany in recent days are symbolic of the change since the Kipling era. The characteristic arrogance of Victorian days is thoroughly deflated. But in losing her arrogance that which is really England gains.

Russia also has lost ground. The pointed exclusion of that government from the negotiations at Munich is a factor of great significance. Neither the advice nor the assistance of the Communist spokesmen was desired at this parley. But this exclusion of Russia from the vital councils of western Europe must not be permanent. No country should be more welcome, once its yearning to overthrow the civilization of other lands has been finally turned to more constructive lines. No country, in recent years, has worked more effectively for peace. Her continued aid is needed.

For Italy, insofar as Mussolini has been an important figure in the current parley, there is a restoration of influence. But it is questionable that this means much. What Il Duce lost when Germany reached the Brenner Pass will not easily be restored. The old maestro plays second fiddle now. With that development the real greatness of Italy, crushed out by Fascist boots, may now revive.

Has Germany alone triumphed, at the expense of the entire continent? The indications that this is so are superficial. For the first time Hitler has been forced to compromise. For the first time he has taken less, and taken it by negotiation, than he had asserted he would take by force. For the first time he has set a definite limit to his territorial ambitions. For the first time, in a word, he has been forced to yield.

The fact will be obscured in Germany. Indeed, it will not become significant for the world in general until there are guarantees effective against any further outbreak of Nazi aggression. But it remains outstanding that Germany, confronted with a real alliance against aggression, has sharply modified what first were termed irreducible demands. Outside of Germany the dictator has ceased to dictate. If this is a turning point Germany may begin to win back something of the terrible loss of moral values, of the spiritual degradation and shame, which the Nazi regime has come to mean in the minds of all civilized men.

What conclusions, then, may be drawn from a situation in which all are losing something, but in which also everyone stands to gain? It would seem that the achieved solution, whatever its imperfections, is fundamentally workable and stable; is capable by intelligent direction of being converted into a really constructive settlement. To say that this will prove the case would, at the moment, be highly premature. But to say that it may be the opening of a new day in Europe is not at all far-fetched.

An outworn, unworkable peace system—that of Versailles—has now finally collapsed. An effort to replace it by the naked military might of Germany has been effectively challenged and halted. The moderation shown at Munich yesterday indicates the tremendous urge for constructive work in which all nations and men of goodwill may join. It shows that there is room to build between the crumbling ruins of past blunders and the threatened triumph of intolerable dictatorships.

It is time for such a turn for the better. It is time for a civilization which has been steadily plunging downward to turn back toward another Renaissance which, under the rule of reason, Europe might so easily attain. During the past few days the wings of death have grazed the faces of countless millions on that old continent. If men of every nation cannot learn from this experience, then is the common heritage of Western civilization doomed.

The Dewey Nomination

In nominating Thomas E. Dewey for the governorship of New York, the Republicans of the Empire State have chosen as their standard bearer a young man upon whom the national spotlight has been increasingly focused of late.

Still in his thirties, Mr. Dewey already has behind him a long and brilliant record as a prosecutor of racketeers. This record led to his nomination and election last year as district attorney of New York City. It won him such popularity among the rank and file of Republicans throughout the State as to make his present nomination almost inevitable, particularly since there was available no other candidate with a comparable appeal.

For 16 years the Republicans of New York have been out in the cold so far as the governorship is concerned. Since Nathan L. Miller, who held office from 1920 to 1922, all of New York's chief executives have been Democrats. The rapid rise of Mr. Dewey reflects the belief that the party's fortunes can be rehabilitated by turning to younger men. Nor did the setback he received in the Hines case, where a mistrial was called because of what many consider a mere technicality, halt the groundswell for Mr. Dewey. When the Republican State convention convened at Saratoga Springs Wednesday, there was no question that he would be chosen and, in fact, yesterday saw him named by acclamation.

Because of Mr. Dewey's nomination, the New York State election will be watched with intense interest all the way from Maine to California. Should he succeed in doing what no Republican candidate for the New York governorship has done since the Harding landslide of 1920, he will obviously be a conspicuous figure so far as the 1940 national convention is concerned.

For this reason his forthcoming campaign will be closely scrutinized in an effort to discover where he stands on the issues of the day. Able, courageous, hardworking as a prosecutor, he is on record with respect to few public issues outside of those relating to crime. The campaign in the Empire State now about to begin should help to fill that void.

Eugene Talmadge, former Governor of Georgia, defeated by Senator Walter F. George in Georgia's September 14 primary, is contesting the election in more than 30 counties. He lost his shirt, but he is still snapping his red galluses at one and all.

The Republicans, who have been unable to slow down the New Deal's streamlined political machine, might profit by studying the technique of some of our leading Democrats.

We have just about learned how to spell "Czechoslovakia" and how to pronounce "Sudeten," but "dirndl," as in "dirndl dress," still baffles us.

Many nations are having hard spells of the jitters because of war and rumors of war, and it is an excellent time for Americans to stay at home and attend strictly to their business—such as it is.

A note of frankness has finally been injected into descriptions of millinery. The stylists come right out in the open and call the current woman's headgear "madcaps."

"May I Come Out Now?"

A Virginian Protests

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am only a common citizen, a Virginian, I want to speak my piece, and feel writing to the President is foolish, but you might air my views and help save the lives of me and my buddies. Up to now I haven't heard a word as to how our President will keep the United States out of war.

Now listen, we don't give a damn if Germany whips the breeches off England and France. Why should we? Let them fight it out over there, but let us stay at home and be ready to protect our United States of America. If big business loans money to them, they know the risk, so why should I and mine go fight to protect the thing we never had? Let the fellow fight the battle who took the risk.

How foolish it is to me for our Chief to beg Hitler not to fight. When we declared war on England did George Washington pay any attention to notes asking him not to fight? We thought, and still do, it was 100 per cent right to fight, so if Hitler wants to fight, let him fight, as long as he doesn't jump on the United States. England and France have never given us credit for winning the last war. France spat upon our boys, called us "Yankee Pigs." Britain paid us nothing, but used us for a sucker. Now let them fight their own battle. Blood may be thicker than water, but I can't feel that England is my "Pappy" and, therefore, I must fight whenever they holler "go."

How can war be prevented here?

(1) Stop all propaganda that tends to bring us into war. Shoot the foreign writers and suspend the papers as "guilty of treason" who publish this propaganda.

(2) Corral all foreigners who try to turn public sentiment in favor of Europe so we must enter war.

(3) Make every American a real American or lock them up as the best thing to do for the safety of the United States.

(4) If the United States sells war materials to Europe let them come for it in their own boats, pay for it, and then, if they are sunk at sea, we are in the clear. The best way to keep the nations from sinking your "blockade-running boat" is "not to have any to sink."

DONALD GARRISON.

Congratulates 'Veteran'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Two Voices Over Europe" of September 28 was magnificent in its clear analysis.

And "War Veteran's" letter of September 28 is a model of dignified assurance.

I congratulate The Post in that in civilization's hour of trial it is inspired to donate much valuable space to a people's forum, an arresting and peculiarly American institution, and a shining guerdon of our democracy.

"War Veteran" frankly says that he remembers his Anglo-Saxon heritage and treasures it. This is a balm to the soul in a country where the more vocal elements boast of their Anglophobia and pat its Big Bill Thompsons on the back, though deep down in their hearts they realize their position to be indefensible.

I, too, was once slightly inoculated with the virus, I grieve to say, although my Huguenot forebears found a temporary haven in England. For unhappy France was indeed afflicted with the dementia of religious intolerance and lost its best elements in that blood-drenched nightmare, when reason was prostrate and violence walked abroad unashamed.

A resurgence of that spirit is apparent in Germany today as hundreds of thousands of homeless Jews and Gentiles roam in a destitute condition, and tax the generosity of the neighbors.

H. de JERSEY.
Washington, Sept. 28.

History Repeats

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Many thanks for your allusion to moral values. It is timely.

When the average man ventures to analyze or classify he is apt to draw a hit-or-miss conclusion in which feeling prevails. The trained analyst takes the magnifying glass, or perhaps delicately adjusted scales, and with pencil and paper it may be, makes a computation of the evidence.

If in our crude way we compare recent events with those of two decades ago we may discover that history often repeats. The present hermit of Doorn at the time of the Boxer War thus instructed his brother Henry:

"So conduct yourself that for a hundred years to come a Chinaman may not so much as dare to look askance at a German."

Now let us turn to the Belgium of our day. We find President Benes making a sane and temperate speech from which bombast and bitterness, calumny and hysteria have been carefully excluded. But Herr Adolph uses the short and ugly word suited to his unreliable personality. Benes is a "liar."

Karl Spittler, a Swiss author whose books in the German language were much appreciated, had this to say:

"To assassinate an innocent man is not enough. The murderers must need search the pockets of their victim for proofs of this guilt."

It was so true that there were shreiks of rage . . . .

Luckily Switzerland was a neutral country, and international morality had not quite broken down.

A few years before Armageddon France had to demote Declasse for "appeasement."

This time Anthony Eden got the ax.

History repeats——.

"Sullivan's Nagging"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am beginning to get overwhelmingly tired of Mr. Mark Sullivan's remarks about "Dictator-President Roosevelt." Mr. Sullivan was, I understand, the best friend Mr. Herbert Hoover had among the journalists.

Doesn't Mr. Sullivan recall the horrors of 1930-31-32; the lines of pitiful people standing at the garbage dumps waiting for fresh garbage to be brought out in hopes of finding food to stay their hunger? I saw them every day as I went by into Chicago. President Roosevelt stopped that, made work and supplied relief, but of course he is a very extravagant President. Mr. Hoover refused to spend money so foolishly.

Judging from the articles written by Mr. Sullivan and other similar-minded Republicans, most Republicans feel that Mr. Hoover's attitude was precisely right and that President Roosevelt's has been extravagant, "pampering to the lazy poor," "catering to labor," authoritarian, totalitarian, communistic and dictatorial. Also, not truly liberal, autocratic, political-minded, weak and "ruling with an iron hand."

A good many conservative candidates for office seem to be trying right now to drag the issue of "peace" into the political arena, but President Roosevelt, good neighbor and great American, has never yielded in the slightest to that temptation. With all the discord at home and abroad, he goes his sane, carefully considered way. They say he even laughs at Sullivan's constant, bitter nagging. But that is more than I can do.

MARY PLUM.
Washington, Sept. 30.

Embroiling America

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I see by this morning Post that the Parent-Teacher Associations may participate in a meeting to protest against the actions of Germany in Czechoslovakia.

I was under the impression the purpose of that organization was to look out for the welfare of the children in the schools and not to participate in European politics. Why organizations like the Parent-Teacher Association and Federal Employes Union should try to embroil this country in the present conflict in Europe is beyond my understanding.

As a veteran of the World War and the father of five boys I do not want to see their lives sacrificed for any foreign country.

JOSEPH M. OWENS.
Washington, Sept. 28.

Asks Justice For Reich

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The page devoted to articles on live subjects contributed to your paper by Pegler, Dorothy Thompson and others, and also your editorials, which are excellent and timely, make it the most valuable of all Washington newspapers.

The present tragic situation in Europe is surely just what was to be expected from the aftermath of the World War. My surprise is that it did not happen before. England and France grabbed all the territory after the Great War, as their divine right, and, as Herr Hitler said in his speech, all attempts to obtain even a fair show since then for the German peoples have met with rebuff by those two nations. I have no German blood in my veins, nor am I an advocate of war, but justice is justice. And after all is said, we have our share of the fault, because it was the unfortunate mess created by our own Democratic President at that time which left the string out for a resumption of trouble at a future time.

E. B. N.
Landover, Md., Sept. 28.

Call For A Boycott

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I hear much noise lately which sounds like mass murder in a tin garage. It is Herr Hitler again, as frantic and humorless as ever.

Only other, which my two operations (this is the first time I've mentioned them in print), presented me with, produced such weird and amateurish sound effects. Lets all believers in the ancient myth of democracy forget and boycott everything made in Naziland and Mussoliniland. Let us all good Americans dial off the psychopathic madmen of Europe from our radios whenever they attempt to broadcast hysterical "Heils" and "Duces" to us; before we all go crazy ourselves, listening to certain male creatures with the bodies of men (but minds of boys) babbling like inconsequential brooks; premeditated, helmeted poppycock, to a weary-from-listening world.

DR. E. J. IRVINE.
Cincinnati, Ohio, Sept. 28.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am not accustomed to writing to any paper, although I read them regularly. But I could not let this urge pass. I listened in to Hitler and his interpreter and all the ballyhoo that pleases him so well. Then next morning I read the letter by Carl A. Neibling, and I sized them up as very much the same. Have you ever noticed that the drum in a band makes the biggest noise, but is empty? He referred to Mr. Chamberlain as a buzzard. Does he know that wherever a buzzard flies, there is something putrid? On Tuesday, I listened to Mr. Chamberlain and I could not help comparing the two. One sounded like a man, and the other like an escaped lunatic. I hate war but I am not for peace at any price.

AN AMERICAN.
Washington, Sept. 27.

The Post Impressionist

September Afternoon

I HEARD Hitler speak the other day, and I am still wondering why it is that the radio and all the resulting intercommunication between the nations have not resulted in more accord. My husband suggests that, like most useful inventions, radio is a two-edged sword, dealing propaganda out of the same loud speaker that gives us healing music. And it will continue to be so, I suppose, as long as men's tongues can wag.

I sat down and closed my eyes and could almost see the great throng (pure Nordic) waiting for Der Fuehrer. The music was stirring, and there was an undercurrent of drums as the speakers drew closer. The sunlight came through my western windows and flung yellow splotches along the floor and up the wall. It caught a bowl of orange marigolds and set them on fire. I wondered idly how many German hausfraus had cut marigolds for their tables that day.

The beating of the drums stopped. Herr Goebbels was speaking. I tried to picture him from his photographs—small, thin, cold. The interpreter's voice repeated, "—in this conviction the whole German nation is united." It will be, if you have done your job properly, I thought. The cheering seemed distant, but was unmistakably present. ". . . We repeat the vow that we often have made—'Fuehrer, you lead, and we will follow.'" Now, Herr Goebbels, you are getting into your stride. The cheers grew louder and closer. The voice went on, striving for the heights of passion, but never quite reaching them.

The door bell rang and I waited for the laundry man to change my bill. "That Hitler speaking?" he asked. I nodded, trying not to miss the interpreter's words. Coming back to my chair by the radio, I sensed a difference in the voice. It was louder and rounder and rolling in gutturals. The interpretation came through, "I—I—I." That must be Hitler, I thought. The crowd was cheering, screaming, and the Fuehrer was screaming above it.

I thought of my father-in-law, who was a student of German lore and a master of its language. We sometimes listened to him read the poets—Schiller, Goethe. The sound was gentle, and there was something full-bodied and sane in the flow of words that was pleasant to the ear. The German language was to him the language of sage and philosopher, and not the stormy discords that came roaring and sobbing out of the radio.

My small son dashed in from play and stopped abruptly beside my chair. "Why are you listening to that, Mama?" he asked. He remained thoughtful for a moment. "Do you think he knows what he is saying?" A grubby hand reached toward the fruit bowl on the table and maneuvered under a still life arrangement of purple grapes to find a golden apple underneath. I wondered how long it would be before little German and Czech and French and English boys would come in from their games for apples and find the fruit bowls empty.

The interpreter was speaking again: "The prevalence of German suicides in the Sudeten—100,000 refugees." Mr. Hitler, did you ever hear of chickens coming home to roost? I saw in my mind's eye the face of a Jewish woman I know, as she touched my lad's hair, wondering how her nephew was faring in Munich, and her eyes held all the fear and anxiety and tragedy of the centuries.

The roaring and ranting went on. As the voice reached each emotional peak, the crowd followed with cheers that sounded strangely like snarls. This miracle of science that could bring a symphony into my home was giving me a picture of a throng under the sway of organized unreason. No wonder so many German composers are under the Nazi ban! How can a people fed on song be expected to pounce upon their neighbors in hatred?

An airplane droned overhead. I glanced out of the window and saw it circling toward the airport not far away. Only a few minutes before Hitler had boasted of his tanks, his guns, his war planes. Were the mothers of Europe loooking apprehensively at the same sky that I regarded so casually?

My little daughter pattered in from her room, rosy and sleepy-eyed from her afternoon nap. I brought her clothes and let her dress in the living room. For some reason I wanted my children close to me just then.

The last words of Hitler's address were hurled through the loud speaker, and the massed Nazis took up the shouting. The interpreter said that they were crying "Hail Victory." But I wondered what was in the hearts of the German wives and mothers, waiting in the kuchens with their kinder, for the menfolk to come home from meeting.

Positive

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Accept my sincere thanks for printing the article of Dorothy Thompson, "The Hitler Speech." All the way through it is positive. It is the best article I have read and her presentation of critical facts will have a great influence toward peace.

I hope and pray that all newspaper writers would adopt that style of writing. EMMA FIRTH.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Allies Have Arms, Too

ONCE THERE WAS a colored boy matched to fight a white boy, and just before ring time the manager of the white boy stepped into the colored boy's dressing room to search his bandages and pass the time of night. After a few pleasant remarks he began to tell the colored boy of the terrible punching power of his boy, of the awful punishment he would deliver downstairs and the pitiful hulks of once-promising men he had left in his wake.

The colored boy sat on the slab, swinging his legs, his bandaged hand in his lap, and listened respectfully until the white boy's manager had said his piece. Then, as the visitor was leaving with a cheery "good luck!" the colored boy called him back.

"Just one thing I want to ask," he said. "I just want to ask what you think I'm goin' be doin' while your boy doin' all that—readin' a book?"

THAT SEEMS a pertinent question in reply to the terrible predictions of bombing and shelling against the allies in this next war with the Germans and possibly the Italians, whether it starts now or later. Because the last time they fought the British were still in the bow-and-arrow era of warfare, with one machine gun to a battalion and a stubborn belief in the efficacy of shrapnel against concrete, which was about as useful as bird shot against battleships.

They were paunchy and complacent, their civilians always had thought of the army as an off-the-street club for the lower classes and drunken sons of the aristocracy, and it took them almost two years to adopt conscription fully.

• • • •

THEY UNDOUBTEDLY are soft again in the military sense, except at sea, and their aviation and that of France, by all accounts, is very inferior to that of the Germans. But the British didn't begin to fight that time until they had come off the floor half a dozen times blowing blood off their lips, and they still have the same staying power, moral and physical, that they had in those days, in addition to a fresh recollection of the mistakes and terrible delays that punished them so badly before.

While the Germans are bombing London and Paris and Prague and the Italians and Germans are doing carnage and shattering cities in France what will the French and British and Czechoslovaks, and perhaps even the bashful Russians be doing. Reading a book?

• • • •

THE ECONOMIC SIDE constitutes another problem, but certainly the Germans and Italians can have no advantage there. They have been offering their poverty as one of the excuses for their predatory conduct, and the very best that can be said for their position is that they may have enough to see them through a quick one.

But what is there to bolster the assumption that a German or Italian city cannot be blown lopsided by bombs from the air, that their people are more steady under punishment in the civilian areas than the British, French and Czechs? Let it be admitted that the British and French never did like air raids and that the Czechs, too, will bleed if cut and die if gassed or blown to tatters. Are there any people who do like to be bombed? Or who can take it any more stanchly than the British, in particular, took it during moonlight raids on London when the doormen and bobbies at some of the London night clubs had to stand guard to prevent brash, if silly, young bucks in officers' uniforms and their girl friends from dashing out into the streets to chance it as though the shrapnel from the guns and the bombs from the planes were nothing more than the gentle rain from heaven?

ARE THE GERMANS and Italians now people so stoutly nerved and sturdily built that they will be neither perturbed nor physically hurt if and when the enemy planes fly over, and has this miracle been wrought by the mere hokum of oratory and hysteria?

All the experts who have written about the Spanish war admit that the bombers, although they have done damage in spots which was horrible to behold, have been unable to live up to their billing, even though the rebels have had a great advantage in ships. And although the warfare from the air will be much greater in the big war, the Germans and Italians cannot expect to have quite the same proportionate advantage in power. They will have to take it, too, and their countries have their great vital giblets and tripes, their power plants, sewers, reservoirs and all, the same as the allied nations.

The American hoodlum of the prohibition era used to speak of a gun as an equalizer, which was a quaint way of expressing the truth that 6-foot Prussian or scrawny cockney, a bullet's as big as a man.

Soil Conservation Hearings Are Set

Blacksburg, Va., Sept. 29 (AP).—Landowners of four eastern Virginia counties, who initiated a movement for establishing soil conservation districts even before the 1938 General Assembly authorized such projects, will be given an opportunity to advocate their proposals at hearings next week.

The hearings, called by the State committee created by the 1938 law, will be held on the following schedule: King William County High School, Monday, October 3; King and Queen County, Stevensville High School, Tuesday, October 4; New Kent County courthouse, Wednesday, October 5, and Essex County courthouse, Thursday, October 6.

At Nazi G. H. Q.

By Felix Morley

Editor of The Post.

The City of Munich

(The following article was written by Mr. Morley on a visit to European capitals in June, 1937. In view of the conference in Munich it is reprinted as a timely picture of the capital of the Nazi Party.)

MUNICH—Here in the old capital of Bavaria, the new capital of National Socialism, is being erected a group of imposing buildings which seeks to rival, in popular appeal, the galleries, palaces, museums and churches which have long made Munich famous.

This new construction is being grouped around the historic Brown House, that relatively modest mansion not far from the heart of the city, where Hitler established his headquarters as soon as the Nazi Party had demonstrated nation-wide strength. Here, with customary self-confidence, he himself, long before advent to power, sketched out the building plans which are now being translated into brick and stone.

The various offices and departmental centers of the Nazi Party will, when completed, cover all eight sides of two square city blocks. Indeed, this much space is already occupied by the thousands of party workers who are concentrated here.

But some of the buildings now in use are only converted residences. They are to be replaced by huge, yet architecturally simple, structures not very dissimilar—if Chancellor Hitler and Secretary Ickes will, respectively, pardon me—from the new Interior Department Building in Washington.

• • • •

TWO OF THE EIGHT sides, those facing the majestic Koenigsplatz, the huge paved area of which is now used for party mass meetings, are now complete. The central feature is the twin temples of honor within which, yet beneath the open sky, rest the remains of the 16 Nazis who were killed in the abortive Hitler-Ludendorff rising in Munich on November 9, 1923.

There was a time when that affair was familiarly known as the Bierhalle Putsch, but no German dares refer to it in those terms today. Probably if the Nazis had been taken rather more seriously at the outset they could be taken somewhat less seriously now.

The two temples, with the eight sarcophaguses in the sunken well of each, are undeniably impressive. At the entrances four of the black-garbed S. S. men stand on perpetual guard, with steel helmets and bayoneted rifles. Another pair keeps eternal watch at the spot, a half mile or so distant, where these "heroes" fell in combat with troops of the Weimar republic. There is the great stone memorial with its exultant inscription: Und Ihr Habt Doch Gesiegt!—And Yet You Have Conquered!

The propaganda value of these Nazi shrines is of course tremendous. The salutes expected from all who pass, not to mention the elan and precision with which the guard is changed every two hours, are constant reminders that the revolution was made with sacrifice and still demands it from adherents. Since everyone must adhere to the new regime the result is that Nazi Germany is perpetually steeled for effort. And none know better than its leaders that this effect will continue to be essential for an indefinite period.

THE S. S. troops, which can best be described as Hitler's Praetorian Guard, are a unique organization. They are not the "brown shirts" (S. A. or Stuerm Abteilung), which were modeled on Mussolini's black shirts, but a far more efficient military corps now said to number not far short of a quarter of a million men.

On the S. S. (Schutz, Staffel or Protection Squads) is placed the primary responsibility for keeping the Nazis in power. They are a complete army with an organization wholly distinct from that of the Reichswehr. Only in the event of war would they come under the direction of the general staff.

Together with the Gestapo, or secret police, the S. S. goes far to explain the strength of the grip with which the Nazis hold Germany.

Both these organizations are under the direction of Himmler, a completely ruthless and highly efficient executive whose essential duty it is to overawe all who can be terrorized and to ferret out all who cannot.

The first job is the duty of the omnipresent S. S., picked men, perfectly disciplined, beautifully equipped, ready at a word to kill or be killed for the swastika and all that it represents. Detection of malcontents falls to the duty of the Gestapo, as hidden as the S. S. is apparent, but equally efficient in organization.

These two professional organizations are more than ample to wipe out any normal opposition. But in addition there is the volunteer, semi-military, S. A., counting in the neighborhood of a million men.

THE REPUTATION and importance of these brown shirts has greatly declined since the "purge" of June 30, 1934, when their commander, Ernst Roehm, was executed, together with Gen. von Schleicher and some 70 others deemed unworthy of the trust reposed in them. The best men in the S. A. have now been transferred to the S. S. The brown shirts, mostly small shopkeepers, clerks and petty officials—lower middle class—are now important chiefly for the way they emphasize the ubiquity of the Nazi movement.

They must turn out in military formation to form a claque at all public meetings. They must in a hundred different ways bring pressure on the general public to be "loyal" and "patriotic." In the event of war they would be expected to crush any opposition or attempts at sabotage. But otherwise they are far less significant than is generally thought to be the case outside of Germany. And Herr Lutze, their rommander, is relatively unimportant in party circles.

When the thoroughness and comprehensive coverage of these Nazi formations is understood the wonder is not that there is so little opposition to their power, but that anything in the nature of open criticism can persist. Yet it does.

Not long ago Himmler, whose official salary is modest, like those carried on the books for all the leaders, bought himself an expensive villa in the most exclusive residential quarter of Berlin. One morning soon afterward an embarrassing question was found painted in staring letters across the front of the house, "Herr Himmler, where did you get the 90,000 marks to buy this house?"

A reward of 1,000 marks was promptly offered for identification of the perpetrator. The next morning another question was in the same place, "Herr Himmler, where did you get the 91,000 marks?"

• • • •

BUT THE RELISH with which Germans tell this story, on the quiet, represents only the perseverence of a sense of humor under extreme difficulties. Actually Herr Himmler is so sure of his control that he recently went to Danzig to arrange with local leaders in the free city for the pilgrimage now being made there by Nazi regional bosses from all parts of Germany. He also maintains very close contact with the Austrian situation. Indeed, the Nazis now seem busier extending their propaganda among Germans in other countries than in countering discontent at home.

The Nazi officials feel sure of themselves and their hold on Germany. There is no doubt of that. And they are confident because they have done their organizing job both thoroughly and cleverly. The more the investigation, the more apparent this is.

I was, for instance, interested in ascertaining why there is such a concentration of Nazi power in Munich, now known officially as "the capital of the movement." I was told that, of course, this is for sentimental reasons. Here Hitler founded the party; here the first bid for power was overthrown in blood; here in the Brown House it was reformed on seemingly less aggressive lines and grew to triumph. Why not locate the party treasury and other central offices here?

But it is not all sentiment by any means. The Catholic Church, now representing almost the only organized resistance to Nazi aggrandizement, is very strong in southern Bavaria. It can and is being overawed by the concentration of party strength here.

THEN THERE is the long frontier common to Bavaria and Austria, and to Bavaria and the German-speaking parts of Switzerland. The latter is a matter for the future, but between Bavaria and Austria a constant exchange of Nazi agents is an easy matter. There are many Austrian workers in the various party offices in Munich. And since Hitler is himself of Austrian birth, one is told that it would indeed be strange should his own country, when the time is ripe, refuse to rally to his cause. Certainly propinquity of party headquarters to Austria will not delay the ripening.

There is, however, a still more fundamental reason. Germany today has two governments—the one inherited in 1933 and the one which Hitler is building. There is a professional army and a Nazi foreign office. There is a regular department of labor and a Nazi Arbeitsfront, and so on throughout.

The Novotny Kidnaping Case

IT IS NOW 17 days since little Jan Novotny, his tutor and bodyguard, have been penned up by the Butch gang. Such information as has been smuggled out indicates that the child's spirit and that of his protectors remain unbroken.

In spite of the fact that his rich relatives are making a deal with his captors which frightens him very much, his upbringing under an old tutor, who studied under the great Anglo-Saxon scholars and a well-known American Revolutionary hero, George Washington, stands him in good stead, although he never had the opportunity to learn endurance on the playing fields of Eton.

It is now 14 days since the Butch gang delivered the first ransom note to the guardians of the child.

These guardians, Mr. John Bull and Mme. Marianne, were the child's godparents, and at its birth bestowed upon him a handsome, small estate with a very strong wall protecting it against marauders who in preceding centuries had been numerous in that community.

• • • •

IN THE FIRST ransom note the Butch gang threatened that unless the wall be immediately given up, they would kill the child. A note smuggled out by the bodyguard of little Jan to his guardians said, "I don't want to be killed, but are you quite sure they won't kill me anyhow? We've got a few guns inside this wall, and maybe we'd better keep the wall. Listen, godparents, you don't know Butch, but he was around in our neighborhood last week and snatched another kid, and what he did was something fierce."

The kid's guardians studied the ransom note a long time and decided to contact the gang's boss in a mountain hideout.

The boss said, "what's this kid to you anyhow? He is a brat, and has been teasing some of our friends.

"You just give us the wall and a good slice of his property—or else."

UNCLE JOHN and Auntie Marianne had never met anybody like Butch in their lives, although they had read about him in the newspapers, they argued with Butch. They said, listen, sir, it's against the law!"

Butch, making an ominous bulge in one pocket, emitted the genial laugh which has made him popular in the underworld. "Dja wanna shoot it out?" He said, and rattled then thousand airplanes, the sound of which was practically drowned out by the rattle of the medals of his understudy.

The guardians passed the word on to the kid's tutor.

"Pay the ransom," they said, "but if that wretched fellow does anything more to you, you can count on your old guardians."

The kid and his tutor talked together and said, "it doesn't seem a very smart thing to do, but probably the old folks know better."

• • • •

SO THEY decided to give Butch the ransom, although both Jan and his tutor, and his bodyguards, didn't believe for a minute that that was all Butch wanted, because he is a bragging fellow and had boasted all around the underworld that he was going to take over the whole place and bury Jan in the cellar.

• • • •

THE GODFATHER of little Jan next contacted Boss Butch in a small summer resort, taking beforehand the precautions commonly used in kidnaping cases to avoid too much publicity.

There was a good deal of talk around, among the mob, of lynching the boss, and that would have been against law and order.

But before making the next contact the godparents notified the police and got them ready to act.

"He called me sir," thought Butch proudly, "him and me are goin' to be buddies."

But when Mr. Bull read the second ransom note, he said, "it isn't reasonable."

They remembered the 10,000 airplanes and that little Jan had a distant relative off in the north, who was as a hard-boiled fellow and nasty in a fight. John and Marianne hadn't been on more than speaking terms with him for a long time, but they sent him a wire and said: "Will you send us some cops?"

And Uncle Ivan answered laconically: "Bet your life."

GODFATHER now handed over to Butch the ransom money, so controlling his features as to hide everything except a look of ineradicable disgust and surprise.

"Dirty coward," thought Butch, shoving the ransom money back into Mr. Bull's hand. "Yuh think yuh can buy us off with that!" And he raised the ante.

"But we had a gentleman's agreement," said Mr. Bull, which for a moment, floored Butch, because nobody had ever before mentioned that word in his presence.

Then, on second thought, Mr. Bull added, "would you mind putting it in writing, sir."

• • • •

BECAUSE BUTCH announced he intended to go in with the gang and collect the money himself, and pick up anything else that was flying around, and, because little Jan was known as a belligerent child, he intended to cut off his arms and stick out one of his eyes, and clip off his tongue. "He'll live all right," said Butch, "even if he limps and stammers."

"An' furthermore," said Butch, "if the cops make any trouble we'll shoot it out, see?"

And now, Jan's godparents were very, very angry. But they didn't show it much, because they are civilized. And they didn't want to shoot it out, because they didn't have any disagreement with the people they'd have to shoot, only with Butch's gang, who had rounded them all up.

• • • •

ALSO A LINE had been dropped to them that there was considerable trouble inside Butch's ranks, and a lot of his followers were slipping along the word that the head was no bargain anyhow.

So they kept calling up more cops, all the time they were talking reasonable.

As is the custom in kidnaping cases, appeals to Butch's better nature were sent out on the cable wires and over the radio from all the parts of the world, begging him to have a heart and spare the child.

Butch had set a deadline: Let us in on Jan and the property on or before October 1, or get ready to shoot it out.

Nobody was paying much attention to little Jan, but he and his tutor, and the bodyguards, went on acting with lots of spunk.

"Just tell those bullies that if they're going to kill me, I'm going to die on my feet," he said.

"And I've still got a gun."

BUTCH HOWLED with rage. "You see," he said, "that just shows how dangerous that brat is." Nobody, however, saw.

It was decided to contact Butch again. Somebody thought of Lucky Spitale who lately had been practically out of the papers, even the tabloids only giving him a line now and then.

His picture was up in the postoffice, but the word went out that the indictment might be waived if he'd act as a go-between. Where to meet was a question. Butch couldn't very well move off the place on account of he'd have to bring practically an army as a bodyguard, so John and Marianne, said okay we'll meet you in your own headquarters.

Probably Lucky slipped them a line that what Butch really wanted was not so much the ransom as a chance to make an impression on his own gang, who were getting sour. "Let him ride in Jan's estate in a great big Mercedes car, and you can settle more or less on the first price," he said. "You know Butch is that way." Jan is not consulted.

• • • •

BUT PEOPLE—ordinary people—as a result of this case, are beginning to demand more serious measures against crime. They point out that this single kidnaping case has cost them, the people of all European countries, a sum not yet estimated, but running, unquestionably, into hundreds of millions of dollars, and has dislocated the economic life of every country. Their attitude is that Butch is a luxury which they cannot much longer afford. But they would very much prefer, still, that his own family, which has hitherto had a very good name, should deal with him.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

They Open the Time Capsule

(Owlf and Pipwir, two archeologists, are engaged 5,000 years from today in looking through the capsule buried at the New York World's Fair and filled with data significant of the civilization of 1939.

Pipwir (coming across one of those 1938 hats for women).—Well, what can this funny thing be?

Owlf—I don't know. But whatever it was it's a laugh.

Pipwir—It says here it was a hat worn by women of that era.

Owlf—I knew the women of that age were most peculiar, but they can't have been that crazy.

• • • •

Owlf—What kind of fellows were their men folks to stand for it?

Owlf—(examining them) — That explains it. They didn't care how they looked, either.

Pipwir—Digging up a telephone—I can't make any sense of this one.

Owlf—There's a tag on it. It says it was something called a telephone. People used it to communicate with one another back in those primitive days.

Pipwir—I remember reading about the custom. It was used by the people when they wished to to be driven mad.

Owlf—But did they really wish to be driven mad?

Pipwir—All the remains of that civilization show that the people regarded it as quite compulsory. Practically nobody remained sane and normal if they could help it, especially after the year 1932.

Owlf—What happened after 1932?

Pipwir—It's all too mixed up to make sense.

• • • •

Owlf—What have we here? It's marked "toothbrush." What was it used for?

Pipwir—It's very mysterious, but research has shown that in those days people had teeth. They depended on 'em for chewing their food instead of having all food absorbed and digested by electricity as we do today.

• • • •

Owlf—Here's something marked "can opener."

Pipwir—I've read something about those things. They were a successor to the bottle opener, so common in the prohibition age, but they were never so prevalent. Bottle openers were carried by everybody. They even wore them on watch chains.

• • • •

Owlf—Here's something labeled a timetable.

Pipwir (examining it carefully and observing all the notations, exceptions, qualifications, etc.)—NO WONDER THAT CIVILIZATION WENT STARK MAD AND PERISHED!

All Ears

The ladies are having to show their ears, and man's revenge has come at long last. For years the women have been gazing with combined fascination and repulsion at the misshapen pancakes that go for ears on men.

True, some of us are blessed with the well-tailored variety, as pink and shapely as sea-shells. But to be able to listen to sales talks and the manifold details of big business, one has to have generous ears; and the normal fisticuffs of youth have usually warped, dented or discolored them.

Woman, on the other hand, has ambushed her ears since childhood, and has exposed them to the soft breath of gossip rather than the blustering winds of argumentation. Now, though, the upswept coiffure has come in, laying bare these secret auricles of the sheltered sex, and the male is finding to his malicious delight that plenty of women's ears are nothing to brag about, either. The women have the last word, as usual, however: they can always cover up again, while man goes on laying his ears bare to fair weather and foul, the fists of his fellows and the gibes of his girl friends.

Books And Things

By Lewis Gannett.

The Great Ones.

"AN OLD MAN mad about writing"—so Ford Madox Ford defines himself as he embarked upon this massive book, "The March of Literature" (Dial, $3.75). He is appalled by the indifference of the lay world to the great books of the ages. A good sale for a good book, he notes, is 14,000 copies in England and 40,000 copies in America (very good, indeed, most publishers will mumble), and, since there are more than 50,000 professors of literature in the English-speaking world, that means that "one professor, in a life of conscientious labor, induces about 1.08 pupils to become, after tuition, reasonably civilized human beings."

Tuition, Ford Madox Ford holds, should be in the hands not of the learned, but of artist-practitioners, such as himself. So he writes of writers he has loved all his life, and he writes with passion. "The intrusion of the learned into the fields of literature," he believes, "is almost always a disaster, and the whole paraphernalia of universities, scholars, professors and dons serves, as a rule, for little more than philological exercises having as much use for the world as, say, a collection of postage stamps."

This story of "The March of Literature" is no "critical" work in the vulgar sense. "I must write only about the books that I have found attractive," he says; "I have such a distaste myself for writing injuriously about my fellows of the pen, though they may have been dead a thousand years, that I have, as you would say (he is here addressing an American college president), panned hardly any writer, except one or two fellows whose reputations may be considered as able to take care of themselves."

• • • •

NOR DOES Mr. Ford mince words of praise. I doubt if any history of literature ever has contained more gloriously unashamed superlatives. Let me cite a few:

"When you have mentioned Aeschylus, Sophocles and Euripides you have mentioned the only three practitioners of any art who ever produced works of art that were both immaculate and inevitable. You may look through the world when you will, before or since then, and you will find nothing ni any art or in any human manifestation that will match them. The Bible approaches them in greatness of allure, in poetry and in projection of life. But it has neither the flawlessness of surface nor the sense of destiny that you will find in the Greek works."

The "most pleasurable verse in all English poety" is Dryden's "What passion cannot music raise and quell" . . . and to Mr. Ford its cadence is further evidence that "English poetry depends on English music and died when music died in England." But the "most exquisite poetry in the world" is that of Tibullus, whose songs "are as old as those of the first navigators" and whose mind "as young as that of Col. Lindbergh when he first flew the Atlantic. It goes as directly to its goal. He is poet as the moon is moon.

"The 'Divine Comedy' of Dante stands out above the welter of sadism and ferocity of its era as the Cathedral of Chartres stands out and watches over all the plains of France and as the more gay Cathedral of Amiens dominates those terrible witnesses of human ferocity and madness—the fields behind the Somme . . . The really fine cathedrals of the world do not number more than a dozen. The immense cathedral-like works of the literary imagination not nearly so many. When you have said the names of the 'Odyssey,' of the Bible, of 'Obedipus Tyrranus,' of the 'Divine Comedy' itself, and the great and little testaments of Villon you have almost exhausted the catalogue of the great and omniscient works of humanity . . .

• • • •

THOSE STATELY verdicts give some impression of the passionate authority of Mr. Ford's verdicts upon literature. I should like to cite some of his startling comparisons: as of Aristophanes with Leon Daudet, the satiric French royalist, who admires Hitler; of Chaucer's eyes with those of W. H. Hudson, "that incomparable writer of English prose"—"so unobtrusive that neither man nor bird took alarm at his presence, and so observant that without taking a note he could give you the exact fold of a hood, detail of an ornament, facial wrinkle, or trick of speech"; of Catullus and Heine, the only poets in history who were at once tneder, cruelly satirical and in the grand manner. Or such a passing phrase as that referring to Shakespeare as "the greatest translator of all time," which it is unfair to cite without quoting more than I have space to quote of Mr. Ford's hot-blooded avowal of his incompetence to explain why Shakespeare's words, set one beside the other, vibrate and charm the senses as do those of no other of the ultimate masters of words, in any tongue.

Roosevelt Diplomacy

By Ernest K. Lindley

Peace Pleas Bear Fruit

THE FULL EXTENT of the diplomatic pressure applied by the United States during the last week may not be revealed fully for some time to come. Tacit admissions in official quarters support the circumstantial evidence that all channels of communication, both regular and informal, were used to muster world-wide support for the President's published appeals for a peaceful settlement of the European crisis.

It has been disclosed that in addition to those two published appeals, the President sent a personal note to Mussolini. There is reason to suspect that these were not the only direct communications to heads of governments which the President dispatched during the last few days. In other crises abroad during the years that he has been in the White House, he has buttressed the more formal devices of diplomacy with personal communications, some of them written in his own hand.

• • • •

WHETHER the diplomatic tugging and pulling from the White House was decisive in halting Europe on the brink of a precipice must be left for later judgment. The President's efforts were only a part of a whole complex of forces working for and against a general war. Their effect was restricted by the refusal of the United States to assume commitments in Europe which the President firmly reasserted. But he spoke, nevertheless, as the head of the world's most powerful nation. And behind his words hovered the great question mark: whether in the event of a prolonged general war the United States would adhere to its present determination to remain neutral. If the pause given by the Munich conference should result in a negotiated settlement of the current crisis, certainly the United States should feel entitled to a portion of the credit for averting a major war.

The Presidential diplomacy of the last week obviously has had a single objective: the prevention of a general European war with its inevitable serious consequences for the United States. But the individual moves, of necessity, had to be improvised as the situation changed from day to day and hour to hour.

THE PRESIDENT'S second appeal, sent directly to Chancellor Hitler, was as flattering in its way as Prime Minister Chamberlain's visit to Berchtesgaden. Missing were the harsh words which the President and Secretary Hull have visited upon the dictators and "aggressors" during the last five and one-half years. While the message singled out Hitler as the man who would be responsible for a general war if there was to be one, it held up to him the hope of being acclaimed throughout the world. It was intended both to soothe an angry man and to point to an honorable exit from a tight corner.

Whatever the President's diplomacy may have accomplished in Europe, the domestic political reaction to it has been extremely gratifying to his associates. They feel that he spoke for a united Nation more clearly, perhaps, than at any time since the early day of his administration. His public appeals were painstakingly drafteld with a view to avoiding ground for criticism from any of the various schools of thought concerning the proper role of the United States in European affairs.

HE ALLAYED the suspicion with which the strict isolationists have regarded his foreign policy by reaffirming the traditional policy of non-entanglement and even declining to assume any obligation in the conduct of the present negotiations. The more politically minded of the President's lieutenants believe that he went far toward blanketing the attempts already begun by some of the smartest leaders in the Republican Party to make political capital out of the "keep out of the war" sentiment.

Undoubtedly the President will strive to conserve in the conduct of his foreign policy the sense of national unity which his aides feel has been achieved during the last week. But they are aware that this will be difficult unless a negotiated settlement at Munich develops into a broader program holding a substantial hope for the appeasement of Europe. They know there is a lively movement to revive the Ludlow amendment to make our participation in a war, other than one of self-defense, dependent upon a national referendum. They look forward also to agitation for revision of the neutrality act in two directions—toward greater discretion for the President and toward a more rigid prescription of American policy by law.

ON THE OTHER hand, if the slight rift which appeared Wednesday in the European storm clouds should widen, the President and Secretary Hull may find the opportunity to push forward actively with their broad program for international appeasement. They have seen the peoples of all the nations of Europe recoil from the prospect of a general war. There is a feeling, still carefully restrained, in the Administration that if armed hostilities on a great scale can be averted now, the psychological moment may be at hand for something more than an armed truce. The main framework of territorial arrangements and political commitments is a European problem. But if there is any chance of a general settlement, the moral support and good offices of the United States undoubtedly will remain available.

Court Throws Out $1,000,000 Suit Over Quintuplets

Chicago, Sept. 29 (AP).—A $1,000,000 suit, based on charges Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe and three other defendants had conspired to break a contract for exploitation of the Dionne quintuplets, was dismissed in Federal court today.

Judge John P. Barnes threw the case out when he instructed the jury to find the defendants not guilty. He contended there was no evidence they conspired to induce Oliva Dionne, father of the five famous babies, to break the contract.

The suit was brought by Ivan I. Spear, a Chicago and Los Angeles promoter, who claimed Dionne had given him exclusive advertising, picture and exhibition rights.

Montgomery Workers Take Row to Court

Mrs. Beverly Wiltshire (Republican) and John Williams (Democrat), both employed in the Montgomery County Commissioners' office in Rockville, Md., yesterday filed mutual charges of assault and battery and both were released under $50 bond.

Williams, according to fellow employes, argued with Mrs. Wiltshire over her technique in receiving telephone messages for him, shortly after a dispute over his handling of a call for her. A hearing on the case will be held October 7.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Harlan Miller

Almost every day little groups of the younger New Dealers meet informally for what they call "cross-fertilization" of ideas. S metimes they gather over a 50-cent lunch; s o m e t i m e s at each other's homes in the evenings; sometimes at a club; sometimes over a glass of beer before dinner.

* * * *

These sessions bring together not merely the b r a i n-trusters who work in the same department or agency; these se. each other every day anyhow, threshing out problems over a lamb chop or sandwich. Food quickens thought, and ideas grow more fluid at such times than at an office conference.

* * * *

But the "cross-fertilization" occurs at gatherings of young Government officials, some of whose names seldom get into headlines, who work in different bureaus between which there is, to the naked eye, little or no connection. Since Herbert Hoover's memorable analysis of the conflict between many of the new bureaus, it has become clearer that they are as interrelated as a human pyramid.

30

"—New Dealers in a huddle"

There's little solemnity. I intend no sneer when I say that cross-fertilization is achieved with the pleasant, off-hand give-and-take of a bull session between cronies.

They repeat the latest official wisecracks and catchwords, discuss editorials and books they have read, call each other's attention to radio broadcasts and magazine articles some may have missed, keep their fingers on the pulse of public opinion and the "trend."

* * * *

To these huddles some bring their brief cases, some don't. There are New Dealers who can't go to the barbershop without a brief case . . . An abandoned group of Army cottages at Quoddy, Me. (it develops), may affect the relief situation in Cleveland . . . Something the Wages and Hours office has on its mind might give the NYA a new twist.

* * * *

They have a lusty sense of humor, like to poke fun at themselves and each other. I heard a young economist—the Government offices these days are acrawl with young economists—quote a devastating definition:

"Economists' solutions of problems are based on the assumption that those factors alone are absent from a situation which create the problem."

* * * *

Quite a few of the young New Dealers saw front-line service under Hugh Johnson, and the chaotic mushrooming and ill-planned expansion under NRA has been a valuable object lesson to them. They also remember his picturesque profanity. Once he called an obdurate industrialist a "revolving so-and-so"—which, he explained, meant that he was a so-and-so any way you looked at him.

This epithet has been streamlined by a young brain-truster; now it's "spherical so-and-so."

"—brain-trusters' free-for-all"

Occasionally these cross-fertilization bull sessions wind up in something like a free-for-all . . . The New Dealers, it cannot be emphasized enough, do not agree with each other on all points. They slow each other up and correct each others' directions. The technique and language of diplomacy is absent.

* * * *

One of the current wisecracks of the inner groups goes like this:

"We must avoid both the extremes of partiality on the one hand and of impartiality on the other hand."

* * * *

These informal conferences, of course, merely supplement the stiffer and more formal meetings between the top officials, complete with agenda, minutes of the meeting and clarifications of policy. These are regularly scheduled and much less fun.

It is refreshing to know that one informal group which met at a time when one of their projects was under fire began its session by asking each other solemnly:

"Are we fair-minded?"

Incidentally, a great many of them confess without shame that they have never read Karl Marx.

Republicans Renominate Gov. Nice

Sure to Win, He Says Tait Asks Big Effort Difficulties Cited Liquor Lobby Scored

By Edward T. Folliard

A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, Sept. 29.—Gov. Harry W. Nice, of Maryland, was formally nominated for a second term today by the Republican State convention.

In his speech of acceptance, the 61-year-old Governor predicted victory over Herbert R. O'Conor, 42-year-old Democratic nominee, on November 8. After hearing several orators predict that he would be the Republican Presidential nominee of 1940 if he wins this time, Nice said:

"I shall carry the battle to the very innermost tent of the opposition, and I have no fear of the result. I say to you, with every degree of confidence, that I shall be the next Governor of Maryland."

Galen L. Tait, former Republican State chairman, reminded the convention, however, that in normally Democratic Maryland it is no easy task to elect a Republican Governor. He reminded the delegates that it has only been done three tims—twice when the State experienced a "political revolution" and once when there was a division in the Democratic Party.

"Revolutions" in 1895, 1934

The "revolutions" were those of 1895, when the voters turned on the Gorman machine and elected Lloyd Lowndes, and 1934, when the electorate balked at giving the late Albert C. Ritchie a fifth term and elected Nice. The split in the Democratic Party occurred in 1911, permitting the election of Phillips Lee Goldsborough, the second Republican Governor in the history of the State.

Calls for Unity

"So it is," said Tait, "that if we do not have a political revolution, then we must have a deep division in the Democratic forces, and that appears to exist today. It is even more important that there be unity in the Republican ranks."

He was referring to the bitter fight between O'Conor and Mayor Howard W. Jackson, of Baltimore, in the recent Democratic primary, a fight which the Republicans are hoping will drive Jackson supporters to Nice or at least keep them at home on election day.

The complete Republican ticket chosen today was:

For Governor—Harry W. Nice, of Baltimore.

For United States Senator—Oscar Leser, of Baltimore.

For comptroller—Dr. W. G. Jack, of Port Deposit.

For clerk of the Court of Appeals—E. Ray Jones, of Oakland.

Denounce Liquor Lobby

In the platform adopted today, which was virtually written by Gov. Nice, the Republicans promised a State university for colored people, State-operated ferries across Chesapeake Bay, a State labor board and extension of the voting machines to those counties desiring them.

The platform denounced the liquor lobby at Annapolis and called for laws to abolish such pressure groups.

Like the Democrats, the Republicans also promised to do something about Maryland's peculiar primary system. They advocated that second-choice balloting be abolished, but that the convention system of nominating be retained.

The Republicans also pledged themselves to equalize Maryland gasoline prices with the prices in neighboring States.

Hagerstown Leases Temporary Quarters

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 29.—Hagerstown leased a building near its city hall today which will be used for temporary quarters for its departments while the new city hall is under construction.

The departments will move from the present city hall building by November 1, when razing of the 116-year-old building will be started. The new city hall will occupy the same site as the old building.

New Pastor Arrives

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 29.—Dr. William H. Beachler, of New Lebanon, Ohio, recently named pastor of the First Brethren Church here, arrived today and will assume charge Sunday.

Vaughan Workers to Vote

Galax, Va., Sept. 29 (AP).—William M. Gov. Nice and Wife at Convention

Gov. Harry Whinna Nice and Mrs. Nice yesterday attended the Republican State Convention in Baltimore in which he was renominated. The convention was routine to the Governor since he had no opposition, his opponent in the State primary, Harry T. Phoebus, having failed to carry a single county.

Dr. E. C. Levy, Public Health Head, Is Dead

Former Va. Professor Died in Richmond Funeral Rites Today

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Sept. 29.—Dr. Ernest C. Levy, 70, widely known for his public health work during the past 30 years, died today at the William Byrd Hotel after a prolonged illness.

Funeral services wil be conducted tomorrow by Rabbi Edward N. Calisch, of Beth Ahabah Synogogue.

Dr. Levy attended Richmond College and later received his degree in medicine from the Medical College of Virginia. In 1897 he was elected professor of histology, pathology and bacteriology at the Medical College of Virginia and held the chair until 1900, when he resigned in order to devote his time to special work in the field of public health.

He served as Richmond's bacteriologist and later as director of public welfare. In 195 he returned to the Medical College of Virginia as professor of preventive medicine. Later he went to Tampa, Fla., where he headed the city health department for three years.

Miss Lillian Bikle

Gettysburg, Pa., Sept. 29.—Funeral services will be held here tomorrow afternoon for Mrs. Lillian Bikle, 41, wife of Philip R. Bikle, insurance broker and former editor of the Gettysburg Times, who died at her home here on Tuesday afternoon. Her mother, Mrs. J. E. Kissinger; her husband, and two sisters survive.

D. W. Zentz

Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 29.—Funeral services will be held Friday for D. W. Zentz, 67, who died at his home here Tuesday. Services will be held in Waynesboro and interment will take place at Thurmont, Md. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary Winebrenner Zentz and a brother, Herbert Zentz, of Thurmont, Md.

Miss Julia B. Denton

Parsons, W. Va., Sept. 29.—Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon for Miss Julia B. Denton, 68, a school teacher for the past 38 years in Tucker, Randolph, Taylor and Ohio counties. She died at the home of her sister, Mrs. F. S. Holsberry, Parsons.

Thorning Says Czech Guns Deter Franco

Md. Professor Returns Was Behind Rebel Lines Ends 30,000-Mile Trip

By the Associated Press.

Emmitsburg, Md., Sept. 29.—Czechoslovakian artillery is more efficient than guns supplied Gen. Franco's forces in Spain, Dr. Joseph L. Thorning, professor of social history at Mount St. Mary's College, said today.

A frequent radio commentator and authority on the Spanish war, Dr. Thorning returned to the campus after a 30,000-mile trip during the past five months, which took him through Europe and South America.

Dr. Thorning said during his tour of three weeks behind the lines of Gen. Franco, the rightist officers told him the Skoda guns used by the loyalists were greatly superior to the Italian and German guns they were fusing.

He said the efficiency of the artillery was largely responsible for the inability of the rightists to bring the civil war in Spain to a quick end.

The professor was a delegate to the Eucharistic Congress in Budapest last spring, and from there he traveled through almost all of western Europe.

FSA Plans First Md. Tenant Loan

The first farm tenant loan in Maryland will be made to A. Wilson Dukes, 25-year-old tenant farmer, of Centerville, on Monday, the Farm Security Administration announced yesterday. The loan, for $8,500, is being made under the provisions of the Bankhead-Jones act designed to enable farm tenants with neither financial resources nor credit to acquire their own land.

Ceremonies marking the presentation of this loan will be held in the presence of FSA officials, members of the Maryland State and Queen Annes County "tenant purchase" committees, and friends and relatives of the Dukes. President H. C. Bryd, of the University of Maryland, will make the presentation.

High Court Affirms Md. Span Plans

Last Barrier Removed Ruling Clears Legality Bonds 'Not State Debt' Injunction Denied

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., Sept. 29.—Legality of the State act providing for construction of four bridges was upheld today by the Maryland Court of Appeals.

The court affirmed the decision of Judge Eugene O'Dunne in Baltimore, who refused to issue an injunction to prevent the State roads commission from proceeding with plans to construct the bridges across the Susquehanna, Potomac and Patapsco rivers and the Chesapeake Bay.

The enjoining order was sought by Clinton Wyatt, a taxpayer. The bridges, part of a $30,000,000 State program, figured in the Democratic primary campaign, during which President Roosevelt inspected a site at Morgantown. Representative David J. Lewis, defeated for the Senate nomination by Senator Millard E. Tydings, conferred with the President Tuesday, "trying to do something" which would permit their construction.

Objections Invalid

The appellate court settled all constitutional objections to the proposed bridges by declaring the objections invalid.

The principal issue, the court held, was whether the issuance of a revenue bond issue for the cost of the bridges would be unconstitutional under the statute that decrees the Legislature may not contract a debt without making provision for an annual tax to retire the debt.

The revenue bonds would be paid from bridge tolls.

The court held the revenue bonds were specifically created as self-retiring, and did not constitute a State debt, and that hence the objection was unfounded.

State Debt Not Boosted

The injunction petition also asserted the contract of the State highway commission for annual maintenance of the proposed bridges was unconstitutional under the same law. The opinion today said the bridges would become a part of the State highway system immediately on completion and maintenance would be only an ordinary highway maintenance burden, provided for in law, and in no sense an addition to the State's debt.

Objection on the ground that collection and disbursement of the bridge tolls was vested in the State roads commission instead of the State comptroller's office was also dismissed by the court. The opinion held the revenue bond debt was no concern of the State, and that it would be misapplication of the toll revenues to place them with the regular State revenues.

Va. U. Enrollment Increases to 2,787

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 29.—Registration figures continue to mount steadily at the University of Virginia, with 2,787 students enrolled—46 in excess of the total at the close of last session. Fully 200 more are expected to enroll during the college year.

At the convocation day exercises to be held Wednesday of next week President John Lloyd Newcomb will discuss plans for the year, and will also confer intermediate honors. The speaker for the day will be Sir Willmott Lewis, Washington correspondent for the London Times.

First Charles County Hospital To Open Early in November

The Physicians Memorial Hospital at La Plata, now nearing completion.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

La Plata, Md., Sept. 29.—The new $40,000 Charles County Hospital, dedicated to physicians of this county of former days, will be ready for occupancy early in November, it was reported here today.

Built along colonial lines, the new building was designed by James J. Baldwin, of Washington, D. C., and will provide accomodations for 22 beds including wards for both male and female colored patients.

The building committee has named the hospital "Physicians Memorial Hospital," and announced the furniture for the building is being donated by local and nearby citizens.

Long a need here, the new hospital will be the first in this county. Heretofore, patients have been taken to Baltimore or Washington hoppitals.

Answering a demand from the residents, the Legislature of 1937 passed an act authorizing a bond issue of $25,000 provided Charles Countians would subscribe $10,000 for the construction of the hospital.

A beautiful hilltop, adjacent to the county seat here was donated by the late Mrs. Hugh Roberts and her daughter, Miss Etta Roberts. The structure, 40x70, is of brick and will be furnished with modern hospital equipment.

Already work has begun on the beautification of the grounds. The lawn is being leveled off by using the dirt from the excavations. When this is completed grass will be sowed and shrubbery planted.

Martinsburg Plea For New Highway Given State Body

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Sept. 29.—A plea to the State road commission for more equitable distribution of road money and especially a ples for prompt attention to a proposed new highway via Nessle, this county, connecting with the Maryland State highway near Clearspring, Md., was made yesterday by the Martinsburg Chamber of Commerce.

Action followed a summary of the road situation here by Robert G. Coffman and Clarence E. Martin in which they offered figures supporting their charges of discrimination against the county over a period of five years on highway construction.

The Nessle project would involve use of a bridge across the Potomac offered by the Western Maryland Railroad, which is no longer using it. The road would connect with the Mercersburg (Pa.) road and furnish a more direct outlet to the north. Southward the road (N. 11) runs to Winchester, Va., and south.

August Employment Up 400 in Cumberland

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 29.—Nearly 400 more persons were employed in August than in July in Cumberland, according to the monthly bulletin of the Chamber of Commerce. Pay roll figures for August reached a total of $1,402,247.43

Dr. Maxton Lauds Culpeper Seed Cleaning Plant

Blackburg, Va., Sept. 28 (AP).—A seed cleaning plant in Culpeper County was cited today by Dr. J. L. Maxton, associate specialist in agricultural economics at Virginia Tech, as an example of the value of such a project to farmers of the surrounding countryside.

"The value of this plant to the Maxton said, "has been estimated farmers of the area served," Dr. at $60,000. The cost for cleaning was approximately $3,000, or 5 per cent of the gross value."

Since the study was made, the farmer owner, Harvey Carpenter, of Fitchella, Va., has enlarged the plant and installed equipment to double the capacity.

Frederick 'Slot' Drive Set Oct. 6

Jury Issues Warning County-Wide Cleanup Week's Grace Allowed Officers Threatened

By the Associated Press.

Frederick, Md., Sept. 29.—The September grand jury served notice today it intended to push "to the fullest extent of our power and authority" a drive to rid the county of gambling.

The jury gave owners and operators of gambling devices, illegal slot and pinball machines, until next Thursday to withdraw the machines from use.

The report was returned today after instructions by Judge Hammond Urner that the jury investigate gambling activity in the county.

The jury asked that "officers who fail to enforce the anti-gaming laws be summarily dismissed from office."

The week was decided upon after the State's attorney said that the ruling of the Court of Appeals last August 3 which declared illegal many types of pin ball machines operated without an element of skill, had caused confusion because it was "somewhat ambiguous."

The juror's report stated in part:

"We therefore, to the fullest extent of our power and authority, recommend, order and require that the sheriff of Frederick County, all deputy sheriffs, all constables, the mayor and council of Frederick and all Frederick police, the mayor and council of Brunswick, Emmitsburg and the authorities of all other towns in the county, shall . . . on Thursday October 6 and thereafter . . . See that every gambling machine and device other than legalized pinball machines are confiscated . . . and owners, lessors and operators . . . be arrested and prosecuted . . ."

U. S. Flood Aide At Cumberland

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 29 (AP).—Col. Robert A. Thomas, United States Army District Engineer, who replaced Maj. W. D. Luplow as chief of the United States Army Engineers in Washington, today paid an unexpected visit to this city.

Col. Thomas, who has flood control plans that would affect this city and nearby Ridgeley, W. Va., in his Washington office, said that he was here merely to study the layout. Accompanying him was E. A. Schmidt, principal engineer, attached to the engineer's office.

'Go to the Movies Week' Gets Under Way Today

Special Bookings to Entice Patrons
'Four Daughters' Moves to Metropolitan
News Notes and Gossip of Amusements

I WOULDN'T be sure that the Washington motion picture theaters need it, but there it is—take it or leave it. I mean the observance of "Go to the Movies Week," sponsored by every first-run theater in the Capital, beginning today and continuing through next Thursday, October 6.

BELL.

Washington has been going to the picture houses with rare persistence and in unusually large numbers these past few weeks. Lowe's Capitol recently broke all standing house attendance records with Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney in "Boys Town." The Earle, during the week that ended last night, has been consistently packing them in to see "Four Daughters" on the screen, and Wayne Morris and Johnny Davis, in person, on the stage. Prior to that, both houses had attracted generous patronage with two light comedies—one a comedy of dialogue, the other of situation—"Three Loves Has Nancy" and "Four's a Crowd, respectively. "Marie Antoinette," starring Norma Shearer, of course, enjoyed three notable weeks at the Palace and "Alexander's Ragtime Band" locally repeated its national success. "Carefree" also bulged the walls a bit at R. K. O.-Keith's. And that's the way it has gone since the inauguration of the "Movies' Greatest Year" campaign, feating the $250,000 "Movie Quiz" contest, with its fabulous grand prize in real money.

The "Go to the Movies Week" business is a part of that general campaign, planned by the motion picture industry, acting, for the first time in its history, in concert.

Part of the scheme, needless to say, has been the booking in all of the first-run houses in the Capital of film features that stand near the top of the scale—if not actually upon it—for this particular week. That endeavor seems to have been consummated with more than ordinary success. We already have committed ourselves with some extravagance upon the superlative quality of Columbia's picturization of the Moss Hart-George S. Kaufman Pulitzer Prize comedy, "You Can't Take It With You," opening for a theoretical single week at the Earle today and simultaneously for a six-day run, extending through next Wednesday, at the Ambassador. Lowe's Capitol presents Walter Wanger's most important recent production, "Algiers," with Charles Boyer, Hedy Lamarr and Sigrid Gurie, and brings back "Boys Town" and "Three Loves Has Nancy," at the Palace and Columbia, respectively. "Four Daughters" moves directly from the Earle to the screen at the Metropolitan and "Room Service," starring the Marx Brothers, romps into its second week at R. K. O.-Keith's to S. R. O. patronage. By no means to be left out of the running is the Belasco, also in its second week, with "Moonlight Sonata," the first picture in which Paderewski ever has appeared.

All of these attractions are doing, or give immediate promise of doing, such exorbitant business that it seems a little in the nature of a work of supererogation to lay stress on a "Go to the Movies Week." Judicious showshoppers would go anyway.

Even at that, I suppose theaters may be said to operate, like street cars and motor buses, on the tenable theory that there is "always room for one more."

• • • •

Speaking of "Four Daughters" and its transplantation today from the Earle to the Metropolitan, brings to mind the thought that of all the young actresses recently proselyted to Hollywood from other lines of theatrical activity, Priscilla Lane, cast in one of the most important roles in the Warner Brothers' film version of Fannie Hurst's story of "Sister Act," seems most surely headed for early individual stardom. When one considers her performances in "Varsity Show," her first picture, "Cowboy from Brooklyn," "Men Are Such Fools" and now "Four Daughters," the versatility and skill of this talented young blonde become pretty impressive.

The Children's Theater of New York will celebrate its seventh season in the National Capital this year with as attractive a repertoire of plays as it ever has presented in this city.

Opening with Margaret Sidney's 55-year-old best-seller, "The Five Little Peppers," the season will progress, as usual, through six children's classics, to be given at intervals ranging from four to five weeks. All will be presented on Saturday mornings, with the single exception of the one falling in Christmas week.

The complete schedule will be as follows: "Five Little Peppers," October 22; "Nobody's Boy, or the Adventures of Remi," November 19; "Cinderella," on Friday of Christmas week, December 30; Sir James M. Barrie's immortal "Peter Pan," January 28; "The Little Princess," March 4, and John Ruskin's "The King of the Golden River," April 8.

All tickets for these performances must be obtained in advance through the offices of the Children's Theater, 1734 F street. Season reservations are now being booked.

Owing to unavoidable circumstances, Rudolph Berger, Washington manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, will not be able to serve as general chairman of the Variety Club's annual banquet and ball, scheduled for the Willard Hotel the night of Saturday, November 19, as proclaimed in this space yesterday. With the withdrawal of Mr. Berger, announcement is made that the general chairmanship will be assumed by Abe Lichtman, one of best known and most popular of Washington's chain-theater owners. Mr. Berger, however, is not to go unsung. The first Variety Club smoker of the season, checked off on the calendar for Monday evening, October 10, at the Willard, will be in his honor as a former Chief Barker of the club. Harry Brown and Sam Wheeler will be the "kings for a day"—which, in this instance, happens to be a night.

Robert Lord, of the Warner West Coast studios, has advised Maj. Gen. Charles E. Kilbourne, superintendent of the Virginia Military Institute, that the world premiere of the film version of the V. M. I., comedy, "Brother Rat," will be held in Lexington, Va., some time during the latter part of October or early in November. Many of the background shots of the picture were photographed by a camera crew at Lexington last spring.

Wayne Morris and Johnny Davis, who closed their week of personal appearances at the Earle last night, both are prominently cast in the film. The play, as everyone must remember, was written by John Monks and Fred F. Finklehoff, graduates of V. M. I., in the class of 1932. The "shooting" of the picture was completed in August. It is the editing and scoring that is holding up the release date—if the release date is being held up.

It is Melvin D. Hildreth, well-known Washington attorney, walking encyclopedia of the circus, national president of the American Circus Fans Association and legal adviser to practically all of the tanbark shows playing under the big tops, who postcards from Geneva, Switzerland, under date of September 18, "Read your notes with much interest in Geneva." And what do you think Mr. Hildreth did to amuse himself in Geneva? Yeah. He went to a circus!

• • • •

Lou Smith, associate producer at Paramount, will arrive in Washington Monday morning with an advance print of "If I Were King," starring Ronald Coleman, with Ellen Drew cast in the leading feminine role. This picturzation of the Justin Huntley McCarthy legendary romance is looked upon as one of Paramount's most pretentious productions of the year. Coleman's appearance in the role of Francois Villon will be his first since "The Prisoner of Zenda."

Following a luncheon in compliment to Mr. Smith, Carter Barron, of Loew's, Inc., and his associates will hold a preview screening of the picture on Monday for the drama desks and invited guests.

• • • •

At this morning's first performance at the Earle Theater, the cast of "You Can't Take It With You," currently playing the National Theater, will be guests of the Warner management to view the film version of the same play.

who furnish much of the romantic and comedy interest in the Warner Brothers' production of "Four Daughters," based on Fannie Hurst's novel of "Sister Act." In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 29.—Sam Goldwyn can thank Merle Oberon for getting Laurence Olivier over to play opposite her in "Wuthering Heights." Hollywood once gave Olivier a bad deal. A fine actor, he came over first under contract but was given such poor parts that he went home. Finally he received a cable to return to play opposite Garbo in "Christina." Such was the rush that the studio had him cable all his measurements, so uniforms would be ready immediately on his arrival and he could step into the part. Lodon gave him a terrific press send-off. On arrival here Olivier found Jack Gilbert playing his part. He swore he'd never come back. But Merle has a way with her.

When Producer Harold Hurley was tearing off much needed sleep at his Lake Arrowhead peace and quiet cottage, he was awakened at dawn by shouts, stamping of feet. He poked his head out the window and yelled, only to discover one of his companies there getting outdoor shots for "Tom Sawyer, Detective." They swore they didn't know he lived there—he still doesn't believe them.

The passing of Kate Corberly, head of the story department at Metro, was a sad blow to all of us. I can think of nothing better than Jim Tully's tribute to Paul Bern—"May her dust choke the eagles."

Studios certainly take care of their people. They furnished police escorts for all their players to and from the Coliseum. I don't think I'll be able to ride without one now. I felt like a fugitive from a chain gang playing ring-around-the rosey with those red lights.

Burger still relates how he secured theatrical engagements for Jessie Costello, Mrs. Jack "Legs" Diamond, Mildred Harris Chaplin, Peggy Rich, John Dillinger's father . . . But before stepping in front of the microphone to explain his success—Sam Burger will file a petition in bankruptcy!

THE MOVIE VERSION of "You Can't Take It With You," following the script of the play, includes the scene where a Russian dance teacher sneers: "The Monte Carlo Ballet steenks" . . . Columbia, however, was not willing to assume the same risks incurred by the producers of the play. Before including this line in the scenario, the movie officials sent emissaries to S. Hurok, director of the Monte Carlo Ballet, and paid him $500 for a quit claim.

Lincoln Relative Hailed as Genius

Ann Todd is a genius, according to psychologists from the University of California at Los Angeles.

The 8-year-old fourth cousin of Mary Todd Lincoln, who has just won her first speaking role in films, that of the daughter of Herbert Marshall in "Zaza," recently underwent an intelligence test at the university.

The report of her examiners was that she has an intelligence quotient of 148.

With a quotient rating of 100 exceptional and 90 very good, the little girl from Longmount, Colo., who claims descent from the family of Mrs. Abraham Lincoln, is definitely on the intellectual side.

Eye on $1,500,000

Lee Ryan, special officer assigned to guard particularly valuable Warner Bros. sets, estimates he has protected $1,500,000 worth of property the six months he has had his odd job.

Bee Swarm Attacks Busy Movie Troupe

J. Carrol Naish, Robert Preston, Judith Barrett and several technicians working on "Illegal Traffic," were severely stung recently, when a swarm of bees descended upon the New York street set while they were shooting outdoor scenes.

The bees arrived in the middle of a scene in which "gangsters" were directing a fusillade of shots at an armored bank car. For one panicky moment, some of the victims thought the property man had loaded live cartridges instead of blanks.

Efforts to shoo the bees away with newspapers, mops and other weapons proved futile. So Director Louis King lighted a dozen smoke pots—such as Hollywood uses to manufacture its mist and fog—under the camera. The bees couldn't take it.

Maureen O'Sullivan passes most of her spare time away from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in her garden. As a result, Maureen, to date, has planted 250 plants, which she plans to take care of personally.

Paramount Boasts Huge Air Library

As the result of producing "Men With Wings," Technicolor cavalcade of the air, Paramount's research department has one of the largest—if not the largest—collection of books on the subject of aviation in the world today.

This was disclosed by Helen Gladys Percey, head of the department, who worked with William A. Wellman for six months on the production. Wellman, producer and director of the epic, also had his own personal secretary, Zolla Conan, building up a special file of information which at the present time fills four large volumes.

All of the books, more than 200, used in research on the production, will be held for further use in other aviation productions in the future.

Cave Gives Correct Sounds for Picture

In search of an eerie chant for the closing scenes of "Spawn of the North," the Paramount picture starring George Raft, Henry Fonda and Dorothy Lamour, a sound and music department unit took equipment and actors into Hollywood's Bronson Canyon cave.

This added sound will tie in with scenes made in the Alaskan Indian reservations by Director Henry Hathaway.

N.C. Company To Build School In Alexandria

$135,371 Bid Lowest
No Action on Sewage
Council Fears Expense

City council at a special meeting last night awarded the contract for the construction of a new elementary school building in the Beverley Hills section of Alexandria to the Goode Construction Corporation of Charlotte, N. C., on its low bid of $135,371. Bids on the school were received August 15 and rejected, the low bid at that time being $183,900.

Other bids received yesterday were from T. Calvin Owens, Bethesda, Md., $136,000; Northern Virginia Construction Co., of Alexandria, $137,740 and W. W. Burroughs, Alexandria, $146,784. These bids all contained alternate proposals for a building containing fewer rooms than originally called for, but it was decided to accept the bid on the building as originally planned.

State School Architect Raymond V. Long was at the meeting last night and opposed acceptance of the low bid.

In addition to the $135,371, the grounds for the building will cost the city $10,300 and equipment for the school an estimated $12,000, bringing the total cost to $160,671. A grant of $87,500, or 45 per cent of the original estimated cost of $150,000 has been made by the PWA. The city manager was authorized to make application for an additional $4,750.

Work on the new building will be started immediately after the contract has been signed and the building is to be ready for occupancy in September, 1939.

No Action on Sewers

Council last night was asked to give further consideration to a project for construction of a sewage disposal plant under a suspension of the rules, in order that an application might be made to the PWA for a grant. However, Councilmen William T. Wilkins and Henry O'B. Cooper declined to consents to a suspension of the rules, and the matter was discussed informally without any official action.

At its regular meeting Tuesday night, Council appropriated $1,000 for a survey to determine the approximate cost of the proposed plant. Informal estimates of cost for the project vary from $450,000 to $750,000, and some members of the council feel that the city is not in position to spend so large a sum, which, according to these councilmen, would necessitate an increase in the tax rate. It was also pointed out that the limit of the city's borrowing capacity has almost been reached.

Freight Rider Killed

Richard Patterson, colored, 24, of Kingsport, Tenn., while attempting to board a moving freight train at Union Station Wednesday night, fell beneath the wheels of the train, and was taken to the Alexandria Hospital, where he died. Patterson had both legs mangled. Dr. Llewellyn Powell, city coroner, will hold an inquest at 4 p. m. today.

Buses Rerouted

Announcement was made from the office of the city engineer yesterday that King street, between Fairfax and Washington streets, will be closed to traffic within the week, and, beginning today, buses will be rerouted, as the result of a repaving project. Local buses will use Cameron street, between Fairfax and Washington streets, and express buses will use Prince street.

Scottish Rite Reunion

The second meeting of the annual fall reunion of Scottish Rite bodies will held tonight at 7 o'clock, when the Washington Memorial Lodge of Perfection will confer the sixth, ninth and tenth degrees. Erdman T. Stultz is veneral master of the lodge, while Past Veneral Master Harry H. Newton is chairman of the reunion, designated as the "William Lewis Allen Memorial Class."

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

LAUGH, IF you must, at the WPA worker and his shovel, and the officials in the Bureau of Biological Survey will say: "What WPA workers? Not ours. They're doing a nice job over here."

Then they will take you down the corridor where 90 relief employes are literally "bringing the Survey up to date" and will explain: "No slouches, these people: 67 of them are skilled clerical workers; 10 are professional men and women, and 13 have had clerical experience of sorts."

CONSIDER THE Doctor of Philosophy over there, they will add. He taught for 17 years in a famous American University . . . and if the employment situation is bad, it still doesn't mitigate against the doctor's capabilities . . . and if he finds himself on WPA work, he still is willing, and "were fortunate to get him."

Particularly fortunate, the spokesman continues, because he is the right man in a long-unfilled spot. The Bureau of Biological Survey, harassed with current activity, wanted information on the American wolf, where—as Colonial records might indicate—the wolf was first found in America; where the animal retreated to when the settlers first came and what, in the meantime, has been its migratory habits.

AND WHILE the doctor, deep in the sources of research at the Congressional Library, the museums and elsewhere, carries on to what will result in a learned paper, others of the relief force—who were brought in with the one intention of bringing wild-life facts and the Survey's activities to date—are working at the files; and one small group, interestingly, is piecing together the skulls and furs of small animals and birds for the concise exhibits that scientists later will pore over.

Another group is recording the analyses of the contents of birds' stomachs. You will say, "why on earth? and what next?" and the spokesman says that this is the study through which the feeding habits of birds become known to science. By finding out what feeds are most taken by the birds, the scientists learn what feeds to plant in the game sanctuaries and other environments where wild life is preserved.

THOUSANDS OF such analyses had been made, and the findings were left in the files because other work was too pressing. Besides, the scientists can't give their time to clerical assembling of data; they want the data, however, after it is in usable shape.

Photographers are among them. Negatives come by the thousands every year to the Survey, pictures of all manner of wild life, and these piled deeply. Newspapers and magazines make continual demand for the prints. WPA photographers, before the project is completed, will have them all developed and the filing clerks will have arranged them for finger-tip action.

BRIEFLY, THE relief people are making available for immediate use a vast quantity of research material which has been dormant. And of the people:

They are residents of the District of Columbia, almost handpicked from relief rolls for this work. A majority of them are college people; among the number are two doctors of philosophy, a Phi Beta Kappa man and a former student of Oxford.

INDIVIDUALLY, they are interested only in the WPA as a stand until they can find regular employment somewhere in private industry or else in the regular Government employment, where many of them have been before and left when cut-offs or retrenchments of various kinds came along. And that they stay with the WPA only until they can find private or regular Governmental work is the policy of the WPA.

The number working in the Biological Survey is constantly fluctuating. The services of 30 were terminated during the period July 5 to September 22, and immediately found regular employment.

Supervising them is R. C. Hoffman, of the WPA, who has studied the project down to the last bird's feather and who has a sympathetic voice when someone comes to inquire about the possibilities of work.

Traffic Police Urged to Study 'Personalities'

By the Associated Press.

Dr. J. W. Sprowls, psychology professor at the University of Maryland, yesterday told traffic policemen attending the training school that popular psychology is a "bundle of gold brick alchemized by charlatans for the purpose of fleecing the public."

He said psychology is essentially the study of action and that habits of people must be studied in order that they could be controlled.

There are no short cuts to understanding people and the manipulation of human nature, he said, and that policemen should study personalities so that they can handle pedestrians and drivers better.

Visigoth Takes Flossmoor Purse

Chicago, Sept. 29 (U.P.).—Visigoth, the Shady Brook Farm's seven-year-old stake performer, romped to an easy victory in the Flossmoor purse at Hawthorne today, beating Catomar by four lengths with Merry Mood another head back in third place.

Jockey Jimmy McCoy let the imported Vespasiano and Merry Mood set the pace for the first half mile and then let the veteran run. Visigoth was clocked in 1:39 1-5 for the mile and paid $5.80 straight.

Grade-Crossing Parley Sought By Rockville

Blandford Asks Talk
Social Service Meeting
George Harp Divorced

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post.
9213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone SHepherd 4200

Rockville town officials requested a conference with the Maryland State roads commission on the proposed closing of the Rockville grade crossing today.

Mayor Douglas M. Blandford asked a conference with Chairman J. Glenn Beall of the roads commission. The Federal grant under which the overpass over the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad was constructed to eliminate the Rockville grade crossing, provides that the grade crossing be eliminated.

Members of the town council feel that the crossing should be left open until the approximately 1-mile link between the overhead crossing, Viers Mill road and the Baltimore road is completed. The council also wishes to have the old wooden bridge over the tracks placed in better condition and the approaches improved.

Social Service Meeting

The board of directors of the Montgomery County Social Service League will meet today at 3:30 p. m. in the juvenile courtroom at Rockville Courthouse to plan for the year's activities.

Members of the board are Dr. Edwin W. Broome, Dr. V. Ellicott, Miss Ruth Bolton, Mrs. J. W. Wisner, jr., Mrs. Alice Hostettler, Mrs. Creighton Jones Rhodes, Mrs. Raymond Clapper, Mrs. Austin LaMar, Mrs. Frank Zundel, Mrs. Dexter Bullard, Mrs. Vesta Wilcox and Douglas Whitlock.

Colored G. O. P. Rally

Leading workers of the 19 colored Republican clubs of the county composing the Montgomery County Republican Clubs will meet tonight in the Rockville colored elementary school on campaign plans. Furman Plummer, president of the countywide group, will preside.

Harps Divorced

George M. Harp, of Rockville, has been granted an absolute divorce from Mrs. Helen D. Harp, also of Rockville, by Judge Charles W. Woodward in Montgomery County Circuit Court.

Youthful Veteran

Twelve-year-old Marilyn Knowlden is playing her fifty-first screen role as Ann Sheridan at the age of 12 in "Angels With Dirty Faces."

Old Time Coffee Cake Wins Prize

Tops Contest
Dakota Recipe
Many Entered
Fall Favorite

FOREIGN LEGIONS of coffee cake recipes marched into competition in last week's contest. Coffee cakes from all parts of Europe and America proved that Mrs. Trendley Dean, who suggested the theme of this contest, was correct in her assumption that coffee cake was a universal favorite for fall meals.

Kringle koffee kake was entered as Denmark's contribution. Bundt kuechen came to Washington via Bohemian kitchens. Austria sent the contest judges fruchterbrod and several nut and fruit-filled streusels, also a homey coffee cake named after Aunt Martha. The French supplied dainty sweet rings and brioches such as savarin crescents, and the Germans were very much in evidence with stollens and kuechens.

Schnickerdoodle was the musical-comedy-sounding name of a sugary coffe cake from Norway, while Gertie's cake came from Moravia. Russia and Spain competed also, and Hawaii sent a honeyed pineapple creation.

Patriotic Victor

First award has been given to Mrs. Edwin J. Gregory, 617 Hamilton street northwest. Her cash prize of $3 was won on an old-fashioned New England coffee cake, which she also calls rich cake because of its abundant ingredients. Mrs. Gregory points out that this recipe is so lavish with nuts, fruits, molasses and its touch of brandy that its really the perfect cold weather supper dessert and turns into party fare when served hot and topped with whipped cream.

MRS. GREGORY.

New England Coffee Cake

Cream, 1 cup butter and 2 cups brown or white sugar; add ¾ cup raisins seeded and cut in pieces, and ¾ cup currants, then 4 eggs and 2 tablespoons molasses.

Sift together 3¾ cups flour, 5 teaspoons baking powder and 1 teaspoon cinnamon, ½ teaspoon clove, ½ teaspoon mace, ½ teaspoon allspice—add alternately with 1 cup cold boiled coffee. Then add ¼ cup citron, thinly sliced and cut in stripes and ¼ cup chopped English walnuts which have been lightly floured and last add 2 tablespoons brandy. Bake in deep-buttered pans in slow oven 1¼ hours. Top with whipped cream, if desired.

From the Dakotas

Second award of $2 has been won by Mrs. Charles F. Marvin, jr., 6005 Thirty-fourth place northwest. Apple cheese cake, as prescribed by Mrs. Marvin, hails from South Dakota, where it originally was handed down by sturdy Nords, but Mrs. Marvin remarks that New England also is celebrated for mildly flavored cakes such as her winner. Smoked hickory nuts, although hard to find locally, add delicacy to this mixture.

MRS. MARVIN.

Apple Cheese Cake

Sift 2 cups flour with 2 teaspoons baking powder and ½ teaspoon salt. Work in 4 tablespoons shortening as in making biscuit, then add ½ cup grated American cheese and mix lightly. Add 2-3 cup milk to 1 egg, which has been beaten, and stir into the dry ingredients only until mixed, but not smooth. Place in a deep layer-cake pan which has been oiled, and spread evenly. Pare and slice 3 ripe apples and arrange over the cake with the slices overlapping each other. Sprinkle with ½ cup sugar, 1 cup toasted cake or bread crumbs and 1 teaspoon cinnamon, dot with bits of butter, and chopped hickory nuts or pecans.

Delicious Covering

Mrs. B. C. Phillips, 631 Allison street northwest, has been awarded a $1 prize for a honey combed coffee cake. The melted butter, honey and pecans form such a delicate covering for the dough. Mrs. Phillips' cakes would be additionally good company fare if heated and served with the sauce made from the same custard as the filling.

MRS. PHILIPS.

Honey Comb Coffee Cake

Scald 1 cup milk or cream and set aside ¼ cup to cool 'til lukewarm. To the hot milk, add ¼ cup butter, ¼ cup sugar and ½ teaspoon salt. Dissolve 1 yeast cake in the cooled ¼ cup milk and add to the mixture. Add 1 well beaten egg and 2¾ cups flour. Cover and set in a warm place to rise about 1 hour until double in bulk. Melt the 4 tablespoons butter and 4 tablespoons honey in a 9-inch frying pan. Cook 3 minutes, add ¾ cup chopped pecans and cool. Beat the dough well and put on the top of the honey mixture on the frying pan. Use an iron pan, if you have one. Cover and let rise again for 45 minutes. Bake in a moderate hot oven 20 minutes. Turn out and cool. Split crosswise and fill with custard filling, replace top and serve in wedge-shaped pieces.

Custard Filling

Put 1 cup milk on to heat. Mix 1-3 cup sugar and 3 tablespoons flour and a pinch of salt together and pour slowly into the hot milk. Cook till thickened. Stir in the well beaten yolks of 3 eggs. Cook until thick. Take from fire and add 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Autumn Appetizer

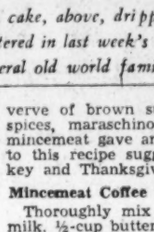
Mrs. E. S. Warder, Abell, Md., has won a $1 prize for a mincemeat coffee cake. Although other mincemeat cakes were entered in this competition, Mrs. Warder's mixture was considered unusually well blended. The verve of brown sugar added to spices, maraschinos, pecans and mincemeat gave an autumnal air to this recipe suggestive of turkey and Thanksgiving time.

Mincemeat Coffee Cake

Thoroughly mix 1 cup scalded milk, ½-cup butter, ½-cup sugar, ¼-teaspoon salt, cool till lukewarm. Add 1 crumbled yeast cake, 2 unbeaten eggs and 2¾-cups cake flour and beat to a smooth dough. Let rise to twice its bulk. Spread 2-3 of dough on well-greased dripping pan. Mix 1 cup minced meat, 4 tablespoons rum or sherry, 1-3 cup mareschino cherries and 1-3 cup broken pecan meats and sprinkle evenly over mincemeat, leaving spaces between spoonfuls, over this sprinkle ¼-cup brown sugar and 1 teaspoon cinnamon which have been thoroughly mixed. Bake in moderate oven (about 375 degree fahrenheit) for 30 minutes. Cut in diamond-shaped pieces and serve hot or cold.

Fruit Stuffed

Mrs. Mary E. Doyle, 3435 R street northwest, was awarded a $1 prize for her raisin-filled coffee cake. Although very economical to prepare, this recipe manages a full satisfying flavor plus protein value. The use of raisins as a filling creates an ideal after-school sweet for children, although figs, plums or peaches are pleasant changes for stuffing of this reliable basic dough.



MRS. DOYLE.

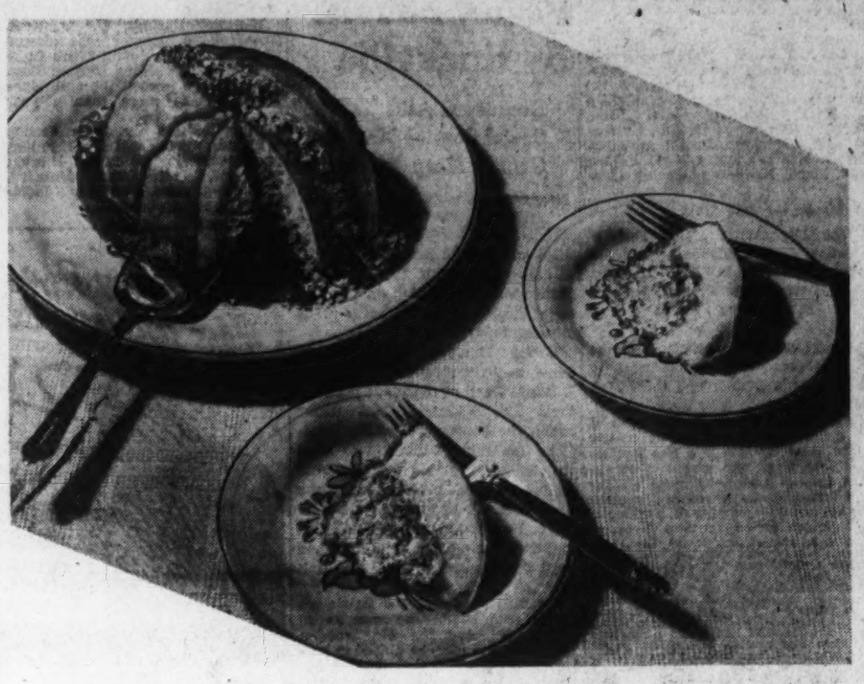
Raisin-Filled Coffee Cake

Follow directions for mixing your favorite baking-powder biscuits: Combine these ingredients: Three cups flour, ¾ teaspoonful salt, 1½ tablespoons baking powder and cut in 6 tablespoons shortening and add 1 egg yolk and 1 cupp milk for liquid. Roll out dough into rectangular shape about half inch thick. Spread with cooled raisin filling.

Raisin Filling

Blend ¼ cup sugar and 3 tablespoons cornstarch thorughly in saucepan. Add 1 cup hot water gradually, keeping mixture smooth; add 1¼ cups seedless raisins, ½ teaspoon salt, grated rind and juice of ½ lemon, juice of ½ orange (about 3 tablespoons), 2 tablespoons butter. Stir and cook together until mixture is thick. Remove from heat; add ½ cup broken nut meats, optional (if used on top of coffee cake, omit from filling); cool. Spread cooled filling over biscuit dough. Fold long sides of dough to center; fold in half lengthwise, bringing folded edges together. Moisten with water between these folds; press together. Tuck in ends of dough. Shape roll in curved half-moon on large, greased baking pan. Prick top. Brush top with left-over egg white mixed with 1 tablespoon water; sprinkle sugar and ¼ cup nut meats. Bake in moderately hot oven. This roll may be sliced and served warm as a pudding with hard, lemon or foamy pudsing sauce if desired.

European-Inspired Coffee Cake



THE NUT-TOPPED coffee cake, above, dripping its honey and spices, is but one of the many unusual contributions entered in last week's recipe contest. This plump melon-shaped cake is fashioned along the lines of several old world family recipes which competed for cash awards.

Buttermilk Uses Are Sought in Post Contest

THICK, snowy white buttermilk furnishes the theme for this week's recipe contest. This often maligned food has been suggested by Mrs. J. D. Chamberlain, 1348 Kenyon street northwest. Being an observant mother and housewife, she recommends this liquid food for its slimming properties and for its adaptability in the making of rolls, pies and biscuits.

Have you a favorite muffin or griddle cake recipe using buttermilk? Do you feel that the reducing properties claimed for this butter-skimmed food are particularly suited to your tastes, budget and figure? If so, enter your tested, carefully written recipe in this week's contest. October 8 is the closing date for entries. First prize is for $3, second is for $2, and there are three additional prizes of $1 each. Mail entries to Alice Clayton, The Post Food Editor.

Fall Supper Dish

Stuff hard-cooked eggs with minced salmon. Serve on crisp lettuce and top them with salad dressing mixed with a little chili sauce.

To Measure Butter

When a recipe calls for melted butter, don't measure the butter until it is melted. But if the directions read "butter, melted," measure before melting.

New Coffee Cake Mixture Suggested
Latin Recipe for Meat Loaf
New Use for Mayonnaise

DUE to lack of space in this week's recipe contest story, an open letter on the making of coffee cake is included in this week's counsel. Mrs. Trendly Dean, 224 North Jackson street, Arlington, who proposed this week's contest, has submitted these suggestions:

"DEAR ALICE CLAYTON: There is something about experimenting with things that appeals to me greatly, especially in the kitchen 'laboratory.' I like to take an expensive recipe and try to reduce its material cost, at the same time endeavoring to retain its palatable qualities (the Scotch in me, I suppose!). For example, my 'Nat' coffee-cake recipe, in itself very inexpensive, except for the quantity of butter called for (and French and most other Europeans use sweet, unsalted butter), I have made it with sweet butter, salt butter, butter substitutes of the vegetable variety, oleomargarine and even pure leaf lard. Once I tried it with water!

"So you see coffee cake is really within the realm of every woman's purse, provided she has the energy to mix the dough, plus the equipment with which to bake it. Peanuts can always be substituted for expensive nuts, and when baked one can hardly tell the difference. A little canned milk brushed over the top serves to give the coffee cake that professional gloss and is less expensive than egg yolks. I often toast coffee cake for breakfast, when it is particularly luscious with marmalade, and many times make "French toast" with it.

Latin Recipe

A Latin recipe picked up in the tropics is something of a hybrid, and yet, after reading the following recipe, it becomes clearer than ever that both Filippinos and Spaniards had something there. Mrs. Mary Francis Hiehle, 3422 South Dakota avenue northeast, passes on a uniquely flavored meat loaf recipe which turns out to be a sweet and sour food, ideal for hostesses who prefer a tang in their autumn menu plannings. She writes:

"DEAR ALICE CLAYTON:

"I just had to send you this recipe for Spanish breakfast loaf. My mother very often makes it and it is very tasteful and appetizing. This is from an old cookbook of Spanish recipes my mother collected in the Philippine Islands when she lived there 25 years ago.

Spanish Breakfast Loaf

"Sift together several times 2 cups flour, ½ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon salt and 1 tablespoon baking powder. Beat 2 eggs and to eggs add ⅓ cup milk and 1½ tablespoons melted shortening. Combine the dry and liquid ingredients, mix well, turn out on floured board and knead for 3 minutes. Place dough in large greased pan and allow to rise for 1 hour. Bake in moderate oven at 325 F. for 20 minutes, then increase heat to 350 F. and bake for 40 minutes longer. Remove loaf from pan, brush top with beaten egg yolk (1) diluted with a little cream. Cool loaf and sprinkle with powdered sugar. Slice thin and serve with orange marmalade or guava jelly."

Mayonnaise Polish

Mayonnaise has been credited with many uses around the home but never before with the virtues of furniture emollient. Mrs. Charles F. Marvin, jr., 6005 Thirty-fourth place northwest, writes that an aged unemployed cabinetmaker who repaired a mahogany Duncan Phyfe chair for her advised her to rub ordinary household mayonnaise on the wood to remove defects in the varnish and improve the finish.

An Unusual Fashion For Preparing Beef

Economy cuts of meat may be served in a way to please an epicure. A dish which will appeal to the most fastidious palate is found in this unusual way of preparing cubes of beef.

Beef Cubes in Sour Cream

2 pounds beef shank or neck
2 medium-sized onions
½ cup thick sour cream
½ cup water
2 tablespoons grated cheese
Salt and pepper

Have beef shank or neck cut into 1-inch cubes. Dredge these with flour and brown in hot lard. Add the onions, water, sour cream, grated cheese, salt and pepper. Cover tightly and let cook slowly until tender, about two hours.

Here's an Egg Trick Done With Tomatoes

Here's a good egg trick that is done with tomatoes. Cut a few firm, ripe tomatoes in 2-inch slices. Then scoop out the centers of the tomatoes and drop eggs in their place. Sprinkle them with seasonings and dot the tops with butter and broil them until the eggs are set. Serve on toast for luncheon or supper, with a creamy or cheese sauce.

Season the insides of the rolls, muffins or whichever casing you choose with butter. Toast them, then drop in the eggs. Add more seasonings, slices of bacon or squares of ham and bake until the eggs are firm. Add a fresh vegetable salad, a beverage and a dessert and a new and satisfying luncheon or supper menu is achieved.

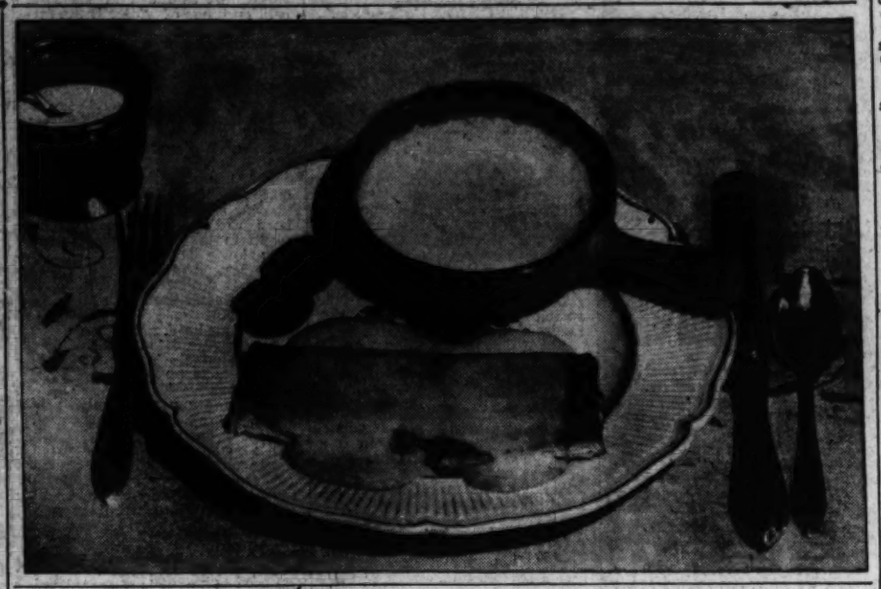
True of Other Meats Many Types Used Helps 'Stretch' Meal

By Alice Clayton.
The Post Food Editor.



WHAT'S SAUCE for the goose is usually good for the gander, according to a frugal homemaker who makes a fetish of stretching her food budget as well as her imagination. Living in the country and having the edge on city-bred neighbors by being able to step out of her back door to bring back a fat fowl for dinner, she has already served more than one plump goose for first fall meals. The goose she roasted for her company dinner this last Sunday was miraculously served again on Monday as a casserole and was to stretch until Wednesday's dinner as well. When asked how she planned to maneuver a dinner for four with only scraps of cold fowl, she slyly smiled and said something about sauces.

The sauce turned the tide, however, and it proved to be a tide of congratulations for this thrifty homemaker. Out of a minimum budget, a scant handful of chopped goose leftovers, some minced green peppers and onions, and an indescribable orange sauce, a dinner of memorable appeal was created. Of course there was a sweet potato pone, garden peas and a shredded carrot and beet salad to fulfill sharp appetite needs and the diced goose, with its creamy orange sauce, was heaped on French toast to make an eye appealing dish. Complimented on her dinner, the thrifty housewife beamed and insisted that "any meal can be made to stretch miles further and taste lots better when just the right sauce is added to scraps of meat, fish, fowl or even vegetables."

Helps Economize

Aside from being the perfect solution for economizing on expensive entree foods, sauces have high food value, as the majority of them contain vitamins, proteins, fats and carbohydrates. Milk, cream, butter, oil or vegetable puree, which comprise the usual sauce base, are all high in these strengthening elements. Children as a rule will react more quickly and favorably to camouflaged milk sauces than to any other healthful food in disguise.

Mrs. Archibald Robertson, a follower of the food page, who has recently moved from Washington into an old farmhouse in Burke, Va., has taken to gardening, and consequently prides herself on serving her own truck produce in different guises from day to day. In preparing a guest dinner recently Mrs. Robertson served rolled cuts of fragrant ham on a large silver salver. There were tiny stalks of garden asparagus on the same platter, and over these two mildly flavored foods was poured a tart cheese sauce with just the proper suspicion of sherry. A capacious bowl of assorted greens and vegetables and little home-made biscuits spread with jellies and preserves were served with the entree.

Despite Mrs. Robertson's sage use and knowledge of sauces, she, like other epicureans, collects unusual recipes of her favorite foods for future trial. Along with other readers, she has requested pungent sauce recipes, adaptable for not only entree stretching, but for dessert or salad expansion. Here are some home recommended suggestions.

Sauce Joinville

Add 2 tablespoons flour to 1¼ cups fish stock, or water, and beat until smooth, set over a fire and cook for a few minutes. Beat 2 egg yolks together with 2 tablespoons of white wine, add to the stock and continue to beat vigorously. Cook slowly until sauce is thickened, remove from fire and stir in 7 tablespoons of butter. Add 1 small can fine sliced mushrooms first cooked in butter, 6 oz. cooked shrimps, or crawfish, and seasonings to taste. Pour the sauce over fillets or other delicate fish course. The sauce should be thick enough so that it does not run easily.

Clear Pudding Sauce

Measure ½ cup sugar, ½ tablespoon cornstarch and ⅛ teaspoon salt into a saucepan. Add 1 cup boiling water slowly, stirring it in carefully to make a smooth sauce. Heat to boiling and cook, stirring constantly, until thickened, smooth and clear. Add 1 tablespoons butter and 1 teaspoon flavoring and serve hot. For flavoring, ½ tablespoon vanilla and a dash of nutmeg may be used. For a tastier sauce add ¾ cup of wine, sherry or Madeira.

Piquant Sauce

Add to brown sauce ½ teaspoon sugar and 1 tablespoon of each of the following: Vinegar, tarragon vinegar, minced onion, minced capers, minced gherkins and minced olives. If all of the accessories are not available use larger quantities of the others. Reheat and serve.

Tomato Curry Sauce

Cook 1 small diced onion in 2 tablespoons fat over low heat for about 10 minutes; the onion should not be brown. Stir 1 tablespoon cold water into 1 tablespoon curry powder to form a paste and add to the fat and onions. Stir in the following ingredients: ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 cup tomato pulp, few drops Worcestershire sauce, few drops tabasco sauce and cook slowly for 5 to 10 minutes, so that the flavors will blend.

Tasteful First Course

For a refreshing first luncheon course, cut half-inch slices of fresh pineapple and watermelon into two-inch rounds with a crinkly-edged cooky cutter. Alternate two slices each of melon and pineapple to a portion. Top the combination with blueberries or other fresh fruit, garnish with fresh mint and serve ice-cold.

Bountiful Crops Fill Markets With Fruits and Vegetables

THIS HARVEST SEASON is one of plenty, despite recent rains. The good earth has provided tons of choice fruits and vegetables which now lend their color and fragrance to grocers' stalls and bins. In visiting nearby markets, sea food, meats and fowls were relegated to back seats this week in favor of the plentiful autumnal produce.

Cabbage is leading the field by a wide margin, for weather conditions have been just right for this inexpensive vegetable. So many cabbage heads have been lolling around the market in the last few days that they're selling for one-fiftieth of what they brought four years ago during drought season.

Bumper onion crops in the West and in New England have created unusually full stocks in markets here. Home-grown red onions are in town and a few Italian onions bring strong contrast to the milder-flavored Spanish and pickling ones.

Crisp celery is good looking at present and obtainable on limited budgets. Lima and snap beans, Boston and romaine lettuce, cucumbers and luscious tomatoes are reasonably priced. Eggplant is plump and begging to be fried, scalloped or baked. Bright ears of corn which lent so much appeal to late summer dinners, are on the way out, but there are still a few species that would be exactly right for vegetable dinners.

New England boiled suppers could be conceived by even the most cursory shoppers these days, for a glance at local markets is sufficient for the most fastidious menu planner. The least expensive vegetables lend themselves to meatless meals, as well as do mushrooms, endive, artichokes or some of the more costly vegetables. Turnips, carrots, beets, parsnips or squash would do well blended with tomatoes, potatoes or okra.

Grilled peaches, pears or apples provide taste diversion for meatless meals, and these plentiful fruits may be purchased for very few pennies. Delaware and New Jersey peaches are economical in price, and although the famed Georgia Belle has faded out, a beautiful California peach has taken its place. An obliging grocer offered one of these West Coast peaches as proof that not only is the fruit rich in taste but sizable, to boot. One of these peaches was as large as a small grapefruit.

Small Tomatoes

Those small tomatoes often found at the end of the season make attractive appetizers. Peel and stuff them with diced cheese mixed with salad dressing. Broil or bake them for ten minutes and serve them on hot buttered toast. They also may be served as the main course for luncheon or supper.

Gingerbread Keeps Universal Appeal

Gingerbread may be called old-fashioned, but it is an old fashion of which families never tire. Served piping hot from the oven with whipped cream and a baked apple, it is a dessert of universal appeal. Served cold, in company with fresh or canned fruit, it will meet with general approval. Or with chocolate frosting, it makes a welcome dessert by itself.

GINGERBREAD

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
¼ teaspoon soda
2 teaspoons ginger
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon salt
⅓ cup butter or other shortening
½ cup sugar
1 egg, unbeaten
⅔ cup molasses
¾ cup sour milk or buttermilk

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder, soda, spices and salt, and sift together three times. Cream thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well; then molasses. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Bake in greased pan, 8 by 8 by 2 inches, in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) 50 minutes, or done. Serve plain, or cut in squares and top with molasses whipped cream, made by folding 2 tablespoons molasses into ½ cup cream, whipped.

Your Figure

Juliana Forgot Her Diet, Gains Weigh

Took Off 20 Pounds
Trim Figure Was News
Scales Climb Again

By Ida Jean Kain.

PRINCESS Juliana of Holland is not the only one who has a hard time keeping slim. When the Princess took off 20 pounds, her svelte figure was news. But now the scales are climbing again, and it looks as though the food habits that helped her to lose weight may have been forgotten.

That is something for you to guard against now that you are coming to the end of your "Twenty-One-Day Diet" and are succeeding in losing 10 pounds. Whether or not you can keep those pounds off will depend upon your food habits. If there is any objection to this diet, it is in the rapidity with which the weight is reduced. You are not on the diet long enough to learn to like the foods that will let you stay slim.

It will take a little time, but you must cultivate a preference for those foods—known as the "protective foods"—which formed the basis of the restricted diet. Although you are no longer counting calories so carefully and have a wider choice, the main items in your daily fare should continue to be eggs, milk, lean meat, fruits and vegetables, and they should comprise at least 800 calories out of the day's total.

Safeguard Your Health

Only by giving these important foods first place in your diet is it possible to keep your weight under control. They are important not only from the standpoint of weight control, but also because they safeguard your health and beauty. You must have eggs, meat and milk or cheese for protein, calcium and iron. You must have fruits, vegetables and whole grains and butter for the minerals and vitamins.

Another effective means of controlling your weight is through exercise. In this way, the fat deposits are repelled, the musculature is kept in tone, and the measurements undergo steady improvement. Exercise is something that goes on forever—or, at least, as long as you want to be streamlined! You will never be able to settle down to solid comfort. But cheer up! Once you perfect your measurements a small amount of daily exercise will do the trick of keeping them that way.

Antique Jewelry for the Modern Maid

IF YOU HAVE any old-fashioned jewelry in the family vaults or trunks, now is the time to get it out. If you haven't, the nyou can get modern pieces that are copies of the lavalieres, dog collars, lockets and brooches that our grandmothers wore. Modern jewelry is going back into the centuries for its inspiration. Above is shown how effective antique jewelry may be on youthful arms and shoulders. The designs shown, which are by Charlotte of Paris, were adapted from rare old museum pieces in the Palace of Versailles. They are of gold filigree set with crystals and bordered with tiny enamel leaves.

Red, Green, Black In Color Lead For Fall

Paris (U.P.)—Red, green and black all jump to an early lead in the fall color race. Brown, unless it is in warm brick shades, may be an occasional winner, but Paris, as usual, regards it as somewhat of a "long shot."

Red finds one of its prime supporters in Creed, the tailor who manages to find a happy medium between the masculine and feminine in his wool suits. And red, chez Creed, is combined with black so often and so effectively that the combination seems bound to take effect sooner or later.

The red is none of those exotic off-shades such as fuchsia, tomato, tangerine or any of the family. It's a simple red, the red that goes with blue and yellow in a box of primary color crayons.

A Woman's New York

—by Alice Hughes

New York, Sept. 29.

IN AND about town there are several residence clubs and hotels exclusively for girls—most of them young, many of them pretty, and practically all of them employed in the various marts of trade. The largest of them, and probably the best known, is the large Hotel Barbizon, which looms high on the horizon at Sixty-third street and Lexington avenue.

ALICE HUGHES.

Its lobby is an interesting picture, especially on a quiet Sunday afternoon, when the young ladies have their dates, and the lobby is littered with expectant yet slightly jittery young men who are waiting for the dream-girls to descend from the no-man's-land above. Their eyes are riveted on the elevators, and the minute the gal of their heart issues from the lift, the lad leaps from his chair as though fired from a gun, and arm in arm they issue into the outer air, which is the common property of both sexes.

The ladies are also permitted to entertain their gempman friends in a large room on the eighteenth floor. There is often a bridge orgy in progress there, and the younger sportin' set engages in vicious ping-pong battles. But all is restrained and orderly, and I have a deep-seated hunch that the young men are not too happy there, much preferring to issue into the night and seek a bit of privacy over a lamplit table in some quiet restaurant.

No doubt these big hives of femininity are most useful, especially to nervous mothers who want their chicks to live in utterly pure and untainted surroundings. But I am also certain that the young ladies are all agog with pleasure when the handsome date turns up in the lobby. Their bright eyes show it, and why not?

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The latest second generation girl to lease her beauty to Broadway is Yolanda Yugarte, who is the daughter of the late Hilda Ferguson, who was one of Ziegfeld's loveliest girls at the age of 16. Yolanda will be on display at Nils Granlund's new Swedish restaurant, "The Midnight Sun."

Well, our leading problem child, 13-year-old Bobby Stap, who has stowed away four times in the past year and has traveled 20,000 miles on the cuff, is going to be a sailor, since that is what he seems to want. He is to become a cadet at our Merchant Marine School. He's smart in school, but just longs for a life on the ocean wave and a home on the rolling deep. Probably he'll get it now, if he can be patient.

The other day I sat down to luncheon with well-known fashion women—Winifred Ovitte, Esther Lyman, Sara Pennoyer, Marjorie Holligan and Alice Perkins, of Paris. And what did we talk but shop. At last, over the demmy tassy, we rigged up a list of the most outstanding fashion developments of the past 25 years. They are, not necessarily in the order of their importance: Bobbed hair, the hobble skirt, the boyish-form bra, the dropping of the skirt hem in 1928, and the upswished hair of today. A formidable list, indeed, but maybe you could add one or two.

Gladys M. Curry, dietician at New York University, has just opened a cooking class for men only. She says that husbands should cook at least one dinner a week, and she proposes to teach them how. Well, there are many famous male cooks in this town, and I don't mean professional chefs. Mine can shake up a tasty rasher of bacon.

El Morocco, night haunt of the plush set, opened night before last, and its famous zebra-striped wall benches are again holding our fanciest girls and boys, hoping that a cameraman will come along and snap them unaware. Well, practically.

One of the smartest advertising managers in town is my friend, Ruth West, whose post of duty is at a very famous store. Ruth is nail-conscious, for one minor thing, and this sense has just caused her to bring forth a green polish, which is already considered high-style. Well, our claws have now been every other color. We might as well take a crack at green, I suppose.

This column appears daily and Sunday.

The Fashionable Miss.

To the smaller miss of 6 to 16 go the honors as the most style-conscious member of the family this fall. Swedish modern, style note of the recent Merchandise Mart homefurnishings market, is a "must" also in the apparel field, with sweaters, dresses and playclothes showing the gay prints characteristic of the Swedish modern trend. Dirndl and laced front bodices over little peasant frocks are numerous, with the suspender type dress almost as important. Snow suits, or coats with leggings, are almost universally shown, with such new tricks as bells for buttons to amuse young America.

Shantung Dress.

Paris (U.P.)—Simplicity marks Bruyere's pale orange shantung dress whose only trimming is a narrow, round neck band of black and white embroidered flowers. The tie belt is of the dress material and knots in the center of the back.

Combine gray shantung with deep red shantung piping for a striking dress whose accordion pleated skirt starts at a low hipline.

The Gentler Sex

—By Malvina Lindsay

Home Fires

I

I go on arranging pink gladiolas in an ivory vase,
While the lives of millions of men hang in the balance,
And when I have made the house pleasant and placed the marigolds
Where the sunlight will fall on them as it streams through the window—
Was that the cry of an extra?
. . . Or only some children grown raucous?—
I shall dress and go downtown to the luncheon
Jane's having in honor of her sister-in-law from Detroit,
And then after that I shall look for a dress for Sue's party.

II

I wonder if I would look best in a romantic hooped taffeta,
Or in a gleaming black satin cut svelte, worn with rhinestones?—
It IS an extra; Oh, if their voices were only a little less strident!
I'll put down the window—How kind and how mild is the breeze
Where the September sun has caressed it—and I must plan for tonight,
If the Carter's come over for bridge, we must have some small sandwiches
And cakes and an ice—oh it all seems so indecent . . .
Yet what can I do? After all
I am only one woman.

III.

I shall now go upstairs and massage my face with cold cream,
And pat it astringent and put on rouge and mascara,
And my new suit and blouse—they'll be dressed in an inch of their lives—
Now the loud speaker's bleating across at the neighbor's!
Something else must have happened! And why should an ambulance Have to shriek just at this moment? If only I could walk in the forest,
Or go to some very still room where no echoes could reach me,
Of man's conflict with man, of the clash between brothers!

IV.

There is surely some place in the world where one can escape it,
A little cove in the bay, the fastnesses of a mountain,
Yet there would be headlines and radios eventually,
Yes, even in time perhaps strange airplanes above me;
Anyway, I must hurry and get downtown early,
Perhaps I'll have time to look around before luncheon
For that bracelet I need to give my gloves dash—
Oh, Heavens, how petty; . . .
when men may be dying.

V.

If only I could feel bristling and righteously militant.
Or even say smugly, "Oh, well,
it's all over there,
It's none of our business, there's an ocean between us—"
Oh why do so many ambulances have to be shrieking
Just at this time? Oh well, I must go and get ready,
Or I'll be late for the fruit cup or else the shrimp cocktail.
I suppose she'll have half a spring chicken and cute little favors—
Am I imagining things, or is that the new call of an extra?

VI.

After all why should I have this strange besetting feeling of guilt?
It is not my quarrel and life must go on no matter what happens,
And anyway what can I do when those who are wiser have failed?
I will put on my hat and go to the luncheon—and yet—
Well I wonder—it all someway seems so unfitting,
A noisy wake at a funeral,
when all should be praying,
And women the most—it IS the call of an extra!
But I must rush on so I won't keep the girls waiting.

Creole Scramble Fine For a Filling Meal

Old-fashioned Creole scramble is a delicious "filler-upper" for any meal. Brown some minced green peppers, chopped onions and celery in bacon fat. Add six eggs beaten together with half a cup of cold water and three tablespoons of chili sauce. Cook slowly and stir constantly until creamy. Serve on a warm platter and garnish with link sausage and broiled tomato slices. With stacks of good hot toast or cornbread this is a meal!

'Freak' Furs Worn.

Paris (U.P.)—The incredible popularity of silver fox trimmings is threatened by the attempt to revive blue, red and "freak" foxes—such as spotted prairie animals. According to Mme de Pombo, brilliant Spanish designer for the firm of Joseph Paquin, silver fox's sheen has a tendency to age most faces. She joyfully predicts its fall from grace.

Pears Delicious When Preserved

Fresh pears are a tempting treat during the still warm days of Indian summer. They will be enjoyed just as much in the long cold evenings of winter if the following suggestions for preserving their delicate flavor are carried out.

SPICED PEARS

5 pounds pears
1 teaspoon whole cloves
1 tablespoon broken stick cinnamon
4 pounds granulated sugar
1 quart vinegar

Pare the pears, leaving the stems on. Mix granulated sugar and vinegar and add spices that have been tied in cheesecloth. Heat syrup to the boiling point. Let boil slowly 30 minutes. Remove spice bag. Add fruit to the syrup and heat until fruit is soft. Seal at once in sterilized glass jars.

PEAR JAM

4 pounds hard, green pears
8 cups granulated sugar
2 to 4 ounces ginger root (according to taste)
6 lemons

Soak ginger root overnight; in the morning boil 15 minutes, cool, peel and chop very fine. Wash and remove skin and cores from pears, chop fine, add the grated rind from 3 lemons and juice from all 6 lemons. Add sugar and boil thick. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

PEAR CONSERVE

To 5 pounds of hard (underripe) pears, peeled and cut in small pieces, add 5 pounds of granulated sugar; let stand overnight. Then add 1 pound seedless raisins, rind of 2 oranges, cut in small pieces, and the juice of 3 oranges and 2 lemons. Cook until soft. Pour into sterilized jars and seal.

Pitchers Colorful Table Aids

In keeping with the trend inward making your table as gay and colorful as possible, pitchers are no longer just of glass or silver. Your table may be decked with an innkeeper astride a keg of beer, a dog or pig that proves to be a itcher; a fat friar, a pig dressed in the garments of an innkeeper, or one which resembles stalks of celery. Reproductions of the busts of famous people are also favored, with Napoleon's head leading the list. Tobey pitchers, popular years ago, are returning to favor, in graduated sizes.

Girl Would Marry Shy Young Man She Has Known For 18 Months; How to Win Proposal?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What is the best way to make a shy young man propose marriage? He is afraid of the responsibilities of marriage, though he is financially able to support a home alone, and has a good future in the professional world. I am the only girl he has dated in the past year and a half. He says that he can't marry now, but he doesn't say that he does not love me—only that he doesn't know.

Of course, a woman likes to believe that the man she loves returns her love; and tells herself that she knows he loves her—but I have never permitted myself to believe it or think it except when I had been told in so many words and had been urged by the man in question to marry him. So I am not prepared to say that this young man's long friendship for me connotes love. However, I do know that my friendship for him has turned to love, but there seems to be nothing I can do about the vital problem.

Do you think it is wise for two such people as us to live in the same boarding house, where we have the same friends and are constantly thrown together? Please tell me what you truly think, because I am going to follow your advice, even though it may be difficult to do so.
Sincerely yours, A GIRL.

Overt Aggression Fatal

DEAR GIRL: Some optimist has said that any woman can win the heart of any man—if she steadfastly concentrates on that objective. Somewhere in Margaret Lawrence's brilliant writings is an observation to the effect that the average man seldom loves spontaneously, but readily responds to loving. The tremendous efficacy of propinquity in promoting mutual devotion is a matter of common knowledge. All of which sums up to the conclusion that you have a better than 50-50 chance to entice your young man to the altar, if you play your hand in an intelligent, seemly manner.

However, it appears that you are falling definitely short of the required technique; that you have made the serious initial mistake with this man of betraying over-eager marrying intent; and that, in consequence, you have him in an awkwardly defensive position, rather than in the (implied, at least) offensive position which would make for satisfactory courtship and eventual marriage. Nothing goes more against the grain of romantic masculine nature than the inverse exertion of having apologetically to defend, and lamely to explain, an imputed lack of aggression toward a given lady. It causes him to feel mean, shamed, confused and unmanly. It turns his whole sentimental scheme of things inside out and upside down. So far as the lady is concerned, his emotional machinery gets going in reverse motion.

When a man doesn't know his own mind concerning his best girl; when he is emotionally averse to the responsibilities of marriage, he ought to be left entirely free (so far as overt pressure from her is concerned) to worry things through for himself and come to his own conclusion. If her attitude is one of gentle amusement and blithe indifference, of serene emotional self-containment; if she reveals, on occasion, a capacity for illimitable special devotion that is stardily held in check for the man who proves himself worthy of and entitled to it; if she supplies him with undeniably attractive rival contenders for her society, and generally gives evidence of being irresistibly swept forward toward marriage as her destiny, by virtue of her own great zest for living—the chances are 10 to 1 that he is going to conquer his indecision long enough to marry her, and feel that in so doing he carried off a great prize that was worth the sacrifice he made.

The value of propinquity in such a "catch-me-if-you-can" campaign is inestimable. Constant casual association gives opportunity for proving over and over again her unique compatability with the man desired, while simultaneously demonstrating under his very nose the degree of her attractiveness to other men, and the receptiveness of her interest in them. There develops an implicit, unspoken mutual understanding that here is something he may have, if he makes the effort—but only if he makes the effort; and something he is sure to lose unless he acts in time. In dealing with such a man, a girl has to set a rather high premium on herself, and very definitely leave it up to the man to meet that price or be bereft.

In this case, if the man is at all interested, it should be fairly simple to win a proposal by reversing your former tactics. Since you are the only girl he has beaued in a year and a half, he has probably become far more dependent on your society than he realizes—and the reason he doesn't realize it is because you have made yourself too easily available. You are always there when he wants you, no doubt; and probably also there when he isn't particularly eager to see you; when he might infinitely prefer an interval of isolated self-renewal. I suggest you make a tactfully unobtrusive point of keeping out of his way; of making it necessary for him to seek you out; and that you by all means muster a couple of rival suitors. A short course of happy-hearted absent treatment is probably all that is needed to bring his interest to the forthright-proposal point. M. H.

How the Small Intestine And Its Glands Function

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Food undergoes its most profound digestive changes in the small intestines. Here it comes into contact with the secretion from the pancreas. This is the most powerful of the digestive secretions, and is capable of digesting any form of foodstuff—protein, starch and fat.

The pancreas lies in the upper abdomen—a long, narrow gland which empties its secretion into the first part of the intestine, just outside the end of the stomach. This secretion then meets and mixes with the food immediately as it leaves the stomach. It is quite abundant, amounting to about a quart a day. The mechanism of the secretion reveals one of those remarkable little adjustments of which living organisms are all compact. The stomach contents are acid. As yet they are ejected in small squirts, they impinge on the wall of the duodenum (the first part of the intestine.) It was found that an acid brought into contact thus with the duodenal mucosa would cause a prompt secretion of pancreatic juice. This is due to the formation of a substance called secretin, formed by the action of acid on the secretions from the duodenum. When absorbed this secretin acts on the pancreas to promote its secretion. Thus as soon as food from the stomach gets to the intestine, the mechanism is set up to cause the pancreatic digestive juices to pour out to meet it. It is one of those beautiful interlocking adjustments which make the study of physiology so fascinating.

The pancreatic secretion contains the most powerful digestive enzymes in the whole tract. There are three or four which break down protein food such as meat, eggs, etc. This is accomplished in an alkaline, or feebly acid medium, and completes the work of stomach digestion.

Another pancreatic enzyme, amylase, converts starchy food to simple forms and acts much as does the ptyalin in the salivary secretion.

Finally the pancreas furnishes an enzyme which digests fats—lipase. This is the only place in the digestive system where fats are digested.

The simultaneous action of all these enzymes—converting every kind of food into forms that the body can use—should convince anyone of the nonsense on which one of the present popular dietary fads is based, the idea that we should not eat protein and starchy food at the same time.

Considering the central importance of the role of the pancreas in digestion, it is well that it is subject to few diseases and those are very rare. It is true that acute and chronic pancreatitis occur, but I have passed over 30 years in the practice of medicine without seeing more than half a dozen examples of both put together.

Homes

Homebuilders Ignore Ideas Of Women

Female Architect Lauded
Varied Windows Hit
Hobby Rooms Urged

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

I'VE SEVERAL bones to pick with architects and builders. Because so often you'd think from the layouts of the houses they'd plan that they didn't really care much about how much a woman would want a house.

Most of us have to live in houses that have been built for a long time. So we sit around wondering where in the world we can find an inch or two of wall space for the sofa or the buffet in rooms that are all cut up with too many openings.

I'm death on having several different sizes of windows in one room. Especially those almost-impossible-to-drape windows that so often go above built-in bookcases on either side of the fireplace. And give me big closets and a good traffic route through the house.

The other day I perked up my ears when I heard a famous woman architect talk about house-planning in a woman's language. Plenty of closets and plenty of places to put things away in were her tenets of faith. She also likes lots of light through well-placed windows so bay windows are her hobby. She believes there should be an entrance hall instead of having the front door come right into the living room and that every house should have a small playroom on the first floor if possible. A house should reflect the interests of the owner, she insists also, and recalled a recent house she built with a study for a literary member of the family—it had a built-in desk, built-in files, drawers and shelves that make it an ideal writing room. Another house she built recently had an attic playroom with a skylight to let in all the winter sunshine.

In the home of a teacher of elecution and dramatics this architect included a small theater on the second floor. She thinks that would be a nice idea in a home where amateur movies are a family hobby.

This woman architect was a pioneer in the movement to switch the arrangement of houses around, having the living rooms face the back instead of the front in order to secure a maximum of privacy and seclusion.

Count Calories to Reduce

BEHOLD Mrs. Stout — adding another pound with her high-calory snacks. And beside her Mrs. Slim—who's won her youthful figure by choosing tasty low-calory snacks.

"But even starving doesn't make me thin," Mrs. Stout complains — bitterly disillusioned by her last freak diet.

It's not how much you eat but what — that counts in reducing. You could drink three glasses of orange juice, eat two olive sandwiches, two squares of gingerbread—and still have fewer fattening calories than you get from one chocolate soda, one hot dog and one square of nut cake.

So, to reduce to the slim figure of your dreams, obey your calory chart for a while. By cutting to 1,200 calories a day you can lose two of those disfiguring pounds each week.

No hardship for you when you can have such good low-calory meals as this one on your diet:

1 cup hot tomato juice, 2 small hamburger patties, 1 baked potato, 1 teaspoon butter, 1 cup string beans, black coffee, 1 peach. Only 463 calories.

And now you know what bulge-makers sweet tidbits can be, you won't taste the cake icing you're making. You won't think that skipping breakfast will make up for that plate of fudge.

For that habit of dousing foods with butter and sauces, you'll substitute clever flavoring with parsley, spices. And while others stuff with second helpings, you'll cannily sip tea, which has no caloric value—and think how slim you'll be.

Our 40-page booklet, "Change your weight for beauty's sake," gives you two weeks' low-calory menus based on healthful protective foods. Calory chart. Exercises for stubborn spots.

Send 15c for our booklet, "Chance Your Weight for Beauty's Sake," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Cocoanut and pineapple sherbert
Iced tea

STUFFED FILLETS OF HADDOCK.

If fillets are frozen, let them stand at room temperature until thawed. Wipe off well, rub with salt and pepper, dot over one side with butter. Prepare bread dressing by combining 1 cup bread crumbs, melted in 2 tablespoons of butter, seasonings as follows: One teaspoon parsley, finely chopped, ¼ teaspoon grated lemon rind, 1 teaspoon lemon juice, bit of sage, salt and pepper to taste, 1 beaten egg and milk to moisten. Mix them lightly. Place spoonfuls of the dressing on each of the four fillets of haddock, flounder or sole and roll, starting at broad end of the fillet, rolling toward the tail. Have ready stripes of greased paper or cooking parchment, cut the size of the rolls. Roll each fillet in a stripe of paper and tie in place with string. Place in a well-greased baking dish and bake from 30 to 35 minutes, in a hot oven, 400 degrees Fahrenheit. Take rolls from oven and remove paper. Place on a hot platter and serve plain or accompanied by a well-seasoned tomato or creamed shrimp sauce. This serves four. For a shrimp sauce combine one-half cup cream and one-half cup milk and add 2 tablespoons flour and 2 tablespoons butter creamed, ½ teaspoon salt and dash of pepper. Add one-half cup shrimps, broken, from which viscera have been removed. Heat all ingredients until thick and smooth, according to individual tastes.

Feminine Dresses.

Dresses for women show leanings toward the "prettier and softer" trend, with skirts slim looking, even when pleated. Soft yokes, bloused waist lines, and small collars are important. Dresses show such timely trimmings as replicas of Mei-Mei, the panda.

New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago...they all speak a different language. What goes in one city, in one part of the country, may slide right off the back of another.

Politicians know that's true. Actors on the "road" know it. Sales managers know it. And so do advertisers...whether they're selling food, clothing, sporting goods, or anything else. Take the business of selling air travel, for example...

When the advertising agency (J. Stirling Getchell, Inc.) planned the current national campaign for Transcontinental & Western Air, they realized that an ad that clicks in New York might fall flat in San Francisco. So they prepared a different series of ads ...with different headlines, copy and illustrations...to fit each of the several markets covered by the campaign.

Naturally, newspapers...and only newspapers ...were chosen for this campaign because, as Mr. Roberts, TWA advertising manager, says: "It is the only medium where you can effectively localize your copy in every market where you seek business...Only the extreme flexibility of newspapers makes such a tailormade job possible."

This ability to localize a national campaign, to carry a special, "home town" appeal into each market, is one of the many distinct advantages newspapers offer advertisers... one of the many reasons why newspapers are recognized as the primary advertising medium.

BUREAU OF ADVERTISING

"The TWA campaign marks the first time in the history of air transport advertising that entirely separate campaigns have been mapped out for separate traffic centers. We decided on this strategy following a survey that revealed what kind of copy would appeal to each traffic center most.

"We chose newspapers to carry this campaign exclusively because it is the only medium where you can effectively localize your copy in every market where you seek business. Our campaign...the largest of its kind ever run by an airline...covers the country, but copy varies from section to section with a different appeal for each section.

Officials Jam Nicaragua Legation For Party Honoring Sra. Somoza

Wife of Republic's President Guest of Envoy
Easing of World Crisis Adds to Enjoyment
Diplomatic Corps Dominate Fete

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

COMPLIMENTING Senora de Somoza, Nicaragua's "First Lady," the Minister of Nicaragua and Senora de De Bayle yesterday entertained at a large reception at the legation on New Hampshire avenue. The wife of Nicaragua's President arrived in Washington several days ago to enroll her daughter in school here, and since that time she has met an extensive circle of residents, most of whom turned up yesterday to see her again. Also in the company were a sizable number of the official set and scores from diplomatic circles.

HOPE R. MILLER.

With the European situation looking brighter than in many days, Capital notables relaxed to enjoy the event—one of the first to take place here since world powers across the Atlantic began their "conversations" regarding the fate of Czechoslovakia. Yesterday, what has happened and the outlook for the future were favored themes as envoys and lesser lights from legations and embassies gathered in every convenient corner to talk. Knots of guests here and there touched on lighter subjects now and then, only to return inevitably to the topic that has made headlines for many days.

The Minister and Senora de De Bayle and Senora de Somoza received their long line of guests in the crimson-carpeted drawing room, which was decorated for the occasion with huge vases of lilies and roses. Senora Somoza was gowned in black lace, fashioned with a fitted bodice, a full skirt and long sleeves puffed at the shoulder line. A corsage of orchids completed her costume. Senora de De Bayle, one of the most attractive women in the diplomatic corps, wore a frock of black crepe, cut on severely plain lines with long tight sleeves set off with silver epaulets.

From the drawing room, guests drifted on to the dining room, where a long table in the center presented a lavish outlay of hors d'ourves, dainty sandwiches, and cakes. A rectangular vase, filled with white tapers in silver holders, decorated the table. At one end of the room, champagne and other drinks were served, and guests clustered there and seemed never to move.

MEANWHILE, another flock had climbed the stairs to the second floor, where, in the other drawing room, there was also a bar. Most of the big crowd remained downstairs, however, and, like many a diplomatic reception, this one was so crowded after the first hour you could scarcely move.

Mrs. Cordell Hull, trimly turned out in a teal blue wool frock with a turban to match and a silver fox fur piece over her arm, was among the early arrivals, and, as usual, was one of the most popular persons at the party. George T. Summerlin, of the State Department, walked down the receiving line early. Still others there during the first half hour were the Counselor of the Chinese Embassy, Zuang Teh Ing, and Mrs. Ing, who will leave Washington soon to make their home in Nicaragua, where he will be his country's Consul General. Chatting with the Ings were Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Hill, who have lived there for a number of years, and also Mrs. Louis Shapiro, who knows Central America well.

Wearing a snappy green frock with a matching hat, Mrs. George Messersmith was glimpsed in the crowd. Mrs. Francis B. Sayre also was there, as were Mr. and Mrs. William Jennings Price, Mrs. Preston Goodwin, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Dion Williams, Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Benton, Miss Lolita Dawson and Mrs. Matthew E. Hanna.

* * * *

AS WOULD BE expected, the diplomatic corps predominated in the gathering. Dr. Hans Thomsen, Counselor of the German Embassy, made a quick tour through the rooms, shook hands here, there, and everywhere, and then disappeared. The Mexican Ambassador, Dr. Castillo Najera, arrived with his niece, Senorita Marta Guajerdo, who was quickly surrounded by a flock of swains who saw that she had a good time.

The Minister of Panama and Senora de Boyd were there; also, the Dominican Minister, Andrea Pastoriza, and Senora de Pastoriza with their two sons, Tomas and Pedro; the Venezuelan Minister, Dr. Diogenes Escalante; the Attache of the Venezuelan legation, Juan Lecuna and his attractive wife; the Minister of Uruguay, Dr. J. Richling; Paulo Hasslocher of the Brazilian Embassy; Dr. and Senora Caceres of the Legation of Honduras; the Minister of Bolivia, Dr. Luis Fernando Guachalla, who arrived with Raul Diez de Melina of his staff; Joao de Deus Ramos of the Portuguese Legation; Resid Anamur, of the Turkish Embassy, who has just returned from California, and Dr. Roberto G. de Mendoza of the Cuban Embassy.

Educators Urge Teaching Sense Instead of Facts

Memorizing the names of capitals or dates of the Punic Wars is a waste of time for school children "in a country plagued with widespread poverty, high crime rates, unnecessary ill health, bad housing and high-pressure propaganda," says a report issued yesterday by the Educational Policies Commission.

The commission, which was created by the National Education Association and American Association of School Administrators, urges educators to overhaul the school curriculum and teach children "how to get along with other people, how to earn and spend an income and how to discharge their duties as citizens."

"Achievement of democracy through education is the most urgent and intensely practical problem facing our profession," the report concludes.

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Bolts From the Sky

Competition, constant strife,
Seem to be the law of life.
—The Old Naturalist.

Tommy, Sue and Sammy had gone over to see the Old Naturalist who had spent the summer in Farmer Brown's sugar house over in that part of the Green Forest where the sugar maples grew. From him they had learned much, especially Sue and Sammy, who were from the city. They were spending their vacation with their cousin Tommy, who was Farmer Brown's boy. Having lived all his life in the country, Tommy knew much of the people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows, but he, too, was learning many things from the Old Naturalist.

They had been talking about some of the furred and feathered folk and how some lived on others. "I think that all birds and animals that hunt and kill others ought to be killed themselves!" declared Sue indignantly.

The Old Naturalist smiled and repeated the two lines quoted at the beginning of this story. "My dear," he added, "you mustn't forget that Man is the greatest killer of all. But leaving him out, and supposing that all living things who kill other living things were to be killed, where do you think it would all end?"

Sue looked puzzled. "Just what do you mean?" she asked.

"You remember," said the Old Naturalist, "that the other day we saw Sharpshin the Hawk catch a Blue Jay."

"Of course I remember," said Sue. I said then that that Hawk ought to be shot for having killed some one as lovely as that Jay and I still think so," replied Sue.

"I happen to know that particular Jay. I also happen to know that he killed a baby Sparrow in the nest, for I saw him do it. What about that Jay?" said the Old Naturalist.

"Well, then I guess it deserved to be killed," replied Sue a little doubtfully.

"And that baby Sparrow had been fed a certain kind of caterpillar that would, had it not been killed, have become a beautiful moth," continued the Old Naturalist.

Tommy, who had been listening with a broad grin on his freckled face, chuckled. "And that caterpillar had eaten a plant, and so killed another living thing," said he. "Where does that leave you, Sue?"

Sue made a face at him. "Just the same, I think——" Sue didn't finish. Seeming to fall from the sky two feathered bolts shot so low over their heads that they dodged. There was a swishing sound of air against stiff wing feathers. The first plunged into a thicket. The second swerved upward just in time to avoid crashing into the bushes and young trees. It shot up for a hundred feet or more with such speed that it seemed to literally bound up.

"Ah!" exclaimed the Old Naturalist. "It is the fearless one, the master of the air, the Duck Hawk! And unless I am mistaken that was a Pigeon he just missed catching."

He went over to the thicket and a moment later returned. Held gently was a Pigeon, panting with fright and exhaustion. "I thought as much," said he. "It is a Homing Pigeon, sometimes called Carrier Pigeon, one of the kind so often used for sending messages in time of war, and in times of peace for racing. See, it is wearing two bands, one on each leg. One is of metal and numbered. That number is registered with an association of owners of Homing Pigeons and serves to identify the bird. The other is a rubber band, and indicates that the bird was being flown in a race. The Hawk saw the bird and you know the rest. The Pigeon was smart enough to plunge into that thicket where the Hawk could not follow.

"I'm glad," declared Sue, gently stroking the Pigeon's head. Then her eyes snapped. "If I were a man and had had a gun, I would have shot that Hawk!" she added.

"And that would have been a pity, a very great pity. You would have destroyed something magnificent," said the Old Naturalist, shaking his head.

Hrdlicka Back With New Data From Aleutians

Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of physical anthropoligy at the Smithsonian Institution, yesterday reported findings which throw further light on the origin of the New World's earliest settlers.

Just returned to Washington from his annual expedition to the Alaskan peninsula and the Aleutian Islands, Dr. Hrdlicvka brought back skulls, pottery and other remains of a long vanished race of migrants from Asia to North America by way of the "stepping stone" Aleutians.

The 69-year-old scientist, who first encountered traces of the "pre-Aleuts" on Kodiak Island in 1931, this year found the richest deposits of all on the Island of Unmak. Skulls found were all oblong, which is an unmistakable sign of the mysterious pre-Aleuts, the Aleut skull being round.

From Unmak the party went to the Commander Islands, which Dr. Hrdlicka felt might have been part of the southern route of migration from Kamchatka to Alaska. Several old settlement sites were found but examination showed that none of them dated from before the Russian occupation.

Collelegdelegation Asks World Parley On Czech Crisis

Thirty-seven students of New York State universities and colleges, eyes heavy with loss of sleep, yesterday called at the White House, Government departments and leading embassies to urge settlement of the Czech question in a general world conference.

The group also asked Administration officials to support at the next session of Congress changes in the neutrality act permitting discrimination between aggressor nations and those attacked, in embargoes of war materials.

Organized by the Metropolitan College Newspaper Association of Greater New York, the delegation left New York Wednesday night, arriving sleepless yesterday morning. They returned last night in their chartered bus.

Hughes, Judges Discuss Dockets

Chief Justice Hughes discussed with senior judges of the Federal circuit courts and representatives of the Justice Department yesterday the status of litigation in Federal courts.

It was the first session of the judicial conference held annually at the Supreme Court. The proceedings are secret.

No announcements is expected until next week when the Chief Justice will issue a statement.

Last year the conference recommended the apointment of four new circuit judges and 12 new District judges to relieve congestion. Congress authorized five circuit and 15 District judges.

Bids Asked on Car Inspection Offices

The District Commissioners yesterday advertised for bids for the construction of two automobile inspection stations which will begin operation next March.

Under the law, each car in the District must be inspected before license tags are issued. The stations, one in Southwest and the other in the Northeast, will eventually pay for themselves, since a fee of $1 will be charged car owners the first year and 50 cents each year thereafter.

Congress has appropriated $103,000 for the inspection project, of which $90,000 has been set aside for construction of the two stations. The Southwest station will be at Tenth and F streets southwest, and the Northeast station at West Virginia avenue northeast, near Mount Olivet road.

Lieut. Truscott Shifted to Aid His Promotion

Goes to 11th Precinct
Sleuth's Work Noted
Hartman Is Successor

Lieut. Floyd Truscott, ace investigator of the Metropolitan Police Department, was shifted yesterday from his duties at administrative headquarters to second in command of the Eleventh Precinct.

The change was made, said Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, to permit Truscott to obtain "precinct experience" in preparation for his promotion to a captain. Truscott heads the eligibility list for promotion.

His place as chief of the Special Investigation Squad will be taken by Detective Sergt. Karl Hartman, who will be elevated to the rank of acting lieutenant, Maj. Brown said.

Truscott, with numerous commendations for outstanding work to his credit, entered he department in 1925. Five years later he was made a precinct detective and the following year was made a detective sergeant. He was promoted to a lieutenant in 1935.

His work on the Wilson "mistaken identity" murder—the case in which a newspaper route agent was slain by local racketeers who mistook him for a rival—won Truscott high praised from both his superiors and the United States Attorney's office.

Currently, Truscott is among seven Metropolitan policemen attending special classes in traffic control training at the University of Maryland. He is scheduled to complete the two-weeks' course tomorrow.

Hartman also has received numerous commendations for his work in the department. He joined the force in 1928, was made a Detective Sergeant in 1932 and served both on the homicide squad and as a special investigator for the District Attorney's office.

His most recent commendation came as a result of work with Truscott and Lieut. John Fowler which resulted in the arrest and trial of Robert Langdon, former policeman, for the slaying of Beulah Limerick, Washington's "whoopie" girl.

Truscott's transfer to the Eleventh Precinct was made possible by the recent retirement of Lieut. Dennis Cullinane.

Campbell Faces Game Law Charge

Herbert M. Campbell, 46, of Arlington, once the central figure in the Mary Baker case, yesterday was ordered to answer charges of violating the State gaming laws before Judge A. C. Ritchie in Fairfax, Va.

Campbell, in the real estate business, was charged in a warrant served by Game Warden W. Harry Johnson with falsifying a statement to secure a fishing license. The hearing was set for Wednesday to give Campbell time to recover from injuries suffered recently when the yacht Helma, on which he was a passenger, burst into flames in the Potomac River.

School Enrollment In City Sets Record

Fredericksburg, Va., Sept. 29.—Superintendent Guy H. Brown said today city schools boast the largest enrollment in history, with 1,542 names on the registers of the white and colored institutions, an increase of 175 over the 1937-38 session. The faculty is also larger, with 54 teachers being employed.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

It is no less than a scurrilous piece of work by the National Football League statisticians which has labeled Ernie Pinckert as a halfback who in seven years of professional football has scored only two touchdowns, Mr. Pinckert says so himself.

POVICH.

"Not only that," says Mr. Pinckert, who is one of the more learned of the professional athletes, "I do not hesitate to say that it is a foul canard. The league statisticians, whoever they are, ought to brush up on their arithmetic. Only two touchdowns in seven years—for shame!

"I have positive proof that I have scored not two touchdowns but three touchdowns in my seven years of pro football," went on Mr. Pinckert. "No longer can I submit to such a gross libel. Ask Coach Ray Flaherty, ask Turk Edwards, ask George Marshall. They will tell you I am not a two-touchdown man. I am a three-touchdown man."

Granted that Pinckert is correct and that the league statisticians are wrong, the question persists: Howinell can a halfback who in seven years of pro football has scored only three touchdowns stay in the league as one of the highest-salaried figures in the league.

Head Coach Ray Flaherty volunteered the answer to that one with a voice that attained a shout. "Because," said Mr. Flaherty, "He's the best darned blocking back in the league. He doesn't have to score touchdowns. He doesn't even have to run the ball for the Redskins. We don't care if he never touches the ball. He's still valffiuable enough to play more minutes in the Redskins' backfield than any other man on the club."

Flaherty Very Emphatic

Flaherty was very emphatic and was getting a bit red-necked about it. "Check up, and you'll find that Ernie Pinchert has played more of every Redskin game since he joined the club than any other back we've ever had. And that goes for Cliff Battles. Ernie was in there blocking not only for Battles but for every other back we ever had. But that isn't all that Pinchert means to us—

"He's our defensive fullback, don't forget, and he's a potent package when he's backing up that line. Any guy who sticks his nose through that Redskin line with the ball under his arm promptly gets slapped down by Pinchert. Ernie booms into 'em, I mean. No love-taps. And he protects the flat zone on our pass defense. That's a job in itself."

Apparently there would be no harm in knowing a bit more about this fellow Pinckert. It seems that while Baugh, Farkas, Edwards, Malone and Millner get the cheers of the crowd, Pinckert gets the cheers of Baugh, Edwards, Malone and Millner. It would seem to make him a football player's football player.

He came out of the University of Southern California in 1932 after a dazzling farewell performance for the Trojans in the Rose Bowl game against Tulane. For the second straight year he was named All-America. He joined up with the Boston Redskins immediately and, with Turk Edwards, is the lone relic of the Rekskins of 1932.

He's 30 now and weighs an even 200 pounds. In his stocking feet he doesn't quite reach the coveted 6 feet. The chances are he's the best-dressed man in professional football. At least his wardrobe would fill a modest warehouse. His clothes are tailor-made because, he says "We football players are hard to fit. The chances are we're 44 inches around the shoulders and 33 around the waist. A suit of clothes off the rack might fit us nicely around the shoulders but it would be apt to hang like a tent around the middle. We've got to be particular."

Wardrobe Expensive

The money he spends for his clothes would probably rival the yearly salaries of the lower-paid players in the professional league. But Pinckert can afford it. He's in a prosperous sportings-good company on the Coast. His football wages aren't a fifth of his income. He continues to play pro football because—well, because he likes to play football.

The role of a blocking back isn't new to Ernie Pinckert. He was a blocking back throughout his four years at Southern California under Howard Jones. And in two of those seasons the Trojans were winners in the Rose Bowl. But at San Bernardino, Calif., where he starred in his high school days, Pinckert was no blocking back. He was the slickest thing in scholastic circles with a ball under his arm. His running fetched him a scholarship to U. S. C.

But one day Coach Jones pressed him into service as a blocking back. That day Pinckert's football career was fashioned. He gave such a he-mannish display in clearing the path for the Trojan ball carriers that Jones never dared to move him back to his original post.

So wide was his fame as a blocker that even his failure to carry the ball did not prevent his selection as an all-American back in 1931. And in 1932 he was given the same honor. But in his farewell game for Southern California, Pinckert again blossomed as a ball carrier. That was the Rose Bowl game of January 1, 1933, against Tulane. Southern California won that one, 1 to 1. We quote now from the dispatch of Brian Bell, Associated Press sports writer, who covered that game:

"Rose Bowl, Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 1, (AP).—A great football player who has been doing good turns for others for three years, flashed briefly today as a ball carrier and enabled Southern Cal-

Bosox Beat Nats; Clinch 2d Place

Score Is 13 to 5 Higgins Scores 7 Men Ostermueller Victor Griffs Tally Late

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Boston, Sept. 29.—The Nats went to great lengths today to take a beating from the Red Sox

Encountering a disrupted railroad system en route here from New York, the Washington athletes were forced to detrain at New London, in New England's hurricane-ridden area. Trunks containing their heavy equipment were left behind, and each player toted his uniform and two pet bats under his arm while club officials charted a bus.

By bus the team proceeded to Waverly, Mass., where train connections for Boston again were made, and eventually the Nats, loaded down with their belongings, trooped into Fenway Park.

There they ran into a 13-to-5 defeat by the Red Sox.

Nats Score Four Runs

The score wasn't even respectable until the ninth, when the Nats finally splurged with four runs to reduce Boston's 13-to-1 lead. Until the ninth, left-handed Freddie Ostermuller was pitching five-hit ball against the Nats.

Pete Appleton, who used to beat the Red Sox with great regularity, was not exactly a puzzle to the Sox today. The knocked him loose from a run in the second inning, and in the third they nudged five big runs across the plate. In the fifth, a pinch hitter was deemed more useful to the Nats' cause than Appleton and Mone Weaver finished the game without much success.

Ben Chapman, who was to figure in six of the Red Sox runs, doubled in the second inning to bring Boston its first run, but in the third the Nats tied the score when Travis singled to the infield and Rick Ferrell doubled to right center.

Nats' Pitching Weakness

That, however, was the Nats' last run until the ninth. Meanwhile the Red Sox went townward against Washington's pitching. In the third inning Higgins singled to right with the bases full to score two runs and Chaoman tripled over Case's head to score two more. A fifth run was scored on Doerr's fly to Simmons.

They greeted Weaver with a run in the fifth after he walked Foxx and Cronin, and in the seventh they added two more on Higgins' single to center.

Ostermueller, who had been tending strictly to his pitching, opened the eighth with a single and started a 4-run assault. With the bases full, the pasky Higgins doubled to right to empty the bases, and Chapman singled to left to raise the Sox's margin to 13-1.

The Nats raised a four-run fuss in the ninth when Simmons doubled to left, Myer singled to right, Travis singled to center. Ostermueller made a late throw on Ferrell's grounder and West singled to right. But in rapid succession Case popped up and Lewis and Wright flied out to deflate the uprising.

George Washington Opens Season Tonight At Griffith Stadium With Furman Eleven

10,000 Expected to Witness Game Colonials to Offer Light, Spirited Team Kick-off Is Timed for 8:15 o'Clock

By Jack Munhall.

The 1938 George Washington football edition rolls off the presses under the artificial lights of Griffith Stadium tonight at 8:15 o'clock, there to be scanned closely by an expected crowd of 10,000 anxious to note further developments of the Colonials' new athletic trend.

Against the Purple Hurricane of Furman University, blowing at full velocity for the first time this season after a split in two games, a different George Washington eleven will help inaugurate the District pigskin campaign.

Without the fanfare of trumpets which has preceded other Buff and Blue teams, this newest representative of the simon-pure football system begun last year, approaches its first test fully realizing its shortcomings but confident of overcoming them.

Young Spirited Team

It will be the youngest, most spirited Colonial eleven in recent years that Coach Bill Reinhart will loose against the Southern invaders—an eleven long on promise but frankly unpredictable at this stage.

It is unpredictable because (1) Tim Sweet, a converted sophomore tackle, will hold down the important center position; (2) the end department, even with the addition of Bob Nowaskey, a converted fullback, is weak in numbers, and (3) the backfield is the smallest, most brittle in five years.

Reinhart, however, is sold on his kids and highly hopeful that they will blossom into a better team than the disappointing one of 1937.

George Washington's main scoring threat is vested for the second straight season in the skinny shanks of Vic Sampson, a senior left halfback and one of the East's leading ground gainers in 1937. Sampson, slender at 165 pounds, is a deceptive runner and a good kicker. His specialty is broken-field galloping and can generally be depended on for a lengthy run each game.

Sampson Is Nucleus

With Sampson as the nucleus of the backfield, Reinhart has surrounded him with a pair of sophomores and a junior, none of whom weighs more than 170. Sampson's halfback mate is Crawford Carriere, a holdover from last year who saw little action due to injuries, and the fullback is Lud Urick, a Minnesota lad who clinched his position Wednesday with his powerful blocking.

Carrier will be used principally on reverses from his wing-back spot while Urick will take care of the line plunging and most of the blocking.

Nowaskey, seemingly at home in his new flank job, and John Rebholz, a dependable tackle last year, are the bulwark of the Colonial line which shapes up as fairly heavy and fairly fast. At the other end is Sophomore Sam Babich, tall and rangy pass-catcher, and at the other tackle is reliable Sunny Jones, the heaviest player in the line-up at 210.

At guards G. W. is strongly fortified with Hal Schiering and Izzy Weinberg, both experienced and rugged while the aforesaid Swett, 190-pounder, is at center.

Richardson Is Reliable

For backfield reserves, the Colonials have iBlly Richardson, a hard-hitting runner and an excellent passer who surely will relieve Sampson in each half; John Tonkavitch, Ken Batson and Fred Sartore, promising sophs, and veterans Biff Borden and Frank erka. Merka is not likely to play, however, since he still is recuperating from a summer illness.

Furman undoubtedly will be a stronger eleven than when it romped over Oglethorpe in its opener and lost to Bucknell, 28-6, in its latest start. The Southerners have been brought to full strength for the first time by the return to the line-up of their best back—Fullback Roton (The Ripper) Shetley, End Coley and Left Guard Hugh Wofford. All three are regulars.

The Purple Hurricane is reported to have a dangerous broken field runner and a good passer in Ray (Zoomer) Zima and a fine "climax" scoot-back in C. V. Lipscomb.

Furman will have a slight weight advantage over G. W., both on the line and in the backfield.

Indians Nip Chisox, 9-8

Weatherly Is Hero Hits Homer in Tenth Tribe Stages Rally

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Sept. 29.—Roy Weatherly, the powerful little outfielder who took over Earl Averill's chores in centerfied late in the season while the veteran Indian went to right-field, hoisted the first ball pitched to him over the wall in the tenth inning today to give Cleveland a 9-to-8 victory over Chicago.

The White Sox collected five hits for five runs in the eighth to take a good-size lead, but the Indians came back to score three times in their hal fof the eighth and again in the ninth to tiet the score.

Tigers Whip Browns, 6-2

Hank Loses Ground Newsom Bombarded Bridges Is Winner

By the Associated Press.

Detroit, Sept. 29.—Tommy Bridges won his thirteenth game of the season as the Detroit Tigers defeated the St. Louis Browns, 6 to 2, today in their final home appearance.

The Tigers raked Buck Newsom, who went the route for St. Louis, for 11 hits, but Hank Greenberg, aiming for Babe Ruth's home run record, failed to add to his 58 total. A single to left, two pop-ups and a fly to center was Greenberg's record for the afternoon.

Greenberg's chances to tie or beat Ruth's 60-homer mark now rest in a three-game series starting Saturday at Cleveland.

Bill Lee Throttles Bucs With 7 Blows

Big Right-Hander Hangs Up His 22d Victory 42,628 See Pennant-Mad Bruins Sweep Series Chicago Registers Tenth Straight Triumph Pittsburgh Scores on Four Straight Walks

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 29.—On the strong right arm of Bill "Iron Man" Lee, the fighting Chicago Cubs rode to a crushing 10-to-1 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates today for a sweep of the three-game series and a game and one-half lead in the National League pennant battle.

The husky Chicago righthander, pitching for a fourth time in as many days, set the Pirates down with only seven hits. Their lone run came as the result of four straight passes in the third inning. From the first inning, in which the rampant Cubs scored three runs largely through the wildness of Russ Baauers, Chicago took command—then surged on to a tenth straight victory in a seemingly unstoppable march to the championship.

The Cubs, nine games out of first place five weeks ago and winners over the Pirates in close, dramatic contests Tuesday and Wesdnesday, took their bats and made today's game a rout. Ten lusty hits off four Pirate hurlers, backed up by a brilliant defense, gave the Cubs victory, hteir 20th in their last 23 games.

42,628 See Game

A throng of 42,628 saw the Bruins collect three runs in the first inning on a hit, three walks and a sacrifice. After the Bugs scored their single run in the third, the Cubs pushed two more scores over in the fourth on hits by Rip Collins, Bill Jurges, Stam Hack and Frank Demaree.

They picked up three more in the fifth on as many hits and one of three Pittsburgh errors. One of the most dramatic blows was Lee's line double to left which drove in two of the tallies. In the eight, Chicago scored its final two runs on a single hit as John Rizzo made the second of his two miscues and Arky Vaughan contributed another boot.

Bauers, who issued four walks, was relieved by Ed Brandt in the second. Brandt held fourth until Cy Blanton took over at the start of the figth. In the sixth, after Woody Jensen batted for Blanton, Mace Brown took over the mound duties and held the Cubs to two runs and two hits in the remaining three innings.

Lee Chalks Up Twenty-second

Lee, in chalking up his twenty-second victory of the season, as against nine defeats, allowed only two hits through the first five innings. In the sixth, stellar defensive work pulled him out of a spot. Pep YYoung singled and after Leel Handley flied out, Al Todd lined the ball against the leftfield wall. Demaree, however, played the hit perfectly and shot the ball to Jurges, whose throw to Billy Herman nailed Todd at second, Young holding third. Demaree then made a sensational, one-handed catch of Jensen's short fly to left, to end the frame.

The Pirates had two on with two out in the ninth, when Lee ended the game by fanning Rizzo, the Bue slugger, for a brilliant finish.

It was in this inning, and on a pitch to Rizzo, that Manager Babby Hartnett, of the Cubs, was struck by a foul tip and had to leave the field. The flesh was torn from the third finger of Hartnett's right hand and the husky pilot was not expected to be in action tomorrow in the Cub opener against the St. Louis Cardinals.

Face Cards Today

After trouncing Pittsburgh a fifth straight time this season, the Cubs wind up the season with three games with the Cardinals as the sinking Pirates are scheduled to encounter the Cincinnati Reds four times in the final three games of the campaign.

Jimmy Adamick, Hurt by Knockout, Is Improving

Detroit, Sept. 29 (U.P.).—Jimmy Adamick showed "slight improvement" at Henry Ford Hospital tonight where he was taken after being knocked out by Roscoe Toles, Detroit Negro, in the second round of their 10-round bout at Olympia last night.

He had regained consciousness after being in a coma with a cerebral concussion until nearly noon today. He struck his head on the ring floor when he went down for the count after 40 seconds of the second round. He was floored four times in the first round by Toles.

Meanwhile, Prosecutor Duncan C. McCrea charged that Adamick was not in proper physical condition for the fight despite the fact that Boxing Commission physicians examined him before the fight. He ordered an immediate investigation and summoned Adamick's manager, Jim B. Matchmaker Jack Kearns, Boxing Commissioner Fra Donell and others to be que

Hardwick Changes Navy Lineup on Eve of Battle With V.M.I. Team

Ken Hyson Returns to Tackle Job

Witter Back at Guard Replaces Dave Wolfe Squad Drills Hard

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Sept. 29.—Two changes in the line-up Navy will sent against Virginia Military Institute here Saturday were announced this afternoon by Head Coach Hank Hardwick after he drove the Middies through their last hard drill before the game.

Ken Hyson, regular right tackle last year, who was ousted by Ben Jarvis, was re-installed at his old post, and Ward Witter, was assigned to Dave Wolfe's guard position when it became apparent that the latter's shoulder injury would preclude all possibility of his playing Saturday.

The remainder of the line-up will be the same as last Saturday when the Tars galloped over William and Mary to a 25-0 victory, but Hardwick isn't at all optimistic about its chances of stopping the Cadets. And air of pessimism pervaded the coaches' quarters, but in the squad's locker room there was enough optimism to balance the ledger. The players themselves are going out with the idea of whipping a good, tough team.

This afternoon Hardwick put the squad through a brisk rehearsal of its offensive repertoire, emphasizing passing, and appeared to be rather glum about the whole thing. To hear him tell it Navy is in for a fine shellacking at V. M. I.'s collective hands.

Tomorrow night the entire regiment will stage a pep rally in Bancroft Hall immediately after the evening mess to start the ball rolling toward a Navy victory. This will be the first rally of the season, and should be loud and long. Hardwick will address the midshipmen during the evening, and the band will help out in the choruses.

The Cadet squad is scheduled to arrive here tomorrow afternoon early enough for a workout in Thompson Stadium. The playing field was covered with heavy canvas this afternoon to keep it as playable as possible in the event of rain, and if the weather continues bad tomorrow the visitors will drill on the pitch field.

The Virginians are expected to use their potent aerial game fully as much as Navy, which frankly admits its only hope of winning lies through the air. "Son" Shelby and Paul Shu, All-Southern Conference halfback, will be on the dispatching end of the passes, with Capt. Andy Trzeciak and Ray Taylor, an end, on the receiving end. Taylor has been on the casualty list, but is expected to play against Navy.

With the exception of the flanks, where Coach "Pooley" Hubert has been hard pressed to recapable material, V. M. I. will throw an experienced and powerful aggregation at the Middies. Ray Brittingham and Taylor will start, but with Winston Coleman the only other experienced wingman available, replacements are few and far between.

River Pirate Wins At Belmont Park

Belmont Park, N. Y., Sept. 29. (AP)—John Simonetti's River Pirate, a recent winner here at seven furlongs, turned in an exceptional effort here today when he defeated four other juveniles of the better class claiming ranks in the Powhatan purse. It was the first time since the New York season opened that two-year-olds were asked to run one mile and River Pirate acquitted himself very admirably, winning by four lengths in the impressive time of 1:37 2-5. Johnny Longden, leading rider of the country to date this year, was on the victor.

J. D. Norris' Gridine, split choice with the winner at odds of 7 to 5, made the others look rather silly. He held a 15-length margin for the place position, with Clarence Buxton's slow strating Silent Jim third.

It was an exciting contest until inside the stretch. Gridine took an early daylight lead and soon disposed of Shambles and Remus-Gina. Longden moved into second place with River Pirate at the end of three furlongs. Gridine and the ultimate victor drew far away from the others, with Gridine in the clear until the turn for home. Then River Pirate came around the pacemake and proceeded to breeze into Detective Command when straightened out.

Prizes Announced Record Crowd Seen Show Is October 8

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., Sept. 29.—Entries are pouring in daily for the sixth annual exhibition of the Farmington Hunt Club Horse Show, to be held Saturday, October 8, at the Farmington Country Club.

Llewellyn Miller, chairman of the show committee, today announced the list of donors of trophies as follows: Yearling class, White Gables trophy, by Mr. and Mrs. Rodger Rinehart; children's saddle class, Gallison Hall trophy, by Mr. and Mrs. Julio S. Galban; A. S. P. C. A. horsemanship event, by Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Stone, of New York and "Lanark," this county; maiden hunters, Oak Hill trophy, by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Renwick; hunter hacks, Kenridge trophy, by Hollis Rinehart; thoroughbred hunters, Eagleside trophy, by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Schlesinger; ladies' hunters, Red Acres trophy, by Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Catlin; pair hunters, Oaken Pins trophy, by Russell Mott, president of the Farmington Hunt; Corinthian class, challenge trophy, by Harry George; hunt teams, Woodbine trophy, by Mr. and Mrs. Llewellyn Miller; parent and child class, Keswick Hunt Club trophy.

As this will be the last exhibition on the Virginia circuit, a record attendance is expected. The sporting set of northern and Piedmont Virginia will be especially well represented, and many will come from the Hot Springs section, in the western part of the State. The exhibition will be followed by a Horse Show ball, to be held in the main dining room of the Farmington Country Club.

Eighteen events are listed on the day's program. Dr. Edgar W. Powell, of Bryn Mawr, Pa., has been invited to act as judge.

Winchester Coach Calls Semipros

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Winchester, Va., Sept. 29.—Chick Curry, playing manager of the Winchester semipro football team, today issued a call for players to report Sunday morning at 10 o'clock. Several games have been booked, Lawrence Fries, business manager, announced, the first of which will be Sunday, October 9, with Hagerstown, here.

Redskins-Giants Sell-out Denied

Denial that there was a shortage o tickets or the Redskins-Giants game at Griffith Stadium on October 9 was made last night by President George P. Marshall, of the Washington team.

"The report that the game is already a sell-out and that no more tickets are available is without foundation," said Marshall. "We have had the largest advance sale in the history of the Redskins in Washington, but there are still many thousands of reserved seats available."

High Schools Clash Today

Anacostia Vs. Wilson Game Is at 3:30 Johnnies Vs. Western

Two games of more than passing importance are on the scholastic football schedule this afternoon. The Inter-High season will officially start at Eastern Stadium at 3:30 p. m. when Aancostia's eleven is initiated into Inter-High company in a game with Woodrow Wilson, which will be making its season debut.

Of no less importance, although not an Inter-High tilt, will be the game at Western Stadium, in which the Georgetowners play host to St. John's. This game will be the season's opener for both Western and St. John's and will be used as a gauge in an attempt to measure the caliber of the Johnnies, in order to ascertain the extent of rumors that St. John's is loaded to put in a serious bid for the mythical city championship.

The Cadets will start a backfield composed of Joey Gallagher at quarterback, Frank Cady and Bob Boyle at the halfback positions, and Jimmy Mulvihill at fullback. Mulvihill and Gallaher were members of the Johnnies' sensational basketball team last year. Western's hopes depend on the performance of George Barnes, one of Western's five lettermen, and an inexperienced line.

The Inter-High opener today will be played between two teams which may not crash the first division of the league, but who promise to give the larger teams a fight for their lofty positions.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 29.—The second round of the Women's Fall Golf Tournment at the Cumberland Country Club was completed when Mrs. Walter C. Capper won from Mrs. L. Lee Lichtenstein by default.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Catonsville, Md., Sept. 29.—W. J. Johnson, Baltimore public links player from the Mount Pleasant course, fired a 3 over par 73 over the Rolling Road course here today, to pace the first day's qualifying in the Rolling Road invitation tournament.

Johnston was out in 36 and back in 37 for the lowest score among the 50-odd participants, as lightning fast greens sent the scores over the predicted figure. Spencer S. Overton, host club star, former Maryland State champion, was next with a 75, from nines of 37—38.

Billy Dettweiler and Billy Shea, Congressional's strong duo, were scheduled to play today, but due to classes at Georgetown University, they will be in the field of some 5 Washingtonians that will play in the second day's qualifying tomorrow.

Other low scores over the tricky par 70 layout included at 77 by E. G. Barnes, of the host club, 79s by W. A. Grimes and J. L. Dale, and 80s by Thomas Carrick, Royal Gill and Carl Causwal.

Other prominent District players in today's field include Earl MMcAleer, Congressional, and Volney Burnett, Kenwood, Baltimore's principal threats, Otto Greiner and Ernie Caldwell, are also in the second day's field.

The first and second rounds of match play are carded tomorrow, with the semifinals and finals in all five flights and consolations Sunday.

Cumberland Sports

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 29.—Despite failure of the Western Maryland Interscholastic Soccer League to reorganize this fall, Allegany High School will be represented by an eleven, according to Coach Walter L. Bowers. The Campers will play independent ball.

The squad of 20 boys consists of four regulars from last year—Julian Goggins, Paul Stitcher, Carl Stitcher and John Harbaugh. Ed Athey is the only other candidate with more than second-string experience, having started in several clashes last season.

Others on the squad are William Winters, John Edmondson, Robert Edmondson, Homer Wise, Charles Krietzburg, Robert Yeager, Glen Hockman, Francis McElwee, Arthur Thompson, John Kirkpatrick, William Sell, Pete Bowers, George Hoblitzel, Jimmy Clower and Bartlett.

Cumberland, Md., Sept. 29.—The Shamrock Athletic Club's first indoor amateur boxing show, in which mittmen, of Johnstown and Central City, Pa., will meet leather shovers of Cumberland and vicinity, will be held next Monday at SS. Peter and Paul Arena.

Delton Parker, Homer Jackson, Billy Lynch and Billy Norwood, of Cumberland, will likely be on the card, which will consist of eight or more three-round bouts.

Robert Wins Mat Feature Over Katan

Bortnick a Factor Ed Meske Wins Dusek Downs Savoldi Newman in Draw

Yvon Robert, assisted by Referee Benny Bortnick, won the weekly wrestling feature last night at Turner's Arena as John Katan went down for the count after 28 minutes of grappling.

Katan had Robert in the corner and was using an assortment of unlawful holds with Bortnick attempting to pull him away. The referee suddenly succeeded, fell behind Katan, and Katan in turn fell over him, with Robert then pinning his opponent for the decision.

Using an arm lock and body roll, Ed Meske tossed Hank Barber after 19½ minutes in the semiwindup.

Rudy Dusek used the convenient rocking chair hold and tossed Angelo Savoldi in 13 minutes, while Chris Zaharias was successful with a body press in pinning Walt Poddoc in 16½ minutes.

Ed Newman and Ned Bodone were clocked in the weekly 30-minute draw.

Nats Bow Out With Twin Bill Sunday

The Nats on Sunday will make their farewell appearance of the 1938 season, meeting the Athletics in a double-header at Griffith Stadium.

Manager Bucky Harris, who has landed his club in fifth place, will pitch two of his rookie left-handers against the Mackmen. Rene Monteagudo, diminutive Cuban, will start the first game and big Joe Krakauskas will pitch the finale.

Odessa Frank Pays $8.68 Ticket

Salem, N. H., Sept. 29 (AP).—A. E. Webber's Oddesa Frank moved from the ruck of the field at the stretch turn today to get up in time to win the Haverhill claiming purse, one-mile feature at Rockingham Park, to return $8.68 for a win ticket.

In second place was Jack Whyte's Lady Infinite, which led most of the way and paid $4.38 to place while the Geata Irrain Stable's Affirmation was third, paying $3.32. Mrs. W. Hodson's Cee Joe was fourth a length away.

Oddesa Frank was timed in 1:40.2 while annexing his seventh race in 17 starts this year. The winner was ridden by Carroll Bierman, who had his mount under restraint until the backstretch was left, whereupon he turned him loose after the leaders, wore them down, and want under the wire a length in front.

WELL FOR SOME TIME I'VE BEEN SNEAKING CIGARS UP TO HIS LORDSHIP—SURE AND YOU WEREN'T SO DUMB AS TO THINK EVERYONE INCLUDING THE DUCHESS, DIDN'T KNOW
THAT'S JUST IT—BUT YESTERDAY I CHANCED UPON SOME FINE AMERICAN CIGARS—SAID TO BE EASIER ON YOUR BREATH
YOU MEAN THEY DON'T—SH! HERE THEY COME
GEEPS! I WOULDN'T'VE BELIEVED IT
..SO WE EXCHANGED TIPS AS IT WERE. AND TEN BOB IS CHEAP FOR KNOWING ABOUT A GOOD CIGAR AND HOW TO PLEASE THE DUCHESS, TOO!
Kiss Me Again
Vintage WHITE OWLS
Smokers' Test showed Vintage tobacco was EASIER ON YOUR BREATH
WHITE OWLS are definitely easier on your breath—scientific tests proved it. Every White Owl always has a filler of Vintage quality and—like a Vintage wine—nature made it exceptionally mild, mellow.
We maintain a vast and unique crop-inspection system . . . classify all filler tobaccos into seven grades, using only tobacco of the top three for Vintage White Owls.
All this to give you a Vintage smoke. You'll like its taste—and ladies will admire your taste for choosing it. Try a White Owl today.

The Metallic Nose Knows
Scientists use a sensitive osmoscope to measure odor . . . to record its intensity and lasting power. Ten popular brands of 5¢ cigars were tested by this machine. White Owl was easier on the breath than all the others. After 30 minutes, all trace of tobacco odor disappeared from the breath of White Owl smokers.

Mrs. Blair Wins Corby Cup Tournament at Columbia

On Hunting

Sunday is a day on which local followers of rod and gun will have to make some tough decisions — whether to go down to the Lincoln Memorial Pond for the casting competition, out Bradley boulevard for the skeet shooting, or take a last crack at the fishing somewhere on the bay — and for fair - weather fishermen there are not more than several weekends left.

ACKERMAN.

On their grounds, near Bethesda, the National Capitol Skeet Club Club will hold the seventh Prince de Ligne, former Counselor of the Belgian Embassy, in 1931, when he donated an exceptionally handsome sterling silver cup with the stipulation that it would be shot for every year by teams of three. It has been won twice by Bernie Cummings, Don Johnson and George Deyoe; once by Tom Randall, Whitney Leary and Bill Leetch; Harry Walters, Fred Ramsdell and Frank Vermillion; Don Johnson, Harry Walters and Fred Ramsdell, and by the present titleholders, Bryan Battey, Robert Penna and F. Battey.

This competition, which must be shot by members of the club, and together, has brought out some of the largest crowds ever noted at this popular rendezvous, because it has been exceptionally keen. In more than one instance it has been necessary for teams to shoot off ties in order to get their names inscribed in the coveted blank space on this permanent trophy that actually belongs to the club.

It is expected, that in this shoot the various members of the National Capital No. 1 team, who are the present holders of the North-South Team Champsionship, will, act as captains, and combine their expert efforts with those of the less experienced members of the club so as to provide a most interesting competition. The gross score, that is the number of targets broken plus the handicap, can easily be perfect, and often is when some Class C or D member gets going real good.

The Sixth Annual Bait Fly and Casting Tournament of the National Casting Club is bound to draw a goodly number of anglers to the Seventeenth street end of the reflecting pool throughout hte day, for the first event the ¾-ounce distance bait, gets under way at nine a. m. Following in order is the ½-ounce distance plug, the ⅜-ounce accuracy bait, the ¾ accuracy plug, and ending up with the wet fly accuracy and the dry fly accuracy.

While these vents are being run off for casters affiliated with some recognized club, there will be two other events, limited to fishermen without tournament platform experience, and not members of a bait or fly casting club prior to July of this year. The first at 9:30 a. m. is the fishermen's plug accuracy. The second at 3:30 p. m. is the fishermen's wet fly accuracy. These events are open to the public, just bring your fishing tackle along and get in on the fun.

The few local hunters who journeyed to the Canadian Province of Quebec for the opening of the duck season report great numbers of black ducks, bluebills and teal. Just another indication that our northern State season, which opens on October 15 for a run of 45 days, will supply shooting such as we haven't seen for several seasons.

The proposed Fisheries Exhibition at the 1939 New York World's Fair has definitely been dropped because of lack of support from thise it was intended to benefit. A wonderful educational undertaking that no doubt would have been one of the real highlights of the fair had it materialized.

This decision will in no way affect the plans for the International Casting Tournament, which are now nearly completed and should supply plenty of interesting competition.

Our first reports of good largemouth bass fishing in the coves of the Potomac below Washington come through little more than a week ago with the report of two limit catches in Gunston. Since we noted them we have had all sorts of reports of exceptional fishing. Not just since the weather has been a little cooler, but ever since the opening of the season, which leads us to believe that maybe we have been missing a bet.

One angler, who through the summer found his sport in the white marlin fishing off Ocean City tells of two catches, totaling 10, the largest of which weighed three pounds. And of two, caught during the past 10 days, both of which tipped the scales to better than four pounds.

Another, and we know him to be a dyed-in-the-wool stream fisherman, says that from the opening of the season he has been taking (and releasing them) all the bass he wanted in the section of Gunston Cove from the bridge to the point. He fishes with a fly rod and a popping bug; the lure that in the last few years has been sure fire when the bass are raising at all.

A largemouth bass lure that has been extremely effective in Southern fishing is the "fish head streamer" made by P. N. Sylvester, of Saco, Me. It is a handmade product and on sale at none of the stores. Address a letter to the above if you would like to give it a try. It seems to be equally effective on any game fish.

Mrs. Lord Is Second Dettweiler Is Winner Takes Gross Honors 42 Turn in Cards

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., 13 handicap player from Chevy Chase, turned in the lowest score of her golfing career yesterday at Columbia, a 45-41, 86, to win the Corby Cup tournament by a five-stroke margin. Mrs. W. S. Corby, of the host club, former Women's D. C. Golf Association president and donor of the trophy, was present for the tournament.

Mrs. Blair, winner of the Duffer's tourney six years ago, scored below 90 for the fourth time since taking up golf, but it was the first time she has been as low as 86. The winner played consistent golf for the round, and pair of threes on 16 and 17 aided the new champion in playing the back nine in 41 strokes.

Helen Dettweiler, Maryland State champion, playing in her second tournament since returning from a nationwide tour as the country's first feminine baseball announcer, played one of the finest rounds of the season, a 78 with a pair of sevens, to win low gross honors by a comfortable six stroke margin. Mrs. Betty Meckley and Mrs. Charlotte Stern, Indian Spring, were next with 84s.

Mrs. Lord Second

Mrs. Merrill Lord, of the host Columbia Club, was out in 45 and back in 43 for and 88, deducted a 10 handicap and won second low net. Miss Dettweiler's 78, with her scratch handicap, was also eligible for the second low net but she preferred low gross.

Two players tied for third low nets of 80, Mrs. Charlotte Stern with a creditable 84—4—80, and Mrs. F. X. Gygax, Army and Navy, 92—13—80. Mrs. Florence Godfrey, Beaver Dam, and Mrs. H. Brundage, Columbia's golf committe echairman, split the final net prize of the day after scoring net 81's. Mrs. Godfrey had 89—8—81, and the host club champion a like score.

Miss Dettweiler mixed nine pars and two birdies, according to the men's par of 70, in her round of 78 that easily captured low gross prize.

After a 4, 4, 3 start, including a 20-footer for a birdie on the third, the Congressional player missed a 2-foot putt on the fourth and then went 7, 7, encountering traps and a 3-putt green. She finished, according to the card, for a 40.

Mrs. Blair in Trouble

On the return the Maryland titleholder interrupted a string of 5's with a par 3 on the thirteenth, deuced the sixteenth and finished with a pari of regulation pars.

Mrs. Blair also was in trouble on the long fifth and sixth moles going out, but other than that had a combination of 4's and 5's for a 45. Starting back 5, 5, 6, Mrs. Blair paired the thirteenth and scored 3's again on the sixteenth and seventeenth, a par and birdie. She finished with 6 for a 41.

Only 42 players of the original field of 130 turned in cards, as an early morning rain forced 33 players to withdraw and 45 others failed to turn in cards. Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, Women's D. C. Golf Association president, officiated at the presentation.

Mrs. Blair's card:

Crimson's Card Tough

Open With Brown Harlow Is Fearful Opponent Is Strong

By the Associated Press.

Cambridge, Mass., Sept. 28.—The conviction that only a good team can beat his Harvard eleven adds nothing to Dick Harlow's peace of mind. He has studied the Crimson's schedule and found it jammed with good teams, from top to bottom.

While most of the coaching profession worries about what may happen next month or the one after, Harlow is fearful of what this Saturday will bring when he sends his experienced striplings against what is expected to be the strongest Brown team in six years.

Only once in 63 years has Harvard lost an opening game, in 1926, when Bo McMillin's amazing Geneva forces ruined Agnid Horween's coaching debut. But then in all of these years, Harvard never has attempted to start a season against a major rival like Brown.

Knowing little or nothing about the current Brown squad, Harlow is somewhat alarmed over the Bruin's boast that "it will take three touchdowns to beat us."

With nine seniors and two juniors in the starting line-up, Harvard will launch its season with a more flexible and better drilled team than any that has started in many years. Its attack is even more deceptive than that of its predecessor in midseason, but its defense is much weaker, for its rests on the Crimson's ability to out-smart rivals, rather than overpower them.

All of the backfield material, which is promising, despite the departure of Vernon (the magnificent faker) struck, runs to the greyhound type, averaging 172 pounds. The standouts are fleet Torbie MacDonald, Franke Foley, Austie Harding, Clarence "Chief" Boston and Cliff Wilson, roommates and rival quarterbacks, and Struck's most logical successor, Myron (Mike) Cohen, a hard driving fullback but not a finished spin-bucker. Their replacements, while none too plentiful, appear adequate, even for a team that faces seven major games.

The end situation, provided Capt. Bob Green and the equally experienced Don Daughters escape injury, is satisfactory, as it is at center, where Tim Russell and the fast-developing Jim Fearron are prepared to spell each other. At this stage only Ken Booth ranks as a dependable tackle, and the squad's two best guards, Nick Mellen and Dave Gleck, have had but little varsity experience, and, to make matters much worse, their replacements are much greener.

The schedule: October 1, Brown; 8, Cornell; 15, Army; 22, Dartmouth; 29, Princeton; November 5, Chicago; 12, Virginia; 19, Yale at New Haven.

Mickelson Suggests Meetings For Our Heroes of Sport

By Paul Mickelson.

Associated Press Sports Writer.

New York, Sept. 28.—Suggested conferences for our premiers and heroes of sport:

At Rochester, Minn.—At this health spa should assemble all prominent bone specialists and great healers to decide once and for all the whys and wherefores of the major league baseball sore arm epidemic. Unless this is done, a flock of ball clubs are going to march—right back to the minor league sector.

At Orange, N. J.—The back room of two-ton Tony Galento's saloon would be a swell place for two far-reaching conferences—one for all the white hopes who want to do something about Henry Armstrong and Joe Louis; the second for former fighters like Jack Dempsey, James J. Braddock, Mickey Walker, Jack Sharkey, Benny Leonard and Tony Canzoneri, who'd like to know how to run a restaurant.

At Cooperstown, N. Y.—A conference of Premiers Kenesaw M. Landis, Ford Frick, Will Harridge, and all the owners of major league clubs on "how to decide the National League pennant race before September 30" would save fans, players and newspapers plenty of dough.

At Slippery Rock, Pa.—Great good could be done here if college football coaches would meet to do something about Dr. Jock Sutherland's great problem—how to get more than one team at Pittsburgh. The doctor has "only" one team—his first stringers—and the situation at Pitt grows darker by the hour.

At WPA headquarters, Washington—A conference of Frank (Onkel) Frisch, Gabby Street, Burleigh Grimes and others to be named later to determine "where do we go from here, boys?"

At Concord, Mass.—Assemble, all ye Minute Men, to figure out some means of stopping J. Smith Ferebee, who's running everybody daffy with his golf marathons.

At Brookfield, Conn.—Up in the hayloft of Squire Gene Sarazen's barn, a mass meeting should be held by all pro golfers to take measures against Samuel Jackson Snead, who's running away with too much swag.

At Bellevue "psych" ward, New York—Another assemblage, this one of psychiatrists, to find out if all these baseball injuries are located in the head only.

At Wahoo, Nebr.—For the benefit of all, notably the United States Lawn Tennis Association, J. Donald Budge should meet with representatives of a certain sporting goods house and announce the exact dates of his pro tour.

At Newport, R. I.—A conference headed by Rollie Hemsley to find out "how to drink spirits and play baseball."

At St. Charles Hotel, New Orleans—A conference of defeated college football coaches headed by Lowell (Red) Dawson, of Tulane; Bernie Moore, Louisiana State, and Robert Zuppke, Illinois, all of whom got tripped the first time out.

Maryland and Catholic U. Are Dealt Severe Blows

Three Terp Regulars to Miss Saturday's Game Moutenot, Sard Ace, Is Still Ailing Hoyas Drill Hard for Hampden-Sydney Battle

Maryland's hopes of upsetting Penn State when the Terps invade the Nittany Lions' lair tomorrow all but vanished last night when it was learned that three regulars will not make the trip because of injuries.

The most serious blow is loss of Charley Weidinger, brainy field general and hub of the team's offensive, who may be out for two weeks. The blond signal caller not only was an accurate passer and good ball handler, but had the knack of needling new life into the team when its spirit ebbed.

Francis Beamer, husky end who spent most of last season on the bench nursing a broken finger, and Rip Hewitt, chief utility back, are the others who will be left at home when the team departs early tomorrow morning.

With Weidinger on the sidelines Pershing Mondorff, blocking back, will call the signals. Frank Dwyer, a rookie, and Leo Mueller, a junior who did not play last year, will hold down the wing positions.

Gloom at C. U.

A cloud of gloom hovered over Catholic University's campus as Charlie Moutenot, ace ball carrier, was confined to his bed with a heavy cold. It is not known whether he will be able to make the trip to Olean, N. Y., for Sunday's curtain-raiser with St. Bonaventure.

Coach "Dutch" Bergman is also beset with quarterback troubles, inasmuch as Johnny Fiorellino, the Cards' first string signal caller, is still ailing with a bad shoulder and at this writing doesn't figure to be ready for heavy duty before the Dertoit game. Leo Dunn, former Eastern High School star, and Hank Brostek, a converted halfback, are being groomed for the post now filled by Pete Sachen, Fiorellino's understudy.

The cards entrain tomorrow morning at 7:30 o'clock for the site of their game with the Indians.

Hoyas Work Hard

Georgetown's gridmen braved a muddy field to get in their final licks for tomorrow's opener with Hampden-Sydney, and Coach Jack Hagerty refused to enthuse about his charges' chances of stopping the Virginians. Hagerty, however, was more pleased with yesterday's workout than he was Wednesday, when he gloomily admitted the squad didn't appear to have much chance of stopping the freshmen, let alone a tough opponent.

Hagerty still is uncertain about the starting line-up, and frankly admits he won't know much about it until the boys quit this afternoon.

'Little World Series' Will Start Tomorrow

Newark, N. J., Sept. 29 (U.P.)—The Little World Series between Newark, International League champions, and the American Association winner will start here Saturday at 2:30 p. m. The second game will be played at the same time Sunday afternoon with the third game under the lights Monday, beginning at 8 p. m. The remainder of the series necessary for one club to win four games will be played in the park of the American Association representative.

And Ten Others

It isn't exactly true what they're saying about the Columbia-Yale game at New Haven tomorrow. Strictly speaking, it won't be one man against the big Blue team at all. Sid Luckman won't be alone out there on the field; he will be surrounded by 10 other fellows. But you might not suspect it from the pre-game patter.

VIDMER.

All anyone hears about Columbia and its chances in the Bowl concern the sensational Sidney, possibly because Columbia would'nt have any chance at all if he weren't among those present. Still, the others deserve more recognition than eight men in a boat for without Bob Taylor, Radvilas, Seigel, Seidel, Capt. Jack Wright and the rest, Luckman wouldn't have a chance either. And he is first to draw attention to that fact.

Last year he was surrounded by 10 fellows also, and they didn't furnish him with much co-operation. They did their best, but their utmost efforts were on an inferior quality that left Luckman and Columbia losing five times and winning only twice. However, there were two ties on the record and two of the defeats were by the narrowest margins—points after touchdowns.

There wasn't much satisfaction for Sidney or the ten other fellows in that season. As one game after another was snatched away by the fiendish hands of fate. It left the team disappointed almost every Saturday night with dazed, glazed looks in their eyes as they thought about what might have been if—if—if—

But as sure as another Saturday came, Luckman would come back, more determined than ever, growing more brilliant as the weeks slipped by and the heartaches piled up one after another. I never shall forget him as he stood just inside the dressing room doors after the Navy game, the sweat streaming from his face and his shoulders drooping with fatigue.

No Luck, Just Luckman

The week before Columbia had been nosed out by Brown, 7 to 6, in spite of Luckman's heroic efforts. That day the Navy might have been conquered as Luckman ran and plunged, punted and passed, tackled and block through sixty minutes of maximum effort. But one of his passes had been dropped in the ned zone, a point after touchdown that might have changed the trend of the game had been missed in the early going, penalties had come at critical points—and the Navy had won, 13 to 6.)

And so Sidney stood there just inside the door as his weary teammates filed by, and finally he looked up, shook his head in consternation and sighed, "What do you have to do to win a game anyway?"

In that brief moment his heart was broken and his spirit dimmed. He had given everything he had and a little more than anyone could possibly expect, yet his team had lost again. Despair, discouragement, dejection was written on the grim young lines around his mouth and in the weary expression of his eyes. But the moment passed briefly, and the next Saturday he was out on the field playing just a little harder against Cornell, and when his utmost efforts failed again, he was back the next Saturday fighting for every inch and every yard and every point against Syracuse.

So it went through the campaign, on down through a surprising and scoreless tie with Stanford. Yet Luckman never wilted until the final whistle blew each Saturday, and he was always back begging for another chance to win a game a week later.

One Among Eleven

When he came up to the varsity as a sophomore and his name started hitting the headlines rather regularly, there were those among the 10 other fellows who resented the fame that was being showered on his individual exploits while they were ignored and known only by numbers. But last season, as Luckman kept plugging, even in defeat, and by his undiminishing determination kept the scores at least close, the 10 other fellows realized that the praise were not too loud nor the plaudits too long. They didn't mind being just 10 other fellows along with Sidney Luckman, for he was, indeed, the one man who gave Columbia a chance in every game.

When the season ended and the squad elected its captain for this year, however, they selected Jack Wright instead of Sid. Probably because there was honor enough already for Luckman and they realized that the football world would know him well enough by his deeds alone. It was another disappointment for the black haired, broad shouldreded by; another disappointment in a season filled with them, yet he took it in the same spirit that he took each week's defeat—with a determination to come back all the harder.

"I'll just have to do even better next season," he said last winter after the election was announced. "After all it will be my last chance to make good."

And so tomorrow Sidney Luckman starts his last drive, facing a long list of hard, tough games. After Yale comes Army and then Colgate, Penn, Cornell, Virginia, Navy, Syracuse and Brown in unbroken order. There will be hardly a week in which to relax, but with the help of the ten other fellows, Sidney may find the answer to that question he asked so despairingly last fall—what a fellow has to do to kin a game.

But even if the odds are too great to win very often; even if fate frowns as frequently as it did in the past, Luckman will be worth watching all the way, for he will be in there giving everything he has in every battle, and even if his best isn't enough, I don't think there will be any doubt about his making good.

Prominent Stables Mobilizing for Opening of Laurel Meet

Turf Stars, Platers at Nearby Oval

Airflame on Scene Steeplechases Listed Ten Stake Races Post Time 1:30 P. M.

By Walter Haight.

Horesflesh of all descriptions is being mobilized at nearby Laurel in preparation for the 25-day stand of the sport of kings on the Washington-Baltimore Botilevard to start tomorrow. From long, lanky 2-year-olds to squatty, square veterans; from cheap halm-milers to expensive stake horses; from grays to blacks; from Derby hopes to bad-legged "has-beens" they are gathered with owners hoping to take down a share of the generous purses being offered by the Maryland Fair, Inc., official name of the association controlling the track.

In all, ten stake races have been turned over to Racing Secretary J. P. Turner, sr., with the outstanding event due on the closing day. It is the Washington Handicap at 1¼ miles, with $15,000 added. While this is an affair for the first flight handicappers, there are chances of collecting big money for good horses of every age, including the Spalding Lowe Jenkins Handicap, the Selima Stakes, the Richard Johnson Stakes, the Maryland Futurity and the Chevy Chase Steeplechase Handicap.

In all $315,000 will be distributed to horsemen with a daily average of $13,000 being passed along. While the meeting isn't exactly a "take-a-day" proposition, the racing book is an excellent one and the sport should be up to par for any Laurel meeting.

Arrive From the Graw

At sundown yesterday the migration of horses from Havre de Grace was almost complete. They arrived in carloads and vanloads from the upper State track. In addition, there have been notable arrivals from New York, Ne wEngland and the Middle West. Then again, there are horses trained right on the grounds and ready to go from all accounts.

Although the entries for tomorrow will not be available until noon today, there is every indication that the opening week-end program will be a good one. The top spot is the $7,500 added Capital Handicap and it is slated to draw a good field of sprinters.

The six-furlong dash is expected to mark the return to racing of A. G. Vanderbilt's Airflame. Considered the year's best sprinter, Airflame was the victim of a doping episode at Saratoga when a saliva test showed an overdose of morphine in a race in which he quit badly. Although large rewards have been offered those responsible for the condition of the horse have not been apprehended. Airflame appears to be back in shape and the experience did not seem to permanently effect his health.

Airflame has been assigned 123 pounds but must be a tops to handle the crack crew due to oppose him. Preeminent, 128 pounds; Accolade, 119; Aneroid, 118; Wise Prince, 118; Mower, 117; Lavengro, 111; Sun Egret, 111; White Cockade, 109; Clocks, 106; King Pharamond, 106, and Gold Flag, 105, are expected to be in the entries if the track is fast. If conditions are off, several of these will not appear but their places will be taken by others favoring mud.

Top Flight Horses

Practically all of the top flight horses in the East, War Admiral notably excepted, will see action at Laurel during the meeting. Seabiscuit is on the scene and will compete at least once. Marica, Stagehand, Thanksgiving, Aneroid, Cravat, Yale o' Mine, Jacola all have stake engagements.

The program at Laurel call for seven flat races and a steeplechase with the jumping event listed as the second race. The daily double will again be a wagering feature and will be on the first and third races. Post time for the first event will be 1:30 p. m.

General Manager Frank Brady has been on the scene for several days and was pleased with the condition of the plant.

A crowd of 15,000, the more the merrier for the officials, is expected tomorrow—but there's going to be many who are going to miss the late President Andrew J. (Cy) Cummings.

Ott Hits 34th Homer Sparks Club's Rally Melton Easy Victor

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 29.—Before the smallest crowd of the season at the Polo Grounds—1,190—the Giants took an easy 9-to-2 decision from the Phillies today behind the eight-hit pitching of Cliff Melton.

Mel Ott's 34th homer of the year, with a mate on base, sparked a three-run rally in the first inning, and then they batted around in the fourth to shove their other six runs over. Mickey Haslin, with three singles, and Jojo Moore with two singles and three runs batted in led the New York attack.

Max Butcher was belted out in the fourth inning blast and was charged with the defeat. It was Melton's 14th victory of the season.

ifornia to win the mythical national championship by defeating Tulane, 2½, before 83,000 popeyed spectators in the Rose Bowl.

"Ernie Pinckert has been a brilliant blocking back throughout his college career . . . he has spent his football life out in front of somebody else, but today he scored two touchdowns and the Trojans needed them both to stop Tulane.

"The game was won in the third period when Pinckert did his stuff . . . The big halfback dashed over for the first score from the 28-yard line using his reverse, the only offensive play he has. So seldom has Ernie carried the ball that he has only play in his list of assignments—his reverse . . .

"Just a few minutes later, Pinckert personally made full arrangements for an encore for his side and a second personal triumph jby recovering a Tulane fumble on the visitors' 28-yard line. Two dashes at the line moved the ball up 5 yards and then Pinckert dusted off his reverse and ran 23 yards to the goal line, scoring standing up without an enemy hand touching his person."

Nice going, Ernie.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald

Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month."

Despite his failure to merit any points on the basis of yesterday's game, Taft Wright continues to hold a commanding lead in the Nats' Man of the Month contest for September. . . Yesterday's ten points were distributed as follows:

To Rick Ferrell, three points, because he drove in two of the Nats' runs while contributing a double to their attack.
To Zeke Bonura, two points, because he made two of the Nats' hits.
To Cecil Travis, two points, for the same reason.
To Buddy Myer, two points, because he drove in a run with his lone hit.
To Al Simmons, one point, because he pounded out a two-bagger.

THE SCORE

Wright	33	Bluege	7
Bonura	29	Appleton	7
Simmons	27	Kelley	5

Reds Defeat Cards, 7-4

Vander Meer Victor Registers His 14th Lombardi Takes Lead

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Sept. 9.—Johnny Vander Meer got into some tight spots today, but held the St. Louis Cardinals to seven hits and won his fourteenth victory, 7 to 4, for the Cincinnati Reds.

Vander Meer walked a total of six men, forcing in one run, and struck out only one, Johnny Mize, Cards first baseman.

Ernie Lombardi, Reds' catcher, recaptured the National League batting leadership from Mize, getting a double and single, while mize went hitless. Percentages were, Lombardi, .13382; Mize, .3369.

The Cards threw four pitchers into the game—Max Lanier, Max Macon, Paul Dean and Clyde Shoun—apparently wanting none too tired to take part in the series opening tomorrow with the Cubs.

Selections at Rockingham Park.

Dear Al: While waiting for the opening of Laurel tomorrow, it might be well to go into the several complaints I have received regarding Jockey Johnny Gilbert's riding last Tuesday. After performing in sensational fashion and winning 18 races up to that day, Gilbert turned a form flip-flop and failed to win in five tries, despite the fact that he was aboard favorites, for the most part. I have not been a great admirer of some of Gilbert's rides down through the years, but I do think he was doing his best last Tuesday. In the first race he was aboard Short Cake, the favorite, and he had plenty of excuses. He was forced to race on the inside and was cut off so abruptly that the horse was knocked into the rail. The patrol judge backed up this statement by Gilbert after the race and officials suspended Jockey O. Laidley, who caused the trouble. In the second race, Oak Apple might not have been the favorite had not Gilbert been the rider. From where I sat he seemed to be getting all he could out of the mount and the horse simply tired under him. In the third race, Jadasan had little right to draw the chief money except for Gilbert. Watched him closely and he almost had to carry Jadsan along the first part of it. The field was ganged up and he had to go to the outside for racing room, and Jadsan closed ground to be third. An inconsistent half-miler, I believe we made a bad favorite. In the sixth race, Gilbert rode Playmore second to Outboard. To my mind, he rated Playmore perfectly, and only the fact that his mount was giving the winner, Outboard, 20 pounds, kept him from winning. In the seventh race, Master Lad ran pitifully under Gilbert, but I believe we made Gilbert, and not the horse, the favorite. Perhaps it was a case of the law of averages catching up with the jockey, because he certainly had a whole lot

Housing Loans By D. C. Banks Make Gains

Requests 75 a Week Previous Rate 50 Campaign a Success

By Thomas M. Cahill.

A marked increase in applications for loans from banks in Washington under Title I of the national housing act, is reported by Hilleary G. Hoskinson, president of the District of Columbia Bankers Association and vice president of Riggs National Bank. During the summer, these loans made by banks in the District, aggregated approximately 50 or 60 a week, but in the past three weeks, the amount has risen to around 75 a week.

Although the fall season is a favorable time for property improvements and repairs, demand for funds to finance these renovations is likely to decrease. As this has proved the case in the past, the present increase in loan applications is particularly pleasing. A campaign was started last February by the District Bankers Association to supply money for building improvements. Since the third of that month, banks in the association have granted a total of 1,661 such loans up to the current week.

These institutions issued 80 loans for the week ended September 23, and in the preceding week they made 86. Belief is expressed by bankers that the requests will continue, and they think the average number extended may reach 100 a week. Building supply trades and employment have benefited by this campaign. It is also reported that building and loan associations in the National Capital are continuing to grant a large number of loans for construction purposes.

A. I. B. Program

The program committee of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, is headed this year by Francis E. Robey, first vice president of the chapter and assistant cashier of the Bank of Commerce & Savings. Mr. Robey will be assisted in this work by the following committee members: J. Earle McGeary, W. B. Hibbs & Co.; John M. Christie, Riggs National Bank; G. C. Turnbull, Morris Plan Bank; Raymond Jones, Metropolitan National Bank; E. M. Blaiklock, Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Stuart Ostlvie, Second National Bank; James Ahalt, City Bank; Paul Seltzer, American Security & Trust Co., and G. Elmer Flather, Union Trust Co.

The function of this committee is to co-ordinate the various activities of the chapter, which is done by a close co-operation with the chairman of the numerous committees. While no definite dates for future activities are to be announced at this time, however, an oyster roast is being planned for the middle of October.

Three dances will be held, two of them being subscription dances in December and May, and the other planned for the early part of April. Athletic events, which make up an interesting part of the year's activity, will be announced in detail in the near future. Fo-

Cotton Higher For Futures

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—Cotton advanced today on reports of favorable progress at the Munich four-power conference. December sold up from 7.91 to 8.05 and closed at 8.00, with final prices generally 10 to 13 points higher. October, however, was 2 points net lower.

The market opened 6 to 8 points higher in sympathy with steadier Liverpool cables and on moderate foreign buying on a hopeful view of European developments. Southern offerings were light and although a little realizing appeared, prices were generally sustained by scattered buying. October, following the recent covering movement, was sensitive to a little liquidation and closed only 3 points over July.

Cottonseed Oil

Cottonseed oil was steady today, closing 3 higher to 7 lower, with sales of 68 contracts. Steadiness of allied markets, covering in October and commission-house buying buoyed prices, although there was scattered liquidation in the late positions toward the close. Bleachable spot nominal: October closed 7.79; December, 7.92; January, 7.95; March, 8.02; May, 8.06.

Bituminous Production

The National Coal Association estimates bituminous coal production in the United States for the week ended September 24 as approximately 7,800,000 net tons. Production for the corresponding week: 1937, 9,593,000 tons; 1936, 8,911,000 tons.

Stock Sales For August Drop 42.7%

Bond Sales Off 30% Issues 394 Million Top Since June, 1937

According to the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday the dollar value of sales on all registered securities exchanges in August amounted to $1,105,364,617, a decrease of 37.9 per cent from the value of sales in July and a decrease of 13.5 per cent from August, 1937. Stock sales, including rights and warrants, had a value of $988,282,466, a decrease of 39.1 per cent from July. Bond sales were valued at $117,161,542, a decrease of 25.6 per cent from July.

Total sales of stock, including rights and warrants, in August were 40,515,430 shares, or 42.7 per cent under July's total. Total principal amount of bonds sold was $161,579,235, a decrease of 30.4 per cent from July.

The two leading New York exchanges accounted for 95.4 per cent of the value of all sales, 94.9 per cent of stock sales and 99.9 per cent of bond sales on registered exchanges. The total value of sales on all exempt exchanges was $477,612, a decrease of 34.2 per cent from July.

On the Washington Stock Exchange August stock sales were $118,868 and bond sales $48,160, a total of $167,028, which compares with July stock sales of $205,693 and bond sales of $16,731, a total of $222,424.

During August a total of $394,433,000 of new securities became fully effective under the securities act of 1933. Included in this amount were $78,465,000 of stock issues that were registered for reserve against the conversion of other securities, so that the total, net of these reserved securities, was $315,968,000. This is the highest figure for any month since June, 1937, and compares with $222,595,000 for July, 1938, and $224,459,000 for August, 1937.

Registrations by gas and electric utility companies accounted for more than three-fourths of the August total and were the largest in dollar amount to have been effectively registered by this group in any month since the introduction of the securities act. Their registrations (exclusive of securities reserved for conversion)—which for more than a year did not come to as much as $100,000,000 for any month—amounted to $243,412,000 in August. Approximately $218,440,000 of these securities were intended for cash sale for the registrants' account and almost 85 per cent of th net cash proceeds from such sales were intended for the repayment of indebtedness.

Stocks Advance, Discounting Peace Foreign Markets Stronger Than Here All German Issues in Demand

New York, Sept. 29.—Virtual agreement on the cession of parts of the Sudetenland to Germany following the four-power conference today, holding as it did the promise that Europe and the world would not be embroiled in a war, electrified financial markets in all financial centers today. For the first time in more than a month, those who have placed their savings in securities felt justified in their faith.

There was still a note of caution, for, after much worry the news seemed almost too good to be true, but when business closed today there was nothing to disturb the reassurance that wisdom would rule.

Markets here got off to a good start, but before they opened they had the benefit of what had happened abroad. On the foreign bourses there had been no time Wednesday for investors to take advantage of the calling of the four-power conference. Consequently gains today in London, Paris and Berlin, as well as in other European capitals, were more sensational than the gains here. All markets abroad opened strong and active. Offerings were light, and on the London Exchange, for example, Czechoslovak 8 per cent bonds spurted 17 points, or 61 per cent in value.

There was also a heavy demand abroad for German issues, the Dawes loan gaining 16 points in London, the Young loan obligations jumping 13 and the German potash loan 21 points. A similar list could be compiled for the Paris list, which, in many cases, showed improvements running to 20 per cent, while in Berlin gains of 5 to 10 points were the order. Here was written, in dollars and cents, the answer to the question whether so-called "money interests" wanted war. The charge is sometimes made by the unthinking that "international bankers" get us into war. The markets of the last four weeks should dispel such charges.

Steels and Autos Lead

Steel and automobile shares led the rise today. Both could conceivably be placed in the "war baby" class, and it has been a significant fact in the action of the market during the weeks of tension abroad that stocks of companies which might benefit from war orders in the event of a war have mixed with the balance of the list rather than shown any independent strength. The assumption is that the investing public knows that war would interfere with business of all types, and that peace is a good thing for the pocketbook, irrespective of its countless other advantages.

Gains of from 1 to more than 4 points were scored by most of the speculative leaders. As has been the case for most of the recent trading sessions, General Motors was the most active stock. It jumped 1⅞ points and Chrysler 2⅞.

Other gains by important leaders included Steel, 1⅛; General Electric, 1¾; Anaconda, 1⅛; Kennecott, 1⅞; Goodyear, 1⅛; Allied Chemical, 4½; Telephone, 4½; Bethlehem, 2⅛; Du Pont, 2½; Johns Manville, 2¾; Sears Roebuck, 2; Union Pacific, 4½; and Woolworth, 3⅛.

Sterling Strong

Among the foreign exchanges there was a corresponding recovery, sterling being strong from the opening and gaining 4½ cents for the day. Currencies of the neutral countries continued soft against the dollar, notably the Belgian guilder, Swiss franc and Netherlands guilder. More gold was purchased for shipment here, following a cut in the war risk insurance rate to half of Wednesday's charge, but the situation showed vast improvement.

Commodities reflected the easing of tension abroad although wheat, after a good gain, set back a bit on suspicion that the Munich conference might not solve the Czechoslovakia crisis entirely. The close was irregular, off ⅛ to up ⅝ cent. Cotton recovered 10 to 13 points with the exception of October, which was down 2 points.

Bonds Rally

Listed bonds rallied sharply today, with governmental issues of all descriptions heading the advance. The virtual assurance of peace in Europe, for the time being, occasioned buying of United States Treasury obligations and many foreign dollar bonds. Corporate issues likewise advanced sharply, and in some cases regained all the losses established while the war threat depressed markets. Trading in all bonds amounted to $7,280,000, against $9,250,000 the previous day.

United States Treasury securities showed gains ranging from small fractions to just over a point, as institutional investors and dealers rushed back into the market. The new Treasury 2½s due 1952, callable 1950, halted just ⅛ point under the high since formal trading was started September 15, but the formal high still is considerably under the best counter figure since the financing announcement. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations moved upward, along with the direct obligations.

Foreign Loans Strong

In the foreign section, losses established early in the week were regained at a bound. The two issues of Czech 8 per cent bonds advanced nearly 18 points each, but the gain was attributed rather to technical circumstances rather than to confidence in the new European settlement. Italian bonds showed gains to 8 points, and German issues were moderately improved. The Belgian group gained 1 to 2 points. Australians moved back to normal levels with gains to 6 points, and Canadians were up as well. Even the Latin-American default bonds shared in the enthusiasm.

Highest grade corporate bonds advanced around a point each. Telephone issues were in keen demand, and United States Steel debentures were traded in fair volume at a point advance. Investment bankers resumed their efforts for the flotation of further well rated bonds, with a large issue of $65,000,000 Ohio Power first mortgage bonds promptly placed in registry with the SEC.

Speculative railroad bonds moved forward readily, with the gains ranging from fractions to 4 points. Intermediate priced niterest paying bonds did better than the borderline and default issues. International Telephone bonds were 3 to 4 points better, as the extensive foreign business of the company makes these issues sensitive to foreign developments. Local traction issues joined the upswing, as did holding company bonds, convertibles and other special groups.

Wheat Wavers As Peace Hope Fluctuates

Closings Irregular Trading Moderate Range Narrow

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 29.—Suspicion that a prompt settlement of the Czechoslovak crisis might not be reached by the Munich diplomatic conference lifted Chicago wheat prices a bit today.

Indications of some skepticism were manifested chiefly as trading drew to an end without much positive evidence that peace hopes were immediately to be gratified. Throughout the day, though, dealings were of only moderate volume, and recent nervousness of traders was absent.

Contrasting with violent fluctuations previously this week, the Chicago market most of the time today moved in a range of less than a cent. Uncertainties regarding the outcome at Munich were emphasized by announcement of a night session.

Wheat futures here closed irregular, ⅛ cent off to ⅝ up, compared with yesterday's finish. December 65⅝@65½; May, 66⅜@66¼. Corn, ½ to 1⅛ down; December, 49⅝@49¾; May, 52½@52⅝. Oats unchanged to ⅜ decline. Rye showing ⅜ to ½ drop, and provisions unchanged to 7 cents setback.

Bank of Commerce Elects Directors

The annual meeting of stockholders of the Bank of Commerce & Savings was held in Alexandria yesterday. All the following directors were re-elected: Thomas N. Beavers, William L. Bush, James E. Colliflower, E. T. Chewning, A. S. Gatley, Thomas J. Groom, Joseph H. Milans, Vernon G. Owen, Frank Owings, George M. Quirk, M. D. Rosenberg, Joseph Sanders and Dr. C. A. Weaver.

M. D. Rosenberg, president, advised the stockholders that the bank had enjoyed the most successful year in its history; that deposits had reached an all-time high and earnings were the best on record. He said that one of the principal factors had been the progress of the H street branch at the corner of North Capitol and H streets.

The organization meeting of the board of directors will take place October 5, at which time officers for the ensuing year will be elected.

Gold Increases Excess Reserves

The Federal Reserve Board said today the continued importation of foreign gold caused an increase of $150,000,000 to a total of $2,890,000,000 in the amount of lendable money in the Nation's banks in the week ended September 28.

The Nation's gold stock increased $126,000,000 as foreigners sent their wealth here for safe keeping because of the threat of war. Money in circulation increased 22,000,000 during the week.

Washington Gas Net Gains

The monthly report of the Washington Gas Light Co. filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission shows operating revenues of $421,449 for August this year compared with $408,237 for August a year ago, in increase of $13,212. Operating expenses increased $8,480 from $403,478 in August last year to $411,958 this August resulting in the net operating revenue of $9,491, an increase of $4,732 compared with August last year.

A net result of the month's operation after all deductions for interest and amortization was a usual summer deficit amounting to $71,725 which, however, is $4,863 more favorable than that for August, 1937. Notwithstanding the seasonal loss the company reports earnings for the eight months of $599,014 compared with $512,787 for the same period last year.

C. & P. Tel. Co.

Operating revenues of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co. for August were $907,458, and operating expenses for the same period were $663,335, according to Charles A. Robinson, general manager. In August of last year operating revenues were $884,316 and operating expenses were $654,909. Taxes for the month were $87,253, or $7,722 more than in August, 1937, and interest deductions amounted to $36,163, resulting in a balance before dividend of $124,964, as compared with $133,568 a year ago.

Engineering Awards Continue Rise

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—For the eleventh consecutive week this year, engineering construction awards in the period ended last Tuesday exceeded the comparable 1937 week, the "Engineering News-Record" reported today.

The total was $42,299,000 against $82,252,000 the preceding week and $49,494,000 in the 1937 week.

Brokers' Loans Drop $8,000,000 for Week

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $517,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $8,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $1,030,000,000.

Clearings 11.8% Under A Year Ago

16th Week of Drop 23% Under Week Ago All Centers Lower

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 29.—Sharp recession in bank clearings during the last week lengthened the difference from the comparative 1937 week and marked the 16th consecutive decline from the level of the year previous.

Total clearings for 22 leading cities of the United States for the week ended Wednesday, September 28, according to Dun & Bradstreet, amounted to $4,606,664,000, a drop of 23.1 per cent from the sum reported a week ago and 11.8 per cent under the $5,222,371,000 for the same 1937 week. The year-to-year comparison for the September 21 week had revealed a loss of only 7.9 per cent.

Turnover at New York shrank to $2,800,414,000, compared with $3,103,246,000 last year, a decrease of 9.8 per cent. For the 21 outside cities, transactions fell to $1,806,250,000 from $2,119,125,000 a year ago, giving a drop of 14.8 per cent.

Bank clearings at leading cities, together with percentage declines from a year ago, follow:

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, Sept. 29.—Share prices moved sharply upward in the stock market today in an air of general confidence. Despite considerable profit taking, final quotations were close to the day's best, especially British and mid-European bonds, transatlantics and industrial shares. Kaffirs and oils were marked up and coppers shared in the bread improvement.

Paris—Security values shot abruptly forward in active trading in the bourse today after authorities found it necessary to remove price gain restrictions. Bank of France advanced 700 francs. Royal Dutch was 60 higher and Suez Canal spurted 2,100.

Liverpool.—A more optimistic view of Central European events depressed wheat futures 3 to 4 pence at the finish today. Other bearish factors were easiness at Winnipeg and increased offerings from exporting countries. Cotton futures quietly dipped 1 to 4 points under scattered liquidation owing largely to the advance in sterling. Trade calling, as a result of the large spot cotton business, steadied late declines.

Lanston Dividend

Directors of Lanston Monotype have declared the regular quarterly dividend of $1, payable November 30 to stockholders of record November 18.

Legionnaires See Studios 'Under Wraps'

Hollywood Defends Self Against Mass Attack; Los Angeles Clamps Down the Lid

By Frederick C. Othman

Hollywood, Sept. 29 (U.P.).—The Warner Brothers kept their fingers crossed and played host to 50,000—count 'em!—American Legionnaires, who wanted to see movies in the making.

Brothers Harry and Jack built a grandstand inside their main gate, and told all their stars, from Bette Davis to Errol Flynn, to find seats thereon and look pleasant, please, while the legion rolled by yesterday in 200 busses and 2,500 private automobiles. This parade in reverse lasted from 1 p. m. to 5 p. m., and proved wearing on the facial muscles of the welcomers.

The Warners decreed that no Legionnaire leave his car, on the theory that one on the ground would start a procession afoot and play havoc with the day's shooting schedules. The Brothers had 550 police on hand to see that no visitor violated the rules.

Other studios redoubled the guards at their gates and at this writing had succeeded in repulsing all those visitors who wanted to enter the imitation freight trains and bucking flivvers.

Paramount Springs Film

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer held a tea for Gold Star mothers in a sound stage, Twentieth Century-Fox announced a luncheon for Legion chieftains—and Paramount, by strange coincidence, released a movie entitled "Son of the Legion." This is on display at the Paramount Theater 10r 66 cents, which includes a look at assorted Paramount stars on the stage.

With Mayor Frank Shaw just recalled by popular vote, Mayor-elect Fletcher Bowron not yet in office, and Los Angeles municipal affairs at sixes and sevens, the word went out—prematurely—that the town was wide open.

Far famed Hollywood boulevard overnight became a Reno and a Monte Carlo combined, with 25-cent slot machines in the hamburger stands and roulette wheels in the fancy hotels.

The Hollywood Plaza Hotel, where Clara Bow established her "It" Cafe, erected a gigantic tent in its back yard, named it the French Casino, advertised 100 dancing girls and lined the canvas walls with chuck-a-luck cages, race wheels, roulette tables and dice games.

Even the dignified Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel turned its blossom room, a favorite spot for society dances, into a gambling den de luxe. Hardly had the fun started before word arrived that the well-known lid was on. The roulette wheels disappeared before they got warmed up; the slot machines had no chance to disgorge any quarters, and gambling-minded Legionnaires found they had to take speedboats to any of three gambling barges anchored in the ocean to get a run for their money.

These developments seemed not to have dampened the spirits of the visitors, who tied up traffic in downtown Los Angeles, rode on the tops of taxicabs, held parades, put torpedoes on the street car tracks, took naps on the pavement and defied motorists to run over them.

Paints Town Red

One exuberant visitor in a Legion cap even had a brush and a can of red paint, with which he decorated automobiles creeping past. Although hotels had punched holes in the paper laundry bags in all the closets and carefully hidden the fire hose, there were frequent showers on the throngs below.

All this was tough on the motion-picture palaces, which flaunted gigantic signs: "Motion pictures are your best entertainment." They were virtually empty. There was too much entertainment outside, free.

Elizalde to Take Oath Here Today

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—Joaquin Miguel Elizalde, newly appointed Philippine resident commissioner to the United States, said tonight he would take his oath of office before the Secretary of War tomorrow in Washington.

Declaring his intentiin to further friendship between the United States and the Philippines, Elizalde said he would work toward "following the mandate of the Tydings-McDuffie bill, which provides for a ten-year transition period and grant's full independence automatically in 1948."

Elizalde succeeds Quintin Paredes, who resigned after two years of service.

Legionnaires See Studios 'Under Wraps'

Hollywood Defends Self Against Mass Attack; Los Angeles Clamps Down the Lid

By Frederick C. Othman

Hollywood, Sept. 29 (U.P.).—The Warner Brothers kept their fingers crossed and played host to 50,000—count 'em!—American Legionnaires, who wanted to see movies in the making.

Brothers Harry and Jack built a grandstand inside their main gate, and told all their stars, from Bette Davis to Errol Flynn, to find seats thereon and look pleasant, please, while the legion rolled by yesterday in 200 busses and 2,500 private automobiles. This parade in reverse lasted from 1 p. m. to 5 p. m., and proved wearing on the facial muscles of the welcomers.

The Warners decreed that no Legionnaire leave his car, on the theory that one on the ground would start a procession afoot and play havoc with the day's shooting schedules. The Brothers had 550 police on hand to see that no visitor violated the rules.

Other studios redoubled the guards at their gates and at this writing had succeeded in repulsing all those visitors who wanted to enter the imitation freight trains and bucking flivvers.

Paramount Springs Film

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer held a tea for Gold Star mothers in a sound stage, Twentieth Century-Fox announced a luncheon for Legion chieftains—and Paramount, by strange coincidence, released a movie entitled "Son of the Legion." This is on display at the Paramount Theater for 66 cents, which includes a look at assorted Paramount stars on the stage.

With Mayor Frank Shaw just recalled by popular vote, Mayor-elect Fletcher Bowron not yet in office, and Los Angeles municipal affairs at sixes and sevens, the word went out—prematurely—that the town was wide open.

Far famed Hollywood boulevard overnight became a Reno and a Monte Carlo combined, with 25-cent slot machines in the hamburger stands and roulette wheels in the fancy hotels.

The Hollywood Plaza Hotel, where Clara Bow established her "It" Cafe, erected a gigantic tent in its back yard, named it the French Casino, advertised 100 dancing girls and lined the canvas walls with chuck-a-luck cages, race wheels, roulette tables and dice games.

Even the dignified Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel turned its blossom room, a favorite spot for society dances, into a gambling den de luxe. Hardly had the fun started before word arrived that the well-known lid was on. The roulette wheels disappeared before they got warmed up; the slot machines had no chance to disgorge any quarters, and gambling-minded Legionnaires found they had to take speedboats to any of three gambling barges anchored in the ocean to get a run for their money.

These developments seemed not to have dampened the spirits of the visitors, who tied up traffic in downtown Los Angeles, rode on the tops of taxicabs, held parades, put torpedoes on the street car tracks, took naps on the pavement and defied motorists to run over them.

Paints Town Red

One exuberant visitor in a Legion cap even had a brush and a can of red paint, with which he decorated automobiles creeping past. Although hotels had punched holes in the paper laundry bags in all the closets and carefully hidden the fire hose, there were frequent showers on the throngs below.

All this was tough on the motion-picture palaces, which flaunted gigantic signs: "Motion pictures are your best entertainment." They were virtually empty. There was too much entertainment outside, free.

Elizalde to Take Oath Here Today

New York, Sept. 29 (AP).—Joaquin Miguel Elizalde, newly appointed Philippine resident commissioner to the United States, said tonight he would take his oath of office before the Secretary of War tomorrow in Washington.

Declaring his intentiin to further friendship between the United States and the Philippines, Elizalde said he would work toward "following the mandate of the Tydings-McDuffie bill, which provides for a ten-year transition period and grant's full independence automatically in 1948."

Elizalde succeeds Quintin Paredes, who resigned after two years of service.

START YOUR OWN BUSINESS

There are thousands with money, good character and industry seeking a job—looking for some employer to gamble on them while they are literally surrounded by all kinds of opportunities which will furnish their own employment and make them independent. Successful businesses are founded on ideas—practical ideas which furnish service and solve the needs of neighbors, a community of some group of people with a special interest. Such ideas present themselves daily.

Davey observed that keeping trees trimmed and doctored was a problem to most home owners. He built a great business on this idea. The Hot Shoppe at the edge of town made a fortune as an idea. The box lunch service was an idea. A widow made a fortune serving a special chicken dinner in her country home. A gentleman lost his job because he was too old to work, started making sandwiches in his home near the city and built one of the largest portable selling businesses in the country. Two college graduates unable to find employment manufactured a 5-cent cake—one baked, the other sold. They do a million dollar business today. Two sisters operating a tourist home on the highway turn away an average of 20 guests daily. Hundreds of Clubs, Fraternities, Societies and Associations in Washington could enlarge their service to a larger group if they had the space, the outdoor sunshine, the trees, the lawn, etc.

THIS IS THE MOST FAVORABLE TIME TO GO INTO BUSINESS FOR YOURSELF

HERE IS THE IDEA

A high-class Chicken Dinner Inn anywhere near Washington is in demand. A "BEEFSTEAK INN" near Washington is a big idea. Any first-class Tourist Home on either one of the main highways leading into Washington is a good business. Every "going" or "growing" Club, Society or Association needs a country home with lots of space.

The Estate of Karl Lesny (deceased) is located on Lee Highway, 10 miles from Washington, between Falls Church and Fairfax. A ten-room, modern residence with large screened porches sets back from the highway on top of a hill in a large grove. This home has water, electricity and modern conveniences. A beautiful setting, equipped with servants' house, barn, garages, chicken yard and equipment and 17¼ acres of land. Ready right now for any one of the above suggestions.

The Estate must be closed, and the Trustee has been ordered to sell it in its entirety at PUBLIC AUCTION, Saturday, October 1, at 2 p. m. Very easy terms have been arranged, to wit: One-fourth cash, the balance payable in 24 months or longer if purchaser is acceptable to trustee. Arrangements have been made for personal inspection at any time during the day, up to 9 o'clock at night, before the sale. Go out Lee Highway beyond Falls Church and watch for signs on left at the property. For further particulars, call

I always blush every time I think of the way I use'ta go into Chinese laundries and say, "Melican man wantie washie." Since bein' in pictures out here, I've run into men of all nationalities from Chinese to Arabs and I find that most of 'em talk better English than I do.

When my plane stopped in Arizona not long ago, I saw a city dude walk up to an Indian native who was all decked out in feathers and a blanket and the dude says, "White man, heap big friend Indian. Ugh."

The Indian looked at the fella up and down, then turned to another Indian and hollered, "Hey, Chief, come here and get a load of this guy—he's a riot."

of an attack on her by Hungary, and that, therefore, Hungary was out of the picture. You were not even deadly sure of your great friend, Mussolini, who is a realist.

• • • •

DELIBERATELY, you confused the issue. Deliberately you suppressed the facts. Deliberately, you lied. Deliberately, you raked up 20 years of history to justify yourself, to spin out the time, to cover up the real facts, the terrifying facts, the fateful and fatal facts.

Why, Mr. Hitler? Why were you afraid to tell the truth to the German people? You were afraid of the truth, Mr. Hitler. Terribly, terribly afraid.

Because you knew that if the German people knew the truth they would rise to no mechanical tomtoms, but they would rise again as people, as human beings, with a right to life, to liberty, to knowledge, with a right to be men and not blind automatons, with a right to have homes to live in, and wives to love, and children to cherish, and gay cities, and plowed fields—and for the love of Germany they would sweep you into the ashcan of history.

Yes, Mr. Hitler, you are a coward. No one in your audience, perhaps, knew it, but you knew it.

• • • •

THE PRIME MINISTER of Great Britain did not say he was no coward, he said he was afraid of war. "It seems impossible that a quarrel which is already settled in principle should be the subject of war. I can well understand why the Czechoslovak government have felt unable to accept the terms which have been put before them in the German memorandum . . .

"I was taken completely by surprise when I got back to Germany and found that Hitler insisted that the territory should be handed over immediately and immediately occupied by German troops; that our previous arrangements of safeguarding the people within the territory who were not Germans or who did not want to join the German Reich was rejected." With amazing understatement, the prime minister said, "I find this attitude unreasonable."

But immensely ominous were the simple words, "If I were convinced that any nation had made up its mind to dominate the world by fear of its force, I should feel that it must be resisted."

• • • •

AND THERE lies the issue.

But the German nation has not made up its mind, the German nation cannot make up its mind. The German nation has no mind. The German nation has a "Fuehrer," who is its single mind, its single will, and who on Monday was afraid to tell the German nation the truth.

Vacationing on Farm, Dorothy Thompson Is Far From Crowd, But Not From Crisis

By Harlan Miller.

WOODSTOCK, Vt.—To find Dorothy Thompson in her Vermont hideout requires some determination and a touch of the pilgrim in your makeup. You wouldn't just be passing that way. When she withdraws for the summer from that turbulent world whose anguish is so real and intimate with her, she withdraws in earnest.

Her farm is in a notch of the hills, far from a main highway. We had half expected to make it for dinner and the night, but darkness overtook us. So we telegraphed: "May we come for breakfast or lunch?" Her reply contained only one word.

"Certainly!" she wired.

She had been at work on her play all morning, and was in her working clothes, a white tennis shirt and blue shorts. Very fit and handsome, and youthful despite the gray streak in her hair. She sat us down on her terrace on the south side of the low white farmhouse, looking down the valley which opens like an amphitheater toward the distant backdrop of hills. A maid appeared with glasses of dubonnet.

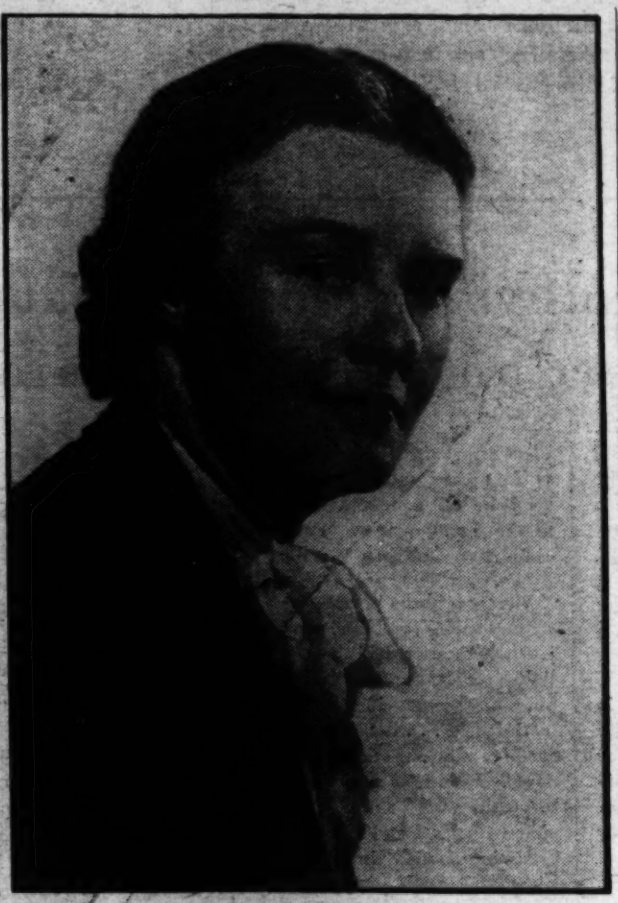
Cables had been coming to her, and letters from her friends in Europe and Washington and New York. She was remote from potential callers, but not from the perpetual crisis. Her mind was filled with it as if she were sitting at a cafe in Prague, or in Berlin or London.

Miss Thompson had eye-witness reports of the dubious condition of Hitler's motorized forces, and insiders' observations of the state of mind of Hitler's generals. Her conversation was studded with the names of men in the shadowy background, names unfamiliar to Americans but as important in Europe as the Corcorans and Sumner Welles here. She had seen them yesterday and talked with them, and knew what was in their minds.

But now her young son wanted to go swimming, and he was putting up an eloquent argument, as the son of Sinclair Lewis and Dorothy Thompson well might. What was a little pneumonia, what were doctor's orders, anyhow? Everyone he knew was swimming in the lake toward Barnard, and even a convalescent had to have some fun. That extraordinary inheritance of cranial capacity was concentrated on going swimming.

"No, darling," said Miss Thompson. "Just nine more days. How about a little rowing?"

Only two things had interrupted her work on the play—the boy's pneumonia and Sinclair Lewis' debut as a serious actor. The columnist turned playwright had gone over to Cohasset to see the Nobel Prize novelist turned actor.



DOROTHY THOMPSON.

She discussed his performance as objectively as if it were Barrymore. A fine performance, restrained and skillful, the patriotic small-town editor in "It Can't Happen Here" to the life. Wifely pride was just barely discernible.

And so to her play. Its third act had been written first, and now the second act was finished, and she was ready to tackle the beginning. Playwrighting had been a greater change from her column than Vermont from the capitals of the world, a relaxation in a way, but a task requiring intense ardors of its own.

Naturally, the theme and plot of this play, to be produced this autumn, still are something of a secret. But I don't think it's violating a lady's confidence to reveal that it distills the essential human juices of the same world turmoil which she discusses so vehemently in her column, clothes them with flesh and blood and the trappings of half a dozen riven lands, and parades them as the ultimate heroes and sufferers who live and breed, breed and die.

But here the artist in Miss Thompson overcomes the columnist. She does not in any of the three acts use any of those fighting words, the nomenclature of dictatorship and oppression, which she has so effectively held up to scorn and contempt in the daily press. All dictators pass, but the people live forever. Even when the dictators are scowling most thunderously and things seem darkest, Miss Thompson's people have some hilarious times in her play, tyrants or no tyrants.

And so back to the current crisis. Those two topics occupy her conversation almost to the exclusion of everything else—her play and the world crisis. They are inextricably intertwined.

Will Hitler force a war? Not unless he has a brainstorm. She read us aloud passages from her latest confidential tidings from Berlin and Prague, Paris and London . . .

Like the reporter who could telephone the mayor of his home town any hour of the day or night, Miss Thompson probably can telephone the President of Czechoslovakia any time and ask him for the lowdown. Other high officials will tell her things they won't even tell their own wives.

Just like a woman, she personalizes the world's woes and takes them to her bosom. A world war is just as much her business as it is Hitler's; just as it is the business of any woman with sons who might die. Naturally, Hitler is to her no hero, no half-god; he is just a troublesome upstart messing around, as to a woman more obscurely situated a pesky blonde in the country club set might be a troublemaker.

Her vehemence is feminine; but she thinks with a masculine mind about those woes she takes to bosom. Her mind is a man's mind, an extraordinary mind, crammed with facts and issues and nuances, and in her mind's eye the grand personages of the world strut and jerk like the puppets in a marionnette show. It makes you dizzy as she marshals them, picks them up, analyzes them, looks clear through them as if they were made of cellophane, lays them down again.

Miss Thompson's conversation is the eighth marvel. If there were a good squad of stenographers to take down every word she says, she could write a book about the inside of Europe between dawn and dusk. Sometimes the English language isn't precise or picturesque enough; then she flavors her thought with a German phrase or a French phrase. She is as full of the minutae of world affairs as a local politician is about county politics. I think President Henry Noble MacCracken, of Vassar, stubbed his toe when he didn't include her in his list of the five most intelligent women in the world.

When that half-serious proposal was made that Miss Thompson be considered for the Presidency, Sinclair Lewis, her husband, relieved himself of one of his acid wisecracks.

"Then I could be Mrs. Roosevelt," he said.

I had heard that Mr. Lewis is a little restive when the talk turns, as it so often does in their household, to Czechoslovakia and weltpolitik and weltschmerz and other evanescent matters. He is more interested in the character and texture of people than in a momentary crisis which will be forgotten in a decade or two; a vista along Main street is more significant to him than the intricate web of politics and statecraft. I wanted to draw her about this, in my impertinent way. But we had the Sudetens with the chicken, the Wagner act with the salad and Manchuria with the coffee . . .

I could see that manuscript drawing her to the desk like a magnet. So I reluctantly said my farewells and drove on up the valley as the sun slanted down toward the western hills. In three or four hours I had heard her discuss three or four dozen important names in world affairs whose names seldom get into headlines . . . There she stood, in white shirt and blue shorts, with a long letter from Munich in her hands.

READ WHAT OUTSTANDING CRITICS THINK ABOUT DOROTHY THOMPSON

John Gunther

John Gunther, author of "Inside Europe," in telling of her great newspaper beats, said, "For eight years in the 1920s Dorothy Thompson swept through Europe, a blue-eyed tornado. She went abroad unknown; she returned a famous journalist and the wife of Sinclair Lewis."

Lewis Gannett

Lewis Gannett, reviewing her most recent book, says, "There is something indomitable about Dorothy Thompson . . . she has a flaming faith that whatever is wrong can and must be set right, and at once."

How Dorothy Thompson Became An Expert on Foreign Affairs

Dorothy Thompson majored in English at Syracuse. She planned to teach, became a leader in the feminist movement on her campus in 1913. Instead of teaching after graduation, she was sent out as an upstate suffrage organizer.

After three years spent in advertising and publicity work, she sailed in 1920 for Europe, exact destination uncertain. On the boat she met a group of Zionists bound for a London conference. She persuaded International News to have her cover the conference.

Then she went to Ireland, talked to the Revolutionists, and got a bagful of interviews —including the last ever to come from the hunger striker Terrence McSweeney. But Fleet Street wasn't interested, so she turned out vignettes of English life and sold them to the London Star. Paris came next, and then Vienna.

The next three years were a succession of European journalistic exploits—the Polish revolt, the first Karlist putsch in Vienna, an uprising in Bulgaria . . . defying censorship, slipping through a double cordon (as a nurse) to scoop the world on an interview with Karl and Empress Zita, imprisoned in Count Esterhazy's castle.

The Philadelphia Public Ledger moved her to Berlin as head of its Central European bureau and there she met Sinclair Lewis. When anti-Socialist riots tore through Vienna, she and Lewis hopped a plane for Russia. After a trailer wedding trip through England, they came to the United States to become Vermont farm dwellers.

Before long, Dorothy Thompson began to appear in the Saturday Evening Post, writing on Peace, and on American Women. In the meantime she turned out a book on Russia, became a headliner on the lecture platform, the radio, in magazines, and the press. She became the first woman columnist - commentator in March, 1936, when her column "On the Record" began to run three times a week in the New York Herald Tribune. Today that column is read by more than five million families!

Mrs. William Brown Meloney

The editor of This Week, Mrs. William Brown Meloney, has said, "Of all the women in American life, the one best known and most feared by European politicians is Dorothy Thompson. She has the wit to see, the passion to learn, and the courage to speak."

Marjorie Shuler

Marjorie Shuler describes her as "a sounding board of world affairs for 15 years," and notes her "uncanny, powerful instinct for being where things happen."

Heywood Broun

Heywood Broun writes that Miss Thompson has "palpably captured the attention of America to a surprising degree."

Mrs. Roosevelt

Mrs. Roosevelt refers to Dorothy Thompson's column as "very able."

Hitler Must Receive Face-Saving Applause

New York, Sept. 6.—The tenor of dispatches from Europe in the last hours needs some careful analysis, because all important news from Europe today emanates from government sources and is presented with a view to creating a particular atmosphere and a particular impression.

The international situation is so appallingly dangerous and the positions, especially of Great Britain, so peculiarly complicated that this is inevitable.

Lord Runciman, officially representing Great Britain, is actually dealing with an insoluble problem, for he is dealing with a conflict between two conceptions of the state, society and international relations which are basically incompatible. In the long run these two conceptions will not be able to live on the same planet."

What the western democracies are attempting to do is to live and to survive from day to day and to avoid by any means possible a world conflagration in the belief that time and events are on their side. But this process also involves not giving away such essentials of their own survival that time and events may shift to the other side.

• • • •

I AM writing this column on the basis of very inadequate news, but it seems clear that Czechoslovakia is about to offer its final concessions to the Sudeten Germans and that they go very far indeed.

The impression created in the dispatches is that they represent practically capitaulation to Hitler's demands. It is stressed that they have conceded every single point in Konrad Henlein's eight-point program, declared to be "minimum" by Hitler, except the last point.

The impression is also created that Hitler and Henlein will accept the concessions as a victory. As the news looks at present—and everything one writes must be carefully qualified—we might expect that when he next speaks at Nuremberg Hitler will acclaim the liberation of the German minority, or in some other form claim victory.

• • • •

Now I suspect that this is the impression which the western democracies desire to create, because they are engaged in a very absurd, disheartening and dubious game: the game of saving Hitler's face before his own people.

They are engaged in marshaling applause for the German dictator, because they know that unless he can make concessions under applause, claiming victory and peace as his personal contribution, [illegible] and Europe and probably the rest of the world into a horrible war.

The western democracies know perfectly well that a war would destroy Hitler and Hitler's country, but it also might destroy 20,000,000 human beings and wreck every attempt of the democracies to preserve their own liberties.

In other words, the tactics of Great Britain, France and even Czechoslovakia are to humor the insane in order to prevent him, for the moment at least, from indulging in wholesale murder, while, at the same time, withholding from him the acquisition of too many new weapons with which at some later day he might break loose into an even more ghastly campaign of wholesale murder with greater hopes of success.

• • • •

NOW THE concessions which Czechoslovakia has made—according to the latest news—are indeed very great. But the seven points—all but one—of Henlein's and Hitler's demands are the points which the Czech government has been willing to negotiate about since the very beginning.

The eighth point is the one Hitler wanted most, for that contains the Sudeten German demand to the Reich to set up a Nazi state inside the Czech republic. If that point were gained, Czechoslovakia would be gone.

• • • •

IT MIGHT be recalled that in 1914, when the Austrian government sent its ultimatum to Serbia, there also was only one point which Serbia refused to accept, for that point conceded their national sovereignty, and the historians of the world have agreed that that demand was an impossible one, and have held Austria, and not Serbia, primarily responsible for the World War.

If a war should now occur as a result of the Czechs refusing to destroy their own democracy for the sake of the peace of other democracies—which would be not only quixotic but idiotic—then it will be perfectly clear where the guilt lies.

• • • •

FROM the very beginning the Czechoslovak republic has refused categorically only three things.

It insists that whatever autonomy is granted the German minority shall be within the framework of a federal, democratic constitution.

It has offered the German minority equality, but it has refused it a privileged position inside the republic from which to destroy the republic.

It has refused to abrogate the Franco-Czech-Soviet pact of mutual assistance against aggression, accepting the plan for a wider pact of collective security that would include Russia. Czechoslovakia would, of course, be highly pleased if such a pact would also include Germany.

The abrogation of the existing pact was not included in Henlein's demands and has not been conceded by the Czechs, according to any reports I have.

It was not demanded by Henlein in manifesto because it was obviously preposterous and because if he had won point eight he would have achieved it anyhow, by internal revolution.

But it is Hitler's objective to destroy that pact—and he would deliver Konrad Henlein's head on a charger tomorrow if by that he could achieve his aim.

• • • •

IF THE concessions are, in substance, as they seem to be now, on Tuesday afternoon, then the basic victory is so far with the Czechs, however it may be interpreted this week at Nuremberg. But "so far" must be underlined.

Actually, whatever is achieved can be only a temporary truce. Actually, the situation between Czechoslovakia and Germany is approximately what it was between Austria and Germany on the completion of the first Berchtesgaden agreement between Hitler and Schuschnigg in July, 1936, which also was hailed as peace, was abused openly by the Germans and resulted only a few months later in conquest. The important difference is the difference between the Czechs and the Austrians.

There is no peace except as it is based on the will and the final relinquishment of the intention of one state to destroy another, either by fomenting internal revolution or by conquest.

And there will be no such peace in Europe as long as the Third Reich exists with its present ideology and program.

The diplomatic machinations of the western democracies are only evidence of their faith that it is better that the Nazi ideology should perish of its own diseases—rather than be murdered by outside democracies, and that they are prepared to stretch every nerve to spare the world, including the German people, a catastrophe.

Two Voices Over Europe

IN THE LAST 36 hours we have heard two voices. Each of those voices was ominous. Each of those voices told the world an awful fact; namely, that unless something quite invisible in the picture at this moment occurs all of Europe will be plunged into war.

The first voice declared war. The second voice pleaded for peace. The first voice delivered an ultimatum. The second voice offered once again to take up the issue and to arbitrate it. The first voice shrieked and screamed to the accompaniment of a tom-tom of mechanized howls from a drilled mob—howls that seemed to come from the throats of 10,000 robots. The second voice had no accompaniment. A man stood alone and spoke.

• • • •

THE FIRST voice was very loud. The second voice was very quiet.

But the second voice was more ominous than the first.

For the first voice was unreason, and a vast cry of aggression, masking fear. And the second voice was reason, taking a last stand. It was a rather old voice, tired, confessing anxiety, confessing more, confessing horror. But it was calm, and it was sovereign.

• • • •

MEN OF SCIENCE and men of reason are responsible for the fact that this war—if there will be war—broke out between two voices heard all over the globe. For the radio, the very symbol of man's inventiveness, of the closeness of each part of the world to the other, of the desire of human beings to communicate with each other, of the intimate integration of western civilization across all national boundaries, in the vast kingdom of the air, carried them.

Every person who heard the two voices, the two speeches, felt his heart warmed by one and repulsed by the other. Everything that makes a human being conscious and sentient forced a choice between one voice or the other: between Hitler's voice and words, and Chamberlain's.

Only, some people did not hear both voices. Seventy-five million people in Germany, for instance, with very few exceptions, heard only one.

• • • •

THERE WAS A LINE in Hitler's speech which caught and held my attention. "No one has ever been able to reproach me with being a coward. I never was a coward. I have always been at the front with you all behind me. Even now I am leading and you are following as one nation . . ."

Why did you say that, Mr. Hitler? Certainly no one has ever reproached you with being a coward. Before you spoke, 10,000 people howled their cheers to Dr. Goebbels, who promised that 75,000,000 Germans would follow you anywhere you chose to lead them.

You are the nation's hero. You stand on a pinnacle of power that no man in this century and few men in history have ever achieved.

Nobody has called you a coward in five years. You have known only adulation, only adoration, only blind obedience, only trusting faith. Why did you raise that question?

• • • •

YOU RAISED IT because someone very near to you had whispered that you were a coward. Someone who sleeps with you and wakes with you. His name is Adolf. Adolf Hitler.

True, you brushed that voice aside. True, you shrieked to high heaven in an attempt to drown it out. But in that shriek was a horrid scream of fear. People didn't have to know what you were saying to know that. And even your words could not obliterate that tearing, corrosive, wild anxiety.

Because the voice of Adolf Hitler was saying to Adolf Hitler: You do not dare to tell the German people the truth! You must deliberately confuse the issue. You must pretend that the ultimatum of Berchtesgaden and the ultimatum of Godesberg are one and the same thing.

You must not let the German people know that you are not fighting to liberate the Sudeten Germans, who had been promised to you already, not only by the "criminal Benes" but by France, and by Great Britain, on their words of honor.

You must make the German people think that nowhere have just demands met a conciliatory spirit!

You must leave the German people—the puzzled, anxious, peace-desiring German people, who are hermetically sealed against information from the outside world—in the belief that they were about to embark on a little adventure, an isolated war!

• • • •

You knew, Mr. Hitler, that Russia was mobilizing, that Britain was mobilizing, that France was mobilizing. You knew that Poland was wavering, that Yugoslavia and Rumania had declared that they would support Czechoslovakia in the event

Hitler Faces Dilemma: Catastrophic War or Bitter Defeat

TODAY the world trembles on the brink of war, and when all is analyzed, everything boils down to the fact that a man and the clique around him in Nazi Germany have got themselves into a position where they can afford neither to make war nor to make peace. From victory to victory — remilitarization — fortification of the Rhineland — annexation of Austria—Hitler has been marching his way into catastrophe. Naziism started as a "movement," and it remains a movement—that is to say, its nature is that it must move. But the room in which it can now move safely has definitely reached its limits. Hitler must now either retreat or throw Germany and the world into catastrophe.

DOROTHY THOMPSON.

Let us not be deluded about any of the minor aspects of the issue. The woes of the Sudeten Germans, real or imagined, have little to do with it. Hitler is not moving to liberate the Germans in Upper Silesia, or the Polish corridor, and has openly washed his hands of the Germans in the Alte Adige (South Tyrol), whose nationality has been brutally exterminated. And he is celebrating his friendship with Hungary, whose German minority has been thoroughly and programatically Magyarized. The Sudeten German issue is only incidental to the question of whether or not Germany shall dominate Europe and the world. The Czechoslovakian democratic republic stands in the way of Germany's desired expansion to the East. Therefore, Czechoslovakia must be cut loose from her alliances in order to be destroyed, and so far no proposal of a compromise, however generous, is acceptable to Hitler, if it permits Czechoslovakia to survive as anything except a vassal state.

It is grotesque to talk about "liberating" the Sudeten Germans, who now enjoy more legal, spiritual, intellectual and economic freedom than they would ever have in the Third Reich, and more than is enjoyed by any other minorities in Europe. What has been offered them in the latest proposals of cantonization places them on exact equality with the position of the French and Italian minorities in Switzerland. Certainly, no one considers the citizens of Geneva and Lausanne as suffering from oppression! Czechoslovakia is insisting on nothing except her continued existence as a sovereign state and the maintenance of civil liberties and democratic institutions for all her nationalities alike, even if they do not want them.

• • • •

PEACE OR WAR is at this moment in the hands of one man. But the question is not whether Hitler wants war, whether his mind is bellicose for peace. The question is whether he is not grotesquely misappraising the international situation, and, second, whether he has not now reached a point from which he cannot retreat even if he wants to do so.

• • • •

ADOLF HITLER does not speak or read a single word of a foreign language, and up to his state visit to Mussolini, he was never outside Germany. But he has a definite world picture of his own. His picture includes a belief in the rottenness, weakness and indecision of the democracies, the impotence of Russia, the degeneration of France, the disinterestedness of England, and the total isolationism of the United States. The most disturbing piece of news in the last few weeks is the report that Joachim von Ribbentrop, the German foreign minister, heads the so-called war front. Mr. Ribbentrop is the man who gathers all the information which the diplomatic service provides, and it would forebode the worst if his views finaly determine Hitler's decision, because he is apparently convinced that no great power will interfere if there is an attack in or against Czechoslovakia.

As a matter of fact, Germany is facing, on this issue, the most overwhelming coalition of powers against her that the world has ever seen. France will fight to save Czech independence, because otherwise the last chapter of the history of France as a great power will be finished. Britain will fight because she is committed by treaty and vital self-interest to defend France. Russia will fight on both ideological and nationalist grounds. The Little Entente powers have just confirmed—in the meeting in Bled last month—their solidarity against Hungarian expansion, so that if Hungary should join Germany in an attack on Czechoslovakia she would be submerged by invading armies from three sides. Poland, while very anxious not to stick out her neck until the great powers act, could only, in a war, be on the same side as Britain. Poland has only the choice of being an ally of the Western powers, or a battleground, between Germany and Russia. As for Italy—the German General Staff cannot have forgotten 1914.

And the United States? Does Germany doubt that the resources of this country, moral and economic, will be at the disposal of the Western democracies if they are engaged in a titanic struggle? The principle of freedom of the seas, which between 1914 and 1916 almost involved us in war with Britain, has been abandoned, and a British blockade of Germany would become effective from the first outbreak of war! Both President Roosevelt and Cordell Hull have been outspoken enough so that even the people in Berlin must have some inkling of how things stand.

• • • •

NOW, THERE are people in Germany, responsible people, in the foreign office, in the arts, and in industry, who know all this. But whether their moderating counsels will prevail with Adolf Hitler is the question on which hangs the world's peace. But is Hitler still free in his decision? For five years the German nation has been organized and geared up to a tension which has reached the breaking point. For months the Sudeten Germans have been told that "The Day" has arrived. The authority of the regime suffered a severe setback in May, when Czechoslovakia mobilized. The economic strain has become almost unbearable. The pessimism of business is reflected in the recent collapse of the Berlin stock market. The craziness of the Nazi system is demonstrated by the construction mania which is tearing down and rebuilding huge areas of German cities, while the people hunger and contemplate a war. And the recent mobilization has at last brought home to the people the danger of the international situation. Every disinterested report from Germany during the last few weeks indicates a state of neurosis among the people.

The stage seems to be set for an explosion. For Hitler has lived for five years exclusively on success and prestige, and the world trembles to know whether he can retreat and still maintain himself and the Nazi state.

Where We Stand

IN view of the situation in Europe, it might be well to review our own position in the event of a major European conflict. Perhaps the simplest way to do so is to compare it with 1914.

First of all, this country passionately desires to keep out of any war, and has engaged in numerous investigations and framed legislation with a view to preventing our participation in one.

Public opinion is overwhelmingly antiwar, and various polls show that a large proportion of people do not think we ought to fight under any circumstances unless invaded.

Some of these polls also show, however, that a very considerable percentage of those who vote against war think that if there is a major conflict, we shall not avoid being drawn into it.

Certainly nobody in the United States today thinks of sending an expeditionary force to Europe, and nobody in a responsible position in any European country either desires or expects us to.

But it is equally certain that the American position toward Europe is much clearer and more uniform than it was between 1914 and 1916.

There is, first of all, our changed position with regard to neutrality. In 1914 the basis of our neutrality policy was the historic doctrine of "freedom of the seas."

That simply meant that we claimed the right, as neutrals, to trade with anybody, neutrals or belligerents. Under this doctrine we attempted to run the British blockade of Germany, and in the first two years of the war we had serious conflicts with Great Britain, who, of course, attempted to prevent us from rendering impotent her most important weapon against the enemy.

Nazi Germany is almost completely isolated from American sympathy. A recent Gallup poll of considerable significance indicated that 65 per cent of Americans would, in a world war, sympathize with the western democracies, 32 per cent would be indifferent, and only 3 per cent would desire to see Germany or Italy win.

There are also much more realistic reasons for this distribution of sympathy than there were in 1914.

Although to a considerable extent the opposition to Germany and Italy is ideological and sentimental, we are actually—as we were not in 1914—in an open clash with German theory and practice in the economic field.

Secretary Hull's trade policies, which are extremely clear, consistent and liberal, are diametrically opposite to the Nazi trade system, which conflicts with us in South American markets and elsewhere all over the world.

The newest German deal whereby the products of oil fields expropriated from Americans and Britons is to go to Germany in return for German goods is only one example of how this policy has worked.

We have serious grounds of self-interest for resenting the German economic policy whereby Germany lives as a parasite on the free economies of the rest of the world, and we are paying by millions of unemployed for the fact that the world has been kept in political and economic unrest for the last five years.

We have, in our neutrality legislation, definitely abandoned this doctrine.

The new and legal theory is that we should keep out of war by keeping out of danger. But it is left to the discretion of the President to decide to what extent most of the neutrality act should be applied.

The sale of arms to both sides must be abandoned, providing it is decided that a state of war exists, but the Chinese-Japanese conflict indicates that when public opinion has more sympathy with one side than the other even this provision can be suspended by simply not recognizing that there is a war.

And apart from the sale of arms everything is discretionary, and at most the President is empowered to apply the cash-and-carry clause, which simply means that we sell only to those who can pay and cart off the goods.

Under the terms of the law, therefore, we could, and almost certainly would, cease immediately to have intercourse with Germany in case of a war between that country and the Western powers.

We would cease because Britain still controls the seas, and we would not attempt to run the blockade with our own ships, and because, even if she could carry, Germany has not the cash with which to buy nor any appreciable amount of American securities that could be mobilized to pay for American goods.

Although Mr. Hitler stated in his proclamation to the party congress at Nuremberg on Monday that Germany was capable of surviving a blockade, this opinion is not shared by official German economic and military publications.

The economic situation of Germany in case of war is admirably reviewed this month by William Woodside in "Harper's Magazine" in an article which takes all its information from German sources.

The "Deutscher Volkswirt," organ of Dr. Schacht; the "Militarisches Wochenblatt," the official publication of the army; and the "Frankfurter Zeitung" have warned repeatedly in the last few months that Germany is incapable of surviving a blockade.

• • • •

ON THE other hand, Great Britain and France have probably $10,000,000,000 worth of gold and American securities that could and would be immediately mobilized and utilized in this country.

Although the Johnson act forbids credits to nations in default to us—and that includes nearly everybody—it would play no role for at least a year.

In 1914 it took approximately eight months before the first substantial orders for war materials were placed in America. Then people did not believe that the war would last long.

Now plans are ready and orders would be placed immediately and the cash and securities available would be sufficient to finance all transportable purchases for fully a year.

Leaving all questions of sympathy aside, it would be difficult for any government to refuse orders which would, however temporarily, solve the problems of the American farmer, industrialist and worker.

• • • •

BUT QUESTIONS of sympathy cannot be ignored, and in this respect the situation is very different from what it was in 1914.

From 1914 to 1916, and certainly up to the sinking of the Lusitania, there was a very strong pro-German sympathy in The United States, fostered by our sizable population of German blood, by an enormous respect for German culture which had been strongly represented in the universities for a generation and, incidentally, supported by many influential Americans of German-Jewish origin.

A great many Americans who had no ties with Germany entertained grave and justified doubts as to the injustice of the German cause.

Prewar Germany was, in the eyes of hundreds of thousands of Americans, a great civilization, a part of the western Christian world, and, although not a parliamentary state in the stricter sense of the word, a state in which there were legitimate government, independent courts, free speech and free science and art—an intellectual society which was part of the common Western civilization.

• • • •

FINALLY, and very importantly, the opposition to the Fascist states is strongest today in the very circle which in 1914-16 were most pacifist—in the ranks of the Left.

If, then, war should break out in Europe there is every indication that the full moral and economic support of the United States would go immediately to the western democracies.

The neutrality policy is on their side; national self-interest is on their side; financial and industrial interests are on their side, and the masses are on their side.

All of which seem excellent reasons why the Fascist countries would do exceedingly well not to risk a major war.

A major war would be very serious for the western democracies.
